PREFATORY NOTE.

THE Editor was desirous that the important publication of which this forms the first volume should be published in a complete form, and not in separate volumes, for the reason that, considering the great value of the Chronicle, the questions so often discussed regarding the compilers and the sources from which the work was compiled, and the relation to each other of the MSS. from which the text has been formed, it seemed necessary that these subjects should be dealt with in an Introductory Essay. But it would be obviously impossible to write an Introduction of the nature required before the whole work was in print. The Council of the Royal Academy, under whose direction the publication of the work has been placed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, having ordered the immediate publication of this volume, the Editor submitted respectfully to their directions. The Introduction must therefore appear in the last volume of the work—in that, namely, containing the Appendices and Index.

huaral dechon, which Colgan not very closely renders, "eximium Diaconum," ib. p. 123a.

<sup>2</sup> Celestinus.—The writers in the Book of Armagh note him as "quadragesimus quintus a sancto Petro apostolo," fol. 2aa, 16aa. But Prosper, Idatius, and Marcellinus, whom these ann. profess to follow, have xli. Sixtus, his successor, is set down next year as xlii.

<sup>4</sup> Might believe.—Prosper's in Christum credentes has, from Ussher down, been generally understood as implying that there existed at the time in Ireland a number of acephalous Christians. Muirchu, who, writing about 690, says of Palladius that he had been ordained and sent "ad hanc insulam sub brumali rigore possitam convertendam" (Bk. Arm., fo. 2aa), or "ad doctrinam Scottorum" (ib.

ANNALS OF ULSTER.

JESUS,

KALENDs of January. In the year 431 from the [431.] Incarnation of the Lord, Palladius,<sup>1</sup> ordained by Celestinus,<sup>2</sup> bishop of the City of Rome, is sent, in the consulship of Etius and Valerius,<sup>3</sup> into Ireland, first bishop to the Scots, that they might believe<sup>4</sup> in Christ; in the 8th year of Theodosius.<sup>5</sup>

16aa). Nennius comes next, about half a century after the Book of Armagh was written, and he, drawing as he says, "de historiis Scottorum licet inimicorum," expressly states "ad Scottos in Christum convertendos" (p. 41). Probus uses language similar to that of Muirchu (Tr. Th. 48b). The Tripart. Life, the substance of which can be proved to be older than 800, says, "do ppaicept do Goideluibh, 'to instruct the Gaeidhil'." So Vit. Sec. in Colgan, Tr. Th., 13b; Vit. Tert. (ib. 23a); Vit. Quart. (ib. 38b); Jocelin (ib. 70a). Ussher's Irish Life had what his interpreter renders "ad prædicandum Hibernis"; while his Latin Tripart. Life had "ad Scottos convertendos ad Christum" (Wks., vi. 368). Even for the wording of the present text, which is so rude, there is a counterpart in the Annals of Inisfallen at 431, "Palladius ad Scottos a Caelestino, urbis Romae episcopo, ordinatus, primus mittitur in Hiberniam, ut Christum credere potuissent." This and the text would seem to imply that the Irish had the offer of conversion, but refused it. Prosper closed his chronicle in 455, but in a work which is peculiarly important as having been written in 433, i.e. 2 years after Palladius' arrival, he says of Caelestine, "Ordinato Scotis episcopo, dum Romanam insulam (i.e. Britanniam) studet servare Catholicam, fecit etiam barbaram Christianam" Contra Casianum, c. 20 (Opp. 209a). Innes reconciles the two statements of Prosper to his own satisfaction (Hist., p. 55); but Sir James Ware, more in accordance with Irish writers, says "Et ad Prosperi ipsa verba, Scotos in Christum credentes, quod attinet, ea fortasse referenda sunt ad tempus quo Prosper Chronicon suum scripsit, quando nempe longe maxima pars Hiberniæ ad Christi fidem, S. Patricii prædicatione et operâ suâ fuit conversa" (S. Patr. Opusc. p. 107).

is that which these Annals adopt, as did Beda, in Chron., and H.E., i., 13. So also the Chron. Scot.; Ann. Inisf.; Leab. Brec.; Vit. Tripart., and Marianus Scotus. Tirechan states, "xiii. anno Teothosii," but 30+24 would be according to the earlier computations, so that his xiii. is evidently a clerical error for viii. Baronius takes exception to the present date, and observes at A.C. 429, vii., "ex Prospero corrigendum esse Bedam"; upon which Smith well observes, "non ex Prospero Beda, sed ex Beda Baronius corrigendus est" (Beda, i., 13, p. 51). See Pagi, Critica, ii., 214b, n., xi.

<sup>5</sup> Xistus.—Over this name is written, in another hand Celestine, which is an error. Celestine died 13 July, 432, and Sixtus iii. was consecrated eleven days afterwards. In the chronicles of Prosper, Idatius, and Marcellinus, Sixtus is set down as 42nd Bishop of Rome.

Chronicles.—This is a very slo-

only entry; the chronological order of the writers is inverted, and Beda says nothing on the subject. Marcellinus has—"Valerio et Aetio coss. (i.e. 432), Romanæ ecclesiæ Xystus xlii. episcopus ordinatus, vixit annis viii."

<sup>7</sup> Laegaire, son of Niall.—O'Flaherty makes the 4th of Laeghaire to synchronize with 432; therefore 428 + 35, the length of his reign, makes 463, the correct date of his death. Ann. Inisfall., and the ancient authorities cited by Petrie from Leabhar Breac, place Patrick's arrival in the 4th of Laeghaire (Tara, 77, 79); so also the F. Mast. Nennius says, "In quinto anno Loygare regis exorsus est prædicare fidem Christi" (p. 44). But though Ann. Inisf. here assign the 4th, further on they have a stray sentence, which contradicts this—"Patricius vero xiii. vel ut alii dicunt xiiii. anno ejusdem venit ad Scotos Patricius." And in the present entry xiiii. is written al. man. over xu. The addition therefore of 10 to the regnal year of Laeghaire brings us down to 443, the date at which

Todd has arrived from independent considerations, S. Patr. 392-399

Beginning of the world.—The whole of this chronological paragraph is added by another hand, which subsequently appears in similar additions.

<sup>9</sup> Prey.—The Irish bpat or bpat seems to be cognate to the Latin praeda. From bpat comes the adjective bpatach "thievish," the noun bpatairg, a "thief," and the name mac bpatairg, now Brady. At 820 infra, we find bpat in the form ppat.

Also Thorpe's Lappenberg, vol. i., 62, 63. The Irish invasion here recorded may have been a sequel to their defeat in Britain. These annals assign their permanent arrival in England to 464; and they add a second descent on Ireland at 471 infra. The authorities, followed by the Books of Lecan and Ballymote, represent the wife of Eochaidh Muighmedhoin, Cairenn Casdubh ("curly black"), mother of Niall ix. Host., as daughter of a king of the Saxons. Which is adopted by O'Flaherty, Ogyg. 376, 393. Indorb Find, also, wife of Eoghan, son of Niall, is said to have been daughter of a Saxon prince. Mac Firbis, however, Geneal. MS., p. 108, contends that the first named woman was more likely to have been Pictish or North British. It is curious that the B. of Armagh, referring to the death of Munissa, a disciple of St. Patrick, whom some of his Lives style Britonissa, speaks "de morte Moneisen Saxonissæ" (fol. 20 ab).

published his Collator, and in 455 he completed his Chronicon, which is a very important record. Cyril, patriarch of Alexandria, presided at the third General Council, in 431, and died in 444. The mention of his name here was probably suggested by Isidore, who says, in his Chronicon, "Hoc tempore Cyrillus Alexandriae episcopus, insignis est habitus." Opp. vii. 101. The best edition of his works is that by Jo. Aubertus, 6 tom. (in 7 voll.), fol. Paris, 1638. Gibbon accuses him of tyranny, murder, and a long list of crimes and infirmities. Decline, ch. 47. With such a wide margin as the claruere of these three writers it was absurd to repeat the entry the year following.

<sup>4</sup> Finnbarr.—The F. Mast. borrow this entry, changing the descent to mac Ua Bairdene, and adding œcc, 'died'; but they give no clue to his lineage or history. O'Donovan supposed that Ua Baird, which appears in St. Patrick's kindred, might be intended. It is more likely, however, that the reference is to some one maccu Bairdene, 'of the sons of Bairdene,' such as the Dal Bairdine of Uladh, whom Tighern. notices at 628, these Annals at 627, and the F. Mast. at 623. Colgan's conjecture of Firtnanus, Tr. Thaum. 268a, is inadmissible.

<sup>5</sup> Senchus Mor.—"Chronicon Magnum scriptum est." O'Connor, R. H. SS. iv. 1. It was a body of laws, the first materials of which were compiled by St. Patrick and some of his disciples; and which grew by subsequent accretions till it attained its present voluminous dimensions. The Senchur Mór, occupying 4 vols. of the intended series of the Ancient Laws of Ireland, was published in the years 1865, 1869, 1873–79, edited by Professors Hancock, O'Mahony, and Richey, from the texts and translations of the late Dr. O'Donovan and Professor O'Curry. In the learned Prefaces to these important volumes full information is given of the code.

<sup>1</sup> Secundus. — Recte Secundinus. Called Sechnall by the Irish, and from him domnach Sechnall, now Dunshaughlin, in the S.E. of Meath, derives its name. Born in 374, which is the alleged year of St. Patrick's birth, who was his uncle, and in honour of whom he composed the hymn Audite omnes. See Ussher, Wks. vi. 383, 384, 401, 518; Colgan, Tr. Thaum., 226b; Todd, Lib. Hymnor. 7-42. His death is entered below at 447.

Auxilius.—Brother of Secundinus, sixth son of Restitut Ua mBaird, and, with Iserninus, ordained as a coadjutor of St. Patrick. In Irish his name assumes the form of Ausaille or Usaille. Cill-Ausaille, now Killashee, in co. Kildare is called from him, and he is also patron of Cill Ua mBaird, now Killymard, near Donegal, in the county of the same name. His death is entered at 459 infra.

instances called eppcop Fīth, one of which is as a gloss upon his name, in the following passage "Patricius et Iserninus (i. eppcop Fīth) cum Germano fuerunt in Olsiodra civitate. Germanus vero Isernino dixit ut praedicare in Hiberniam veniret, atque promptus fuit oboedire, etiam in quamcumque partem mitteretur nisi in Hiberniam. Germanus dixit Patricio, et tu, an oboediens eris? Patricius dixit, Fiat sicut vis. Germanus dixit, Hoc inter uos erit; et non potuerit Iserninus in Hiberniam non transire. Patricius venit in Hiberniam. Iserninus vero missus est in aliam regionem: sed ventus contrarius detulit illum in dexteram [i.e. australem] partem Hiberniæ," (fol. 18 aa); probably Magh Itha, or the barony of Forth, on the south coast of the county of Wexford. Ann. Inisfall at 440, say, "Secundinus et Auxiliarius, et Iserninus mittuntur in auxilium Patricii, nec tamen tenuerunt apostolatam, nisi Patricius solus." So also Chron. Scot. 438. This joint action appears in the titles of some collections of Irish Canons, and strikes the eye in the

Kal. Jan. (Mond., m. 5). A.D. 440 (4644). The decease [440.]
of Xistus,<sup>5</sup> bishop of the church of Rome, who lived 8 years and 27 days in the episcopate of the church of Rome, as Beda, in his chronicle, relates. Some books say that Maine son of Niall<sup>6</sup> perished in this year. [Saint Au-age, and the 40th year of his episcopate. Augustin earliest synodicals which appear in Sir Henry Spelman's, and Wilkins' great collections of British Councils. For the entry of the death of Iserninus, see at 468 infra.

<sup>5</sup> Xistus.—Sixtus iii. In the chronicles of Prosper, Idatius, and Marcellinus, he is reckoned 42nd Bishop of the church of Rome; as also in these annals, at 432. His tenure of 8 years and 19 days, as calculated by Anastasius, is the correct period. These annals add 8 days, and also err in citing Beda as the authority, for he makes no mention, in either his Chronicle or History, of the pontificate of this Sixtus.

<sup>6</sup> Maine, son of Niall.—Fourth son of Niall ix. Host. and one of the four brothers, whose posterity constituted the Southern Hy Neill. His descendants, who occupied Teathbha or Tefia, wererepresented by O'Caharny or Fox, Magawley, O'Brien, O'Daly, &c. in the present counties of Longford and Westmeath, see Keating, p. 372; Ogyg. p. 401. The Tripart. Life (ii. 26) states that Patrick, when he visited south Tefia, converted and baptized this Maine; after which he founded the church of Ardachadh (Ardagh); but that Maine, on account of a deception which he practised, incurred the saint's severe displeasure. Colgan, Trias Thaum., 132b.

<sup>7</sup> St. Augustin.—Bishop of Hippo. Possidius, in his Life, says (cap. 31), "vixit annis LXXVI. in clericatu autem vel episcopatu annis ferme xl." Beda has the same words, Chron. p. 26; and Marianus Scotus, Chron. 431. He was ordained priest in 391, and bishop in December, 395. He died v. Kl. Sept. (Aug. 28), A.D. 430. The insertion in the text is, therefore, ten years too late. See Tillemont, Memoires, tom. xiii. p. 943; and the Latin version of the substance of his admirable memoir, which was made by Dom Hugues Vaillant and Dom Jacques du Frische, members of the congregation of St. Maur, in the exhaustive Vita which forms the first portion of the last volume of the Benedictine St. Augustin, cols. 102, 141, 491.

Catholic faith.—Ann. Inisfal. at 442, have "Probatio sancti Patricii in fide Catholica." Ann. Clonmac- nois, at 427, say "Pope Leo was ordained the 46th or 47th to succede; by whom St. Patrick was approved in the Catholique Religion, and by the rest of the Popes of Rome that succeeded in his time, and then after flourished in the heate of Christian Religion in this Land."

provincia. In 592 Pope Gregory designates Italy a provincia; and half a century later John, pope-elect, writing to the Irish prelates speaks of Ireland as "provincia vestra" (Beda, H. E., ii. 19). The use of the term provincia at that date forbids the limitation of it to the Irish coigearð or province, as long subsequently adopted in ecclesiastical language. See Reeves, Adamnan, p. 451. Sicily was the first recipient of the designation provincia.

<sup>4</sup> Ard-Macha was founded.—In the Book of Armagh is the following curious notice concerning Trim: "ædificavit æclessiam cum illis xxv. anno antequam fundata esset æclessia Altimachæ (fol. 16ba); which Ussher reads "vigesimo secundo" (Wks., vi. 414). His Tripart. Vit. had xxv.; so also the Bodleian Tripart. Life, Colgan's copy (Tr. Th., p. 129a); but the Brit. Mus. copy has xxii. See Colgan's note, p. 100 (recte 110) b, n. 57. The F. Mast. place the founding of Trim at 432, and of Armagh at 457. See Colgan, Tr. Thaum., 290b; Ussher, Wks., vi., 414, 570 (an. 445); Lanigan, i., 312, 315, 317; Todd, St. Patrick, 260, 268–480.

<sup>5</sup> Building of Rome.—Foundation of Rome (according to Polybius), 751, B.C., which + 444 = 1195. See Ussher, Wks., vi., 414; Colgan, Tr. Th., 110b, n. 57. Todd errs in saying, “The Dublin MS. of these Annals seems to read 1197” (p. 469); it is plainly 1194. Ussher, who owned the MS, so read it, and there can be no uncertainty about the reading, for a later hand has entered in the margin opposite, in Arabic numerals, 1194.

seem that that chronicle, as well as this, borrowed from some authority which used a different computation. Supposing it to be correct, and that the arrival of Patrick occurred in the 15th of Laeghaire, it would almost coincide with the death of Sen Patrick, and would upset the chronology of these Annals. We must, therefore, conclude that the present entry is 18 years too late. Regarding Dathi’s death, see Keating, 394; Ogyg., 413; and above all O’Donov. in Hy Fiachrach, 17–27, 345, 346. The F. Mast., at 449, enter, instead, the death of his brother Amhalgaidh.

Dalaradian auxiliaries in the service of the king of Munster, and mainly instrumental in the acquisition of Femhin. See note on Cruithne at an. 573 infra. Reeves, Eccl. Antiqq. 337, 349, 353, and Adamnan, 93, 94. The Chron. Scot. an. 445, makes Colboth son of Niall.

bishops are entered in these annals at the years 447, 459, 468.

regnavit annis xxvii. De hoc vide gl. in Cle., i.e., de Magistris in verbo Bononiensi." The reference is to the Corpus Juris Canonici, in the Clementinæ, lib. v., tit. i. c. 5, where it is stated, "Hoc constat quod Bononia habuit privilegia studii a Theodosio: de minore tamen intelligo, qui regnare cepit (prout ex chronicis quas veriores puto, percipio) anno Domini ccccxxxv., et regnavit annis xxvii. (xxvi. in some copies). Quo tamen anno sui imperii hec concesserit, non percipio: currentibus autem cccclii. successit Martianus." Tom. iii., col. 286.

<sup>1</sup> The Lord's Passover.—The Sunday letter of this year was G, and the 24th of April fell upon Tuesday; from which some might suppose that the Irish at this period were Quarta-decimans, i.e., observing Easter not on the Sunday which followed the 14th after the vernal equinox, but on the 14th itself, irrespectively of the day on which it fell. Both A and B mark this year in the margin as bis-sextile; but it is 452 that was really so; and its Sunday letter is FE, the 24th of April falling upon Sunday. But there can be little doubt that the present entry is misplaced, and properly belongs to 455, in which year Easter was kept on the 24th of April by the Church of Alexandria, but on the 17th by some of the Latins, who followed the computation of Victorius. Prosper, in the closing paragraph of his Chronicle, Valentiniano, viii. et Anthemio Coss. (i.e., an. 455), writes: "Eodem anno Pascha Dominicum die viii. Kalendas Maii celebratum est, pertinaci intentione Alexandrini Episcopi, cui omnes Orientales consentiendum putaverunt: quamvis sanctus Papa

Leo XV. Kalendas Maii potius observandum protestaretur." Opp p. 438. In this year Leo the Great wrote to the Emperor Marcian to state that "eundem diem venerabilis Festi omnibus Occidentalium partium sacerdotibus intimasse, quem Alexandrini Episcopi declaravit instructio, id est, ut anno presenti viii. Kalendas Maii Pascha celebretur, omissis omnibus scrupulis propter studium unitatis et pacis." Leo referred the question in 451 to the best informed authorities, especially Paschasinus of Lilybæum, and further commissioned Julianus, when proceeding to the Council of Chalcedon, to consult the most eminent fathers present on the subject, in order to avoid all future uncertainty. Pagi, ii., an. 453. The Ann. Clonmac. give a curious turn: "The Resurrection of Our Lord was celebrated the Eight of Kalends of May by the Pelagian heresie"! See Labbé, Concordia Chronol., Pt. i., pp. 105, 108. The Ann. Inisfal. are very exact in assigning to the year 455 "Pascha in viii. Kal. Maii." These annals, however, are four years behind. Marianus Scotus says "Hoc anno, i.e., 455 incarnationis (iuxta Dionysium) Pascha Dominicum 8 die Calendis Maii recte celebratum est, ordinatione sancti Theophili: quod sanctus Leo Papa 15 Calend. Maii potius observandum protestatur."

<sup>6</sup> Defeat in battle.—Literally 'battle-breach.' See Hennessy, Chron. Scot., p. 352a. Interfectio is the equivalent in the preceding year. The old English translation makes the word a proper name, "the battle called Cathroine," but the place is not recorded. The F. Mast., at 453, add mórp and it is properly rendered by O'Don. 'a great defeat.' Ann Inisfal., at 456, curtly say rairtoibe lagen, 'cutting off of Leinstermen.' rairtoibe = rairtoibe the older form. The battle was probably fought in Leinster, and concerning the Borumha or 'Cow-tribute,' see at 458 infra.

<sup>7</sup> Feast of Temhair.—In A and B petp is given as the Irish word for cena, and is the only word employed in the entry at 461 infra. O'Flaherty calls it "Temorensis comitia" (Ogyg., 213). Similar celebrations used to be held at Tailte (Teltown), and Uisnech (Ushnagh); but concerning this, which was the imperial one, see Keating, p. 414, and especially Petrie, Tara, 31, 32, 82–85, who asserts that this was the only convention of Tara held by Laeghaire during his reign (p. 82).

<sup>1</sup> Victorius.—Or Victorinus, a native of Limoges in Aquitaine, whom Genadius, Vir. Illustr., c. 88, styles "Calculator scripturarum," flourished in 457. In that year he composed a new Paschal Canon, at the instance of Pope Leo, who, to prevent a recurrence of the controversy which arose in 455, between the Eastern and Western Churches, about the proper Sunday for the celebration of Easter, commissioned Hilary, his Archdeacon, to employ a competent person for the purpose. He framed a cycle of 532 years, i.e.,  $28 \times 19$ , the product of the solar and lunar cycles, commencing from A.D. 28, the computed year of the Passion, or A.M. 5229. Cummian, in his Paschal epistle (A.D. 634) mentions this cycle. Ussher, Wks., iv., 440. And the anonymous Irish writer of the tract De Mirabilibus Sac. Scripturæ reckons by it. See Pagi, Critica, ii., 370b, 582a, 626a; O'Connor, Rer. Hib. SS., ii., 112; Tillemont's Memoires, xv., 770. Ann. Inisfal., in the parallel entry (an. 458) have "Victorius scripsit ciclum Pascha."

<sup>2</sup> Enna, son of Cathboth.—O'Connor conjectures that this was Enna of Aran (ii., pt. 1, p. 109), but unhappily, for that saint was son of Conall derg, and was alive in 530. The present entry is found in An. Inisfal. (an. 459); An. Buell. (an. 462); Chron. Scot. (an. 455); F. Mast. (an. 456); but none of them help to identify the subject of it. In the B. of Armagh mention is made of the seven sons of Cathbadh, a Leinster clan, who with Bishop Isserninus were expelled by Enna Cennsalach (fol. 18aa).

is the true date. See *L'Art de Vérif.
les Dates*, p. 180. Instead of annis sex the al. man. in A. and B. have iiii.<sup>or</sup> which is a manifest error.

too late. The fourth General Council, held at Chalcedon, to condemn the Eutychian heresy, sat from October 8th till November, 451. Concilia, t.
iv., cols. 761–2074; Baronius, t. viii.,
p. 87; L'Art de Vérifier les Dates, p.
180; Ann. Inisfal., 452.

Old Patrick.—Distinguished by the epithet Sen or 'Old,' from Patrick the Apostle of Ireland, who was somewhat his junior. The acts of the two are so interwoven that it is very difficult to resolve them. The present entry, however, affords some help. Nennius says: "A nativitate Domini usque ad adventum Patricii ad Scotos ccccv. anni sunt. A morte Patricii usque ad obitum sanctæ Brigidæ ix. anni," which numbers are utterly inapplicable to the Patrick of 432 and 493. Gir. Cambr. dates Patrick's death, "ab incarnatione Domini cccclviii."; this he learned in Ireland; but it cannot be strained to suit the Apostle. Allowing, however, for the slow year of these Annals, it is identical with the date in the text. Again, three of the Armagh lists (published by Todd, St. Patrick, 174, 181) make Sen Patraic third abbot, while these annals reckon Iarlath his successor once removed, the third; therefore they ignore the first two, namely Patrick and Sechnall, and leave to Sen Patraic, the first place. Ussher saw that two names should be expunged (Wks. vi., 437), but he erred in making Sen Patraic one of them. In two of these lists Sen Patraic is allowed an incumbency of ten years, which deducted from 457, gives 447 as his inception, within three years of the founding of Armagh, which event is most probably to be referred to him, not to the Apostle; and further it is equally probable that the encomiums bestowed upon Patrick the Bishop, at the years 441 and 443, belong to the earlier ecclesiastic. His successor, Bishop Benignus, died in 467, which allows the exact ten years assigned to Sen Patraic in the lists. So far the 'Old Patrick, champion of battle, Loveable tutor of our Sage.'

Upon which the Irish annotator writes "Old Patrick, of Ros Dela in Magh Locha: sed verius est that he may be in Glastonbury of the Gael, in the south of Saxonland (for Scoti formerly used to dwell there in pilgrimage). But his relics are in the tomb of Sen Patrick in Ard Macha." Felire, pp. cxxv., cxxxiii. At 461, infra, his death is again recorded, but simply as Patricius.

<sup>2</sup> Cow-tribute.—ḃoρama; which O'Flaherty renders Boaria.—Ogyg., 305. Said to have been first imposed on the Leinstermen by Tuathal Teachtmair, circ. A.D. 130. After proving a source of violent contention for a long series of years between the chiefs of Ulster and of Leinster, it was abandoned by Finnachta Fledach, about the year 680. There is a full

Kal. Jan. (Frid., m. 23.) A.D. 460 (4664). Pope Leo [460.]
died. He occupied the chair of Peter in the Church of Rome 21 (or 24) years, 1 month, and 13 days, as Bede reckons in his chronicle.

Kal. Jan. (Sund., m. 4.) A.D. 461 (4665). Hilary<sup>4</sup> [461.]
was made 44th bishop<sup>5</sup> of the church of Rome, and lived 6 years.<sup>6</sup> Here some record the repose of Patrick.
Laeghaire, son of Niall, lived after the Feast of Tara 7 years, and 7 months, and 7 days. The battle of Athdara was gained over Laeghaire, by the Leinstermen, of whom Crimthann<sup>7</sup> was then commander.

His festival is August 27th, at which day his name occurs, in the Mart.

now Killashee. He is not noticed by the Felire. Colgan has collected the little that is known of him at 19th March in Actt. SS., pp. 657-659.

there is written in a very old Irish hand in MS. A., Uel hoc anno Leo obut, ("or in this year Leo died"). The death of Pope Leo

(who died on Nov. 4, A.D. 461), is entered under the previous year.

in A., in a very old hand. In B. it appears in the hand of the transcriber of that MS. See under 458. The Crimthann here referred to was the son of Enna Ceinnselach, whom he succeeded as king of S.E. Leinster, about the year 444. His residence was at Rathvilly, in the N.E. of the present county of Carlow, which gives name to a parish and barony. In the Irish notes in the Book of Armagh (fol. 18aa), St. Patrick is stated to have visited Crimthann at Rathvilly:

Patrick) went after that to Crimthan son of Enda Ceinnselach, and he believed at Rath-bilich." Crimthan was a strenuous assertor of Lagenian independence, and won many battles in defence thereof, which are enumerated by Dubtach Ua Lugair, in his eulogistic poems on the triumphs of Crimthan, some of which have been published, from the Book of Leinster, by O'Curry (Lectures, §c., pp. 484-494).

Laeghaire's death in Leb. na hUidre, 118b. The Four Masters (458) say that the place of Laeghaire's death was in Ui-Faelain, i.e. the northern part of the co. Kildare. In the Borama Tract (Book of Leinster, 299b), it is stated that Laeghaire was killed by the elements (earth, sun, and wind), by which he had pledged himself two and a half years before (supra, 458), not again to exact the tribute called borama (or "cow tribute"). But he came, and seized cows at Sidh-Nechtain (Carbury Hill, co. Kildare, at the foot of which is the source of the River Boyne), and met his fate on the side of Caiss, between the two hills called Eriu and Alba (supposed to be the present Hill of Dunmurry, and Hill of Allen).

May be it was his guarantees to the Leinstermen, the Sun and Wind, that killed him.

of Ard-Corann<sup>3</sup> by Leinstermen. The Angles<sup>3 (a)</sup> came into England.

Kal. Jan. (Frid., m. 18.) A.D. 465. Hilary, bishop of [465.]
the Church of Rome, died, who occupied the chair of Peter 6 years,<sup>4</sup> and 3 months, and 10 days. Simplicius was ordained, who sat 12 years,<sup>5</sup> 1 month and . . days.
Eogan<sup>6</sup> son of Niall died.

molt, a "wether," is Latinized verrecinus by O'Flaherty. Ogygia, p. 429. He was son of Nathi (an. 445 supra), whom he succeeded as provincial king of Connaught. From his brother Fiachra descended the Ui-Fiachrach of Connaught. O'Flaherty gives 463 as the date of his accession, and 20 years as the length of his reign. See for Ailill's death ann. 482, 483 infra. Dr. O'Connor absurdly renders molt by "laudabilis"; Tigh. 463.

<sup>3</sup> Ard-Corann.—This place is again mentioned as battle-ground at 506, 507, 510 and 626. In the Ann. Inisfallen the battle here recorded is mentioned under 467; but the Four Mast. omit all the foregoing entries except the last, having probably thought that Ard-Corann was a place in Scotland, and, as such, foreign to their scope. From the mention of Leinstermen in the foregoing entry, however, it must be presumed that the place of the battle was in Ireland.

<sup>5</sup> Years. — The length of the pontificate of Simplicius is given in B. as "ten years, two months, and one day," which is also wrong, as the real duration was 15 years and 6 days, Simplicius having been ordained 25th Feb., 468. The beginning of the Pontificate of his successor, Felix, is entered infra, under the year 481.

<sup>2</sup> Domangart. — This entry (from B.), not found in either the older and better copy (A.), nor in the so-called 'translation' in the MS. Clar. 49, (Brit. Museum), is probably the result of a great prolepsis, as there appears to have been no ecclesiastic of the name of Domangart Mac Nisi at such an early period. The term quieuit used by the Annalist, in recording the death of Domangart, indicates that he regarded the deceased as an ecclesiastic. The demise of a Domangart Mac Nisi is given by the Four M. under A.D. 462; in the Chron. Scotorum under A.D. 464 (=462), and in the Ann. Inisfall. at 495 in O'Connor's ed. (=464). The

with him in the throne his father, Zeno, whom his own father-in-law had passed over on account of his vices and deformity. This entry seems to have been borrowed from the Chronicle of Marcellinus, where the computation above given is "tam sui imperii annis quam Leonis Junioris regni mensibus computatis, anno xvii., mense v."

of Irish Saints (Brit. Eccl. Ant., c. 17; Works vi., p. 478), and who is mentioned in the Life of St. Cainnech as the abbot under whom he studied in Britain (ib., p. 520). This Docus is commonly called Cadocus, and is known in Welsh hagiology as Cuttug Ddoeth, "Cadoc the Wise." He was abbot of Llancarvan, and flourished about A.D. 500. The entry of his death, above given, would therefore be too late, and may be regarded as out of its place. But see Shearman's Loca Patriciana (Dublin, 1879), pp. 223-5, where the learned author states that Cadoc, the preceptor of St. Cainnech (or Canice) was the nephew of Doccus whose obit is given above.

translates this "boxing-battle," and regards it as "nothing more than a boxing match between the pugilistic champions of Leinster and Meath." (Four Mast., A.D. 468, note <sup>u</sup>). In the so-called Translation in Clar. 49, it is described as "the handie skirmish." It seems to be the same as the conflict designated by the term bellum in these Annals, under the years 475 and 478.

<sup>2</sup> Felix.—Felix III., consecrated on Sunday, March 6, 483; died 24 February, 492. His Pontificate therefore lasted only 8 years, 11 months, and 18 days; and not 12 years, or 13, as in the text.

<sup>4</sup> Ocha.—The date above given for this battle (which was fought in Meath, as stated in the Life of St. Kieran, and near Tara, as Animosus asserts in his Life of St. Brigid (Colgan's Trias Thaum., p. 551b, and notes 9 and 10, p. 565), seems to be a year too soon, the correct date being 483, under which it is also entered. The battle of Ocha forms an important era in Irish history, many events recorded in the Irish Chronicles being dated from it. See the Annals of the Four Masters, at A.D. 478, where the particulars of the battle are more fully detailed, and O'Donovan's notes on the subject.

Iarlathi, son of Trian, third<sup>1</sup> bishop of Armagh. Felix,<sup>2</sup> ordained 46th bishop of the church of Rome, lived twelve years, or thirteen. From<sup>3</sup> the beginning of the world, according to the Seventy Interpreters, 5879 years; but according to the Hebrews, 4685. From the Incarnation, according to the Hebrews, 734 years; but according to Dionysius, 481.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 482. The battle of Ocha,<sup>4</sup> in which [482.] Ailill Molt fell, was gained by Lugaid, son of Laegaire, and by Muirchertach Mac Erca. From Concobhar Mac Nesa to Cormac Mac Airt, 308 years. From Cormac to this battle, 116,<sup>5</sup> as Cuana has written.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 483. The killing of Crimthann,<sup>6</sup> son [483.] of Enna Cennselach, (son of Breasal Belach, son of Fiacha Baicceadha, son of Cathair-mór), King of Leinster. (Or in this year, according to others, the battle of Ocha was gained by Lugaid, and by Muirchertach Mac Erca, and by Fergus Cербhall, son of Conall Crimthainn, and by Fiachra Lon,<sup>7</sup> son of the king of Dal-Araidhe.<sup>8</sup>)

Mac Airt is entered in the Annals of the Four Masters under A.D. 266. O'Flaherty, however (Ogygia, p. 341), places the accession of his son and successor, Cairbre Lifechair, in A.D. 279, the year, it is to be assumed, of King Cormac's death. The addition of 116 years to this number would, according to this calculation, give A.D. 395 as the date of the battle of Ocha, which is unquestionably wrong. The Chronicon Scotorum, which gives the battle of Ocha under A.D. 482, states that 207 years intervened between the time of Cormac Mac Airt and the said battle. The MS. Clar. 49, has "A Cormac usque ad hoc bellum 206, ut Cuana scripsit." This would be more near the mark.

<sup>2</sup> Granaerao. — The name of this place is differently written in some Chronicles. The Four Masters give the name (in the genit. form) Granaird, which in the nom. would be 'Granard,' and would be somewhat like the form above given. But under the very next year (486) the name is written 'Graine,' as in the Chron. Scotorum (484), Annals of Clonmacnoise (at 497), and in Keating. The version of these Annals in Clar.

49 has 'Granard.' At 494 (infra) these Annals further vary the orthography by giving 'Granairt.' The place is now called Graney, and is situated in the south of the county of Kildare.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 485. The first battle of Granaerad.<sup>2</sup> [485.]
Coirpre, son of Niall-Noighiallach, was victor. In it fell Fincath. Or Mac Erca was victor, as others say. Or, in this year,<sup>3</sup> the killing of Crimthann son of Enna Ceinnselach.

Kal. Jan. (Thursd., m. 21.) A.D. 486. Or, in this [486.]
year, the first battle of Graine,<sup>4</sup> wherein Muirchertach Mac Erca was victor.

Kal. Jan. (Frid., m. 2.) A.D. 487 (4692). Rest of [487.]
Saint Mel,<sup>5</sup> the bishop, in Ardagh.

Kal. Jan. (Sund., m. 13.) A.D. 488 (4693). Rest of [488.]
Saint Cieran,<sup>6</sup> to whom Saint Patrick presented the Gospel.

Kal. Jan. (Mond., m. 24.) A.D. 489 (4694). Rest of [489.]
Mac Caille,<sup>7</sup> the bishop. Battle of Cenn-lofnado (or Cell-losnaigh,<sup>8</sup> in Magh-Fea), in which fell Aengus son of Nadfraech, King of Munster, as Cuana has written.

Kal. Jan. (Tuesd., m. 5.) A.D. 490 (4695). Zeno<sup>9</sup> [490.]
Augustus departed this life, in the 17th year and 6th might account for the absence of his pedigree from the ancient lists.

church in East Meath which was called, par excellence, 'Daim-liag,' or the 'Stone-church.' Saint Cieran was tenth in descent from Cian, son of Oilill Oluim, King of Munster (ob.
234, Four Mast.), who gave name to the various tribes of Cianachta.

Mac Caille in B., and Clar. 49, the word "Mannensis" has been added.
But this is an idle gloss, as it con-founds two persons who were quite distinct. St. Patrick is stated to have converted an unbeliever in Magh-inis (or Lecale, co. Down), called Macal dus, Mac Cuil, or Mac Fail, who afterwards became bishop of Man. (See Trias Thaum., p. 16; and Book of Armagh, fol. 6.) The Mac Caille whose obit. is above given was a totally different individual, being the saint commemorated in the Calendar, at April 25th, as the bishop who placed the veil on the head of St.

Brigid, and whose church was at Cruachan-Brig-Eile, in Ui-Failge (i.e. near the well-known Hill of Croghan).

<sup>8</sup> Or Cell-Losnaigh, &c. — The alias reading is not in B. See note under A.D. 491.

Marcellinus; but a clause necessary to the sense is omitted here. The original is "tam sui imperii annis quam Basilisci tyrannidis computatis, anno xvii., mense vi." He reigned from Feb., 474, to 9th April, 491. This includes the period of Basiliscus' usurpation, who, in the third year of Zeno, by Verina's instrumentality, drove the Emperor into Isauria, and took possession of the throne, creating his son Marcus Cæsar. But he was dethroned by Zeno in August, 477, after a 20 months' usurpation.

<sup>2</sup> Cell-osnaid.—This is also the form of the name in Tigernach and Keating. The Annal. Inisfall., at 484, have Cend-losnai. In the entry above for last year (489) the place is called 'Cenn-losnada,' or 'Cell-losnaigh,' and is stated to have been in Magh-Fea. Keating says that Cell-osnaid was situated in the county of Carlow, four miles to the east of Leighlin. It is now called Kellistown, and gives name to a parish chiefly comprised in the barony of Carlow. Dr. O'Donovan states that 50 years ago the remains of an ancient church and Round Tower were month, the years as well of his reign [as of the tyrant Basiliscus] being computed. These 6 months, and 6 months of Marcian, add a year which the chronicles do not count. Anastasius<sup>1</sup> is created Emperor. (Or, in this year, the battle of Cell-osnaidh,<sup>2</sup> according to others; Mac Erca was victor; the King of Cashel vanquished.)

was gained over the Leinstermen, by Cairpri, son of Niall.

Kal. Jan. (Sund., m. 20.) A.D. 494. The second [494.] battle of Granairet,<sup>8</sup> in which fell<sup>9</sup> Fraech, the son of still existing, which are now all effaced. (Four Mast., A.D. 489, note). The site of the Round Tower, however, is marked on Sheet 8, Ordnance Survey Maps, co. Carlow. The entry is added in a very coarse hand in A.

<sup>2</sup> Victor.—It is to be feared that there is some confusion here, and that the battle mentioned in the last entry, the site of which is not there specified, was the one in which the victory was obtained, here credited to Muircher-tach. But Clar. 49 says M. was victor "toto anno."

con says:—"Corpus Barnabæ apostoli, et Evangelium Matthæi ejus stylo scriptum ipse revelante, reperitur." The entries for this year in B., though substantially the same as in A., differ slightly in arrangement.

signifies "of the brazen tongue." O'Donovan (Four Mast., A.D. 494, note p) says that he was otherwise called Duach Galach, i.e., the Valorous, and was the son of Brian, who was brother of Niall Nine-hostager. But this is an error. Duach Galach succeeded Ailill Molt as King of Connaught about A.D. 463; and two Kings (Eogan Bél and his son Ailill Inbanda) intervened between Duach Galach and Duach Tenga-umai. See Book of Leinster, p. 41, col. 1.

<sup>9</sup> Aedhan.—He was not yet born. This entry belongs to 581 or 582, as does the next to 583. This is a remarkable prolepsis, and the error must have existed in very ancient authorities, for it occurs in Tigernach at 504, 505, in anticipation of 582, 583.

<sup>2</sup> Reti secessit.—This expression is very obscure, and may be a blunder for 'vita secessit,' or for 'requiescit,' according as the transcriber took Domangart for a king or an ecclesiastic. This entry and the one which follows are fused into one in B., which has Domangart mac Nírré episcopus Connare hic quieuit. There was no Domangart bishop of Connor. But Mac Nisse, i.e., Oengus, whose death is recorded under the year 513, infra, was the first bishop, and founder of Connor. The subject is further complicated by the marginal entry, Domangart episcopus, which occurs in A., in a very old hand. In the entry of his death in Tigernach (A.D. 505), Domangart is called "King of Alba." At A.D. 559 infra, the death of Gabran, son of Domangart, is given. This Domangart was the son of Fergus Mor Mac Nisse, and 3rd King of the Dalriadic Scots. Five years was the length of his reign, according to the best authorities. It was in the year 502, according to Tigernach, that the colony went over to Scotland; and, allowing three years for the joint reign of Lorn and Fergus, the date of Domangart's accession would be 505, and his obit (after a reign of five years) A.D. 510. It is worthy of observation that 35 years is Tigernach has it.

B., nor in Clar. 49. The word monachorum is written in an abbrev. form in A.; but there can be no doubt as to the way in which it should be represented in full. There is no other reference to a “liber mon- achorum”; and the name here may possibly be a mistake for “liber Mochód,” or “Book of Mochod,” referred to infra, at 527.

though Clar. 49 has “de Druimderb.”
The addition also occurs in the Ann.

is mac Loiti, "son of Loit." But the Chron. Scot. (518), has Mocloite, altered by Rod. O'Flaherty to Mac Cloithe, or son of Cloth. See Chron. Scot., p. 39, note 10.

Niall had no son named Cainri. The name might have been so written, by mistake, for Cairbri.

<sup>11</sup> In the 70th.—The death of St. Brigit is recorded in these Annals, from different authorities, at 523, 525, and 527. Tigernach has it at 526. marg. in A. suggests that he was of the Ui-Bresail. In the List of the Successors of St. Patrick, contained in the Book of Leinster (p. 42, col. 3), this Ailill, who is there called "primus," as well as his successor, Ailill "secundus," is stated to have been from Druimchád, in Ui-Bressail. The death of Ailill "the second" is entered under 535 infra.

of Ossory. His birth is also entered supra, at 520. Tigernach places his birth at 517, which seems the true date, as his obit is given at 599 infra (=600), in his 84th year, according to Tigern.

In the 197th year after the foundation of the regal city (i.e., Constantinople), on the Kalends of April, the Emperor Justin appointed as his successor on the throne Justinian, his nephew by his sister, who had, long before, been designated "Nobilissimus" by him. He died in the fourth month following, in the 9th year and 2nd month of his reign. Rest of Saint Ailbhe.<sup>4</sup>

Kal. Jan. (Sat., m. 24.) A.D. 527. <sup>1</sup> Year 520.—This should be the year 532.

<sup>3</sup> Three battles.—In orig. (A.) .iii. bellum. The entry seems quite unintelligible, being, as it stands "tria bellum (sic) in hoc anno gesta uno et possito (corrected from possite, by old hand) ergense ecc leccam lias." For .iii. bellum, we might perhaps read ui. bellā ("six battles"—this being the number mentioned in the latter part of the entry.) But the Editor cannot attempt to explain the meaning of possito ergense ecc leccam lias. The introduction also of the name of Pope Felix (ob. 530), whose death and burial are referred to at the year 527, seems to indicate that some great confusion has occurred in the transcription of the text. The entry, unfortunately, is not found in B., and is only represented in Clar. 49, by "3. Bella hoc anno." Theso-called "translator" who composed that version of these Annals must have had the full

<sup>5</sup> In the fort.—In aice, A. and B. But, of course, by mistake for aice. In an ancient account of the death of Muirchertach Mac Erca, contained in the Yellow Book of Lecan, it is stated that his destruction was contrived by a fairy woman named Sin (pron. Sheen), for whose society he had discarded his queen. But his relative St. Cairnech of Dulane (in Meath), having persuaded him to take back h's queen, and dismiss his fairy favourite, the latter, through her fairy machinations, successfully plotted the destruction of King Muirchertach. The tale is wild and imaginative, but contains much historical information. See the Ann. Four Mast., under A.D. 527, and Chron. Scot., at 531.

 by Muirchertach Mac Erca over the Leinstermen, as some say.<sup>3</sup>

Kal. Jan. (Tues., m. 23.) A.D. 535. Thus far Marcel- [535.]
 linus brought down his Chronicle. Mercurius, who was also called John, a Roman by birth, bishop of the Church of Rome, sat 2 years, 4 months, and 6 days; and was buried in the church of St. Peter the Apostle. Failure of bread. Ailill,<sup>4</sup> bishop of Armagh, died. Or, in this year, the drowning of Muirchertach Mac Erca, according to others.

Kal. Jan. (Thursd., m. 4.) A.D. 536. Battle of [536.]
 years. Or, in this year, the repose of Saint Mochta,<sup>7</sup> disciple of Patrick.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 537. Agapitus, a Roman by birth, [537.]
 bishop of the Church of Rome, sat 11 months and 8 days.
 He was buried in the church of St. Peter the Apostle.
 Twenty-six days of Boniface, and 4 months and 6 days of Mercurius, and 11 months and 8 days of Agapitus, make up a year, and 4 months, and 10 days. The battle

A.D. 534. Now known as the Sliabh-Phelim Mountains, on the confines of Tipperary and Limerick.

<sup>6</sup> Eleven years.—A. and B. have "annis xi". But Clar. 49 has ii. (for 'two' years), which is probably a mistake for 11. The murder of Tuathal Maelgarbh is recorded infra, at 543, and as the length of his reign was eleven years, the date of his accession must have been 532. Tuathal Mael- garbh was grandson of Cairbre, son of Niall, and the only sovereign of Ireland in this line. His surname is interpreted calvo-asper by O'Flaherty.

was the fifth in descent from Crimthann.

called Aedh Fortambail ("Aedh the Strong") by the Four Mast., at the

the entries for the previous year.

is added as a gloss in A., in a very old hand. There is no entry for this year in B., but Clar. 49 has the notice of David in exactly the same words as A. The name of David does not occur in any of the Lists of the Bishops of Armagh accessible to the Editor. See Ware's Works (Harris's ed.), vol. 1, p. 38, where reasons are adduced in disproof of the statement above given regarding David, and Colgan's Trias Thaum., p. 293, col. 2, where it is stated that this David was the same person who was called Fiacher [or Fiachra] in the "Psalter of Cashel." The name

"Fiachra," occurs in the Book of Leinster (p. 42, col. 3), and in other ancient lists, as the successor of Duach, bishop of Armagh, whose obit is given above under the year 547.
The entry is written in a coarse hand in A.

Fergus and Domnall (i.e., the two sons of Muirchertach Mac Erca) were victors. Or, in this year, the rest of Tigernach.<sup>3</sup> [549.]

Kal. Jan. (Sund., m. 9.) A.D. 550. The rest of David, descendant of Farannan, (son<sup>4</sup> of Guaire, descendant of Farannan), Bishop of Armagh, and Legate of all Ireland. [550.]

Kal. Jan. (Mond.) A.D. 551. The battle of Cuilen,<sup>5</sup> in which the Corco-Oche of Munster were slain, through the prayers of Ita of Cluain.<sup>6</sup> Death of Fothad, son of Conall. [551.]

Kal. Jan. (Wed.) A.D. 552. Death of Eacha, son of Conled, i.e., King of Ulad, from whom the Ui-Echach of Ulad are descended; and death of Bec Mac Deiche.<sup>7</sup> Death of Craumthan, son of Brian. Thus I find in the Book of Cuanu, viz.:—The relics of Patrick were placed in a shrine, at the end of three score years after Patrick's death, by Colum-cille. Three splendid minna<sup>8</sup> were found in the tomb, to wit, his goblet, and the Angel's [552.]

The site of St. Ita's church, anciently called Cluain-Credail, is now known as Killeedy, in the parish of the same name, barony of Upper Connello, and county of Limerick.

<sup>8</sup> Minna, plur. of minn, or mind, which signifies a crown, diadem, or precious thing. The term was also generally applied to reliquaries, on which oaths were sworn; and thus came to signify, in a secondary sense, an oath.

entry, that the “samthorse” was a cutaneous disease.

Gospel, and the Bell of the Testament. This is how the Angel distributed the treasures for Colum-cille, viz.:—the goblet to Down, and the Bell of the Testament to Armagh, and the Angel's Gospel to Colum-cille himself. The reason it is called the Angel's Gospel is, because it is from the Angel's hand Colum-cille received it. Or, in this year, the rest of David,<sup>1</sup> Bishop of Armagh, and Legate.

plained by buidhe-conaill. Crón means 'saffron-colour,' and buidhe 'yellow.' The term is usually written crom-conaill. (See Census of Ireland, 1851, part 5, vol. 1, pp. 46-7.) But the form cron-conaill seems the more correct. The second member of the name, 'conall,' is evidently the same as the word connall (gl. stipulam: Reliq. Celt. 38). The disease was of the nature of jaundice. It seems to have been the same kind of disease as that which proved so fatal in 548. It was variously Latinized flava pestis, flava icteritia, and icteritia.

<sup>1</sup> Founded.—See under 554, where the foundation of the Church of Bangor is also recorded. In Clar. 49, in the passage parallel to the present, the word 'finita' is used instead of 'fundata.' But Clar. 49 is a very poor authority.

stands immirge (or as he writes it Imirge) to mean "expulsion." But this is wrong.

<sup>4</sup> Battle of Cul-dreimne.—The ostensible cause of this battle was the execution, by King Diarmait Mac Cerbhaill, of Curnan, son to the King of Connaught, who was forced from St. Columba's protection, to which he had fled, and the desire on the part of the Northern Hy-Neill to revenge the insult offered to their kinsman. The real cause would seem to have been the rivalry of the two great families. In the account of the battle in the Ann. Four Mast., at 555, however, an additional cause is assigned, namely

Kal. Jan. A.D. 558. The church of Bangor was founded.<sup>1</sup> [558.]

Kal. Jan. A.D. 559. The Feast of Tara by Diarmait Mac Cerbhaill; and the death of Gabran, son of Domangart, (according to others<sup>2</sup>). An expedition<sup>3</sup> by the son of Maelchon (i.e., King Bruide). The battle of Cul-dreimne. [559.]

Kal. Jan. A.D. 560. The battle of Cul-dreimne,<sup>4</sup> gained [560.] over Diarmait Mac Cerbhaill, in which 3,000 fell. Fergus and Domnall, two sons of Mac Erca (i.e., two sons<sup>5</sup> of Muirchertach, son of Muiredach, son of Eogan, son of Niall), and Airmire, son of Setna, and Nainnid, son of Duach, King of Connaught,<sup>6</sup> were victors, and Aedh, son of Echa Tirmcharna,<sup>7</sup> King of Connaught. Through the prayers of Colum-Cille they conquered. Fraechan, son of Temnan,<sup>8</sup> it was that made the Druids' erbe<sup>9</sup> for Diarmait. Tuatan, son of Diman, son of Saran, son of Cormac, son of Eogan, it was that threw over head the Druids' erbe.<sup>9</sup> Maglaine that passed over it, who alone was slain. The battle of Cul-Uinsen.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 561. Or, in this year, the battle of Cul-Uinsen, in Tebhtha, was gained over Diarmait Mac Cerbhaill, by Aedh son of Brenan. Diarmait fled. The battle of Moin-Daire. [561.]

a decision given by King Diarmait in a dispute between Colum Cille and St. Finnen. See O'Donovan's notes on the subject, Four Mast., A.D. 555. That it was considered an era in the life of St. Colum Cille appears from Adamnan's words, who dates the arrival of St. Colum Cille in Britain as occurring in the 'second year after the battle of Cule-Drebene.' The name Cooledrevny is now obsolete, but Colgan states that the place was in the territory of Carbury, near Sligo, on the north. (Trias Thaum., p. 452.) It must therefore have been in the neighbourhood of Drumcliff.

<sup>2</sup> Laisre.—There were three famous saints of this name, who generally appear in Irish hagiology, with the devotional prefix Mo ("my"), in the form Molaisi, namely, Molaisi, son of Cairill, abbot of Leithglinn; Molaisi, son of Declan, abbot of Inishmurray, and Molaisi, son of Nadfraech, abbot of Daimhinis, the one in question. He founded the church of Daimh-inis, 'Bovis insula,' in Loch-Erne, now called Devenish, near Enniskillen. The death of Molasse (above called Laisre) is entered again at the year 570.

<sup>4</sup> Diarmait MacCerbhaill.—Properly, Diarmait son of Fergus Cerbhaill (or Cerbheoil). In the Ann. Four Masters, the Chron. Scotorum and other Chronicles, it is stated that Aedan, son of Fiachra, dies. Voyage of Colum-Cille to the Island of Ia<sup>1</sup>, in the 42nd year of his age. The slaying of Colman the Great, son of Diarmait.

Kal. Jan. (Tues., m. 2.) A.D. 563. A great storm occurred. The death of Laisræ<sup>2</sup> of Daimhinis. Or, in this year, Brenaind founded the church of Cluain-ferta.<sup>3</sup> [563.]

Kal. Jan. (Thurs., m. 13.) A.D. 564. The murder of Diarmait MacCerbhaill,<sup>4</sup> i.e., by Aedh Dubh<sup>5</sup> son of Suibhne, to whom succeeded the two sons of Mac Erca, Fergus and Domnall. The repose of Brendan of Birr, as others say. The battle of Gabair-Liphe; and the death of Daimin Daimairgit. [564.]

Kal. Jan. (Frid.) A.D. 565. The battle of Gabair-Liphe. Fergus and Domnall were victors. Also the death of Domnall, son Muirchertach. Mac Erca, to whom succeeded Ainmire son of Setna. Justin the younger reigned, as Bede says, eleven years. [565.]

Kal. Jan. (Saturd.) A.D. 566. John, a Roman by birth, sat twelve years, eleven months, and twenty-six days, and was buried in the church of St. Peter<sup>6</sup> the apostle. An expedition into Iardoman.<sup>7</sup> [566.]

Kal. Jan. (Sund., m. 16.) A.D. 567. An expedition into Iardoman,<sup>8</sup> by Colman Bec, son of Diarmait, and Conall son of Comgall. [567.]

King Diarmait's head was buried in Clonmacnois, and his body in Connor.

<sup>1</sup> Aedh Dubh.—"Black Hugh." He was King of Dalaradia, whose father Suibhne Araidhe had been put to death by King Diarmait, and he had in early life been taken in fosterage by Diarmait. But Diarmait having been warned against Aedh, the latter was banished into Alba (Scotland), whence he returned to perpetrate the deed recorded in the above entry. Aedh afterwards fled back to Scotland, and took the clerical habit in one of the Columban Monasteries. But he returned to Ireland, and became King of Ulad in 581; and was himself slain in 587. Adamnan gives a very bad account of him. See Reeves's Eccl. Antiqq., p. 279.

<sup>8</sup> Iardoman.—"The Western region." In the Ann. Four Mast., at A.D. 565, it is stated that Colman Beg, son of Fergus, son of Diarmait, and Conall son of Comgall, King of Dal-Riada, brought a sea fleet

(muirceðlach) to Sol and Ile, and carried away spoils therefrom. Here we have the Sol and Ile of the Four Mast. corresponding to the Iardoman of these Annals. In the Book of Leinster (p. 24b) the expedition to Iardoman is stated to have been i ról 7 in íl ("to Sol and Ile"), agreeing with the Four Masters. The latter is Islay; and the former is either Seil or Colonsay—not Coll, which is too far off, although O'Donovan thought so (note ad an. 565, F. M.). Islay was at this time in the possession of the Scots, as appears from Adamnan's life of St. Columba (ii. 23), having been occupied by Muiredach, son of Aengus, who was first cousin of Conall's grandfather Domangart. Conall's territory lay in Cowall, and this expedition was probably against the rival house of Gabhran. But it is strange that Colman Beg, whose territory lay very near the centre of Ireland, was adventurous enough to engage in maritime warfare.

The assassination of two grandsons of Muiredach, viz.:—Baetán son of Muirchertach, and Eochaid son of Domnall (i.e., son of Muirchertach Mac Erca) in the third year of their reign. Cronan, son of Tigernach, King of Cianachta of Glenngeimin, was their slayer. Moenu, bishop of Cluain-ferta-Brenaind, rested. The death of Deman son of Cairill. Or, in this year, the killing of Diarmait Mac Cerbhaill. In this year the ‘muirgeilt’<sup>8</sup> was captured. The repose of Brendan<sup>9</sup> of Birr, as others say. [571.]

<sup>6</sup> One hundred years.—The entry at 552 would refer the death of St. Patrick to the year 492, but this to 470. Tigernach indicates 571 as a hundred years after that event. Again, in these Annals, the year 663 (and in Tigernach 664) is set down as 203 years from the death of St. Patrick. See at the years 999, 1013, infra. According to these computations 471 is the latest date. The death of Sen Patrick is entered above under the year 461, which partly explains the confusion of dates.

born,” and liban, “sea-woman.” The entry is fuller in Tigernach. “In this year was caught the Muirgelt on the shore of Ollarba, in the net of Beoan, son of Innli, fisherman of Comgall of Bangor;” to which the Four Mast. add “that is, Liban, daughter of Eochaid, son of Mairid.” The legend concerning her (see Lebor na hUidre, p. 39, sq.) is, that she was daughter of Eochaid, King of the tract now covered by Lough Neagh, who was drowned by its eruption about the time of the Christian Era; that she was changed into a salmon, and traversed the sea until she allowed herself to be captured on this occasion. Under the names Muirgen and Liban, she appears mentioned in the Calendar at Jan. 27, and Dec. 18.

recorded in Tigernach under the year 573, which is probably the true date, although the Mart. Donegal and the Four Mast. have his obit under A.D. 571.

<sup>2</sup> Gabair-Liphe.—‘Gabair of the Liffey.’ The situation of this place has not yet been fixed; but Father Shearman, a very good authority, states that it was the name of a district comprising “the hilly country bounded by the Dublin Mountains on the north; on the east by the River Liffey, from its source in Kippure to Ballymore-Eustace;” its western boundary including “the hills from Tipperkevin, by Rathmore, to Athgoe, towards Tallaght, and the hill of Lyons.” Loca Patriciana, p. 28, note <sup>2</sup>.

<sup>3</sup> Tola and Fortola.—This entry is in the margin in B, and also in A. (in which it is partly obliterated). The Four Masters (at 571) have but the name of Tola, which O'Donovan (Loc. cit., note i,) identifies with Tulla, in the parish of Kinnitty, barony of Ballybritt, King's County.

Or thus, the battle of Tola and Fortola,<sup>3</sup> viz., the names of plains between Ele and Ossory,<sup>4</sup> and between Cluain-ferta-Molua and Saighir.<sup>5</sup> Fiachra, son of Baetan,<sup>6</sup> was victor. <sup>5</sup> Cluain-ferta-Molua and Saighir.—The former, commonly called Clonfertmulloe, is now known as Kyle, a parish in the barony of Clandonagh, Queen's County. Saighir, or Seirkieran, is a parish in the barony of Ballybritt, King's County.

south of the present King's County, which was hardly Pictish territory; though Fiachra, son of Baetan, the victor, was an Ulster chieftain.

Enach-duin, now Annadown, county Galway, had been granted to him by the King of Connaught; and it is probable that the nunnery there was founded by him, and placed under his sister's superintendence. <sup>1</sup> Vinnian.—Erroneously printed Umanian by O'Conor. This was St. Finnian, of Magh-bile, or Movilla, the patron saint of the Ulidians.

<sup>3</sup> Brudig.—In the list of kings of Ui-Failgi, or Offaly, contained in the Book of Leinster (p. 40, col. 3,) the name of a 'Bruidgin, son of Cathair,' occurs immediately before that of Aedh Roin, whose death is entered within at the year 603. And in the Pedigree of the Ui-Failgi, in the same authority (p. 314, col. 2), a Bruidgi is set down as fourth in descent from Ros Failgi, the ancestor of the Ui-Failgi.

<sup>4</sup> Druim-mic-Erca.—This place has not been identified. Colgu's father, Muirchertach, bore the matronymic of Mac-Erca, and from him this place may perhaps have derived its name. See under 580 and 585.

Feradach, son of Duach, King of Ossory. Pelagius, a Roman by birth, sat ten years, two months, and ten days. The battle of Manand against<sup>10</sup> Aedhan. The death of Fergna,<sup>11</sup> son of Caiblein. Or, in this year, the repose of Brenaind, of Cluain-ferta, according to others.<sup>12</sup>

<sup>8</sup> Battle of Manonn.—Dean Reeves thinks that this was the name of "the debateable ground on the confines of the Scots, Picts, Britons, and Saxons, now represented in part by the parish of Slamannan (Sliabh Manann, 'Moor of Manann'), on the south-east of Stirlingshire, where it and the counties of Dumbarton, Lanark, and Linlithgow meet." Adamnan, p. 371, n. d.

O'Donovan was surely wrong in thinking Manann the Isle of Man. (Frag. of Annals, 581.)

(Adamnan, 148, note D), "harmonises very well with the true date of his death, as it allows a period of 78 years for the term of his life, but is open to the objection that in both authorities the 'Battle of Manann by Aedhan,' is entered under the preceding year (503), although Aedhan was not yet born, and the true date of that battle is 582: which creates a suspicion that these entries were taken from an earlier record whose chronological system was different, or that they were displaced through carelessness in the scribe."

Bec, son of Diarmait, and Cummaene, son of Libraen, son of Illannan, son of Cerbhall, killed him, at the instance of Colman—namely, at Leim-ind-eich. Or, in this year, the battle of Druim-mic-Erce.<sup>7</sup>

Kal. Jan. (Wed., m. 16.) A.D. 586. The battle of [586.]

where the death of this prelate is entered also.

Nisse's abbacy.*—The death of his predecessor, Oenu, is entered above under the year 569, and again at 576.
Mac Nisse's death is entered also under 590 infra.

this clause is interlined in an old hand in A., and in the orig. hand in B.
The death of Baetan is given by the Four Masters at the year 567; but Tigernach has it at 586, agreeing with these Annals. Fergus Cennfadda was otherwise called Duach. See Reeves's Adamnan, Geneal. Table at
p. 342.

<sup>7</sup> Battle of Druim-mic-Erce.—This battle is also referred to at the years 579 and 580.

<sup>8</sup> Battle of Daethe.—The name of this place is written vaete in A. and B., although O'Connor prints Dro- maethe. O'Donovan, under an extraordinary misconception, states (Ann.
Four Mast., A.D., 572, note) that Cod. Clar. 49 has 'Bellum Droma-
Ethe,' whereas it really reads 'Bellum Doothe.' See under 592, infra. The record of this battle under this year, in A., B., and Clar. 49, is somewhat confused, the notice of the death of Daigh, son of Cairill, being introduced into the middle of it. The Editor has taken the liberty of putting it in its proper place in the text.

the other Annals. The assassination of his son Aedh is recorded under the year 578, supra.

<sup>4</sup> Constantine.—He had been King of Cornwall; but abandoned the throne, and became a monk under St. Carthach (otherwise called Mo-chuda), at Rahin, in the present King's county, whence he passed over to Scotland, and founded the church of Govan on the Clyde. He suffered martyrdom in Cantyre, where there is a church, Kilchoustand, called after his name. His festival, in the Calendars of both Scotland and Ireland, is March 11. See Reeves's Adamnan, p. 371, note c.

Aedh, son of Ainmire, being victor. And in which fell Libraen, son of Illannon, son of Cerbhall. Daigh, son of Cairill, died. Or, in this year, the death of Baetan,<sup>1</sup> son of Cairill, King of Uladh.

Kal. Jan. (Sat., m. 9.) A.D. 588. The repose of [588.] Bishop Aedh, son of Brecc.<sup>6</sup> Aedh, son of Brendan, King of Tethba, died. (It was he that presented Dermhagh<sup>7</sup> to Colum-Cille.) And, in the same time, there was a scorching and drougthy summer.

Kal. Jan. (Sund., m. 20.) A.D. 589. The death of [589.] Fedelmith, son of Tigernach, King of Munster. The battle of Lethreid was gained by Aedhan, son of Gabran. The battle of Magh-ochtair was gained by Brandubh, son of Echa, over the Ui-Neill. Or, in this year, the repose of Fergus, bishop of Druim-lethglaise,<sup>8</sup> who founded Cill-Bian.

Kal. Jan. (Mond., m. 1.) A.D. 590. An eclipse of the [590.]

Lord of Dalaradia, and afterwards King of Ulster. The murder by him of Dermot MacCerbhaill, King of Ireland, is recorded above under the year 564. Adamnan gives a bad character of him (Vit. Columbae, i. 36).

<sup>6</sup> Aedh, son of Brec.—Better known as Aedh Mac Bric. Founder of Killeare, in Westmeath. Also venerated at Sliabh Liag (Slieveleague), in the Co. Donegal. He was also the founder and patron of Rathhugh, near Kilbeggan, in the Co. of Westmeath. His life has been published by Colgan

(AA., SS.), at Feb. 28th. See under 594 infra.

<sup>7</sup> Dermhagh.—Durrow, in the barony of Ballycowan, King's County. Added as a gloss in A. Not in B. In the Annals of the Four Masters, at A.D. 585, Brenainn, the father of Aedh, is represented as the person who presented Durrow to St. Columba. But this is an error. The death of Aedh son of Brendan (or Brenann) is entered again under 594 infra.

<sup>3</sup> Gregory.—St. Gregory the Great. Styled beolir, "of the golden mouth," by the Four Mast. (A.D. 590); a name given to him by the Irish so early as 634; for Cumman writes in his Paschal Epistle of that year—"Ad Gregorii papæ, urbis Romæ episcopi (a nobis in commune suscepti, et oris aurei appellatione donati) verba me converti." (Ussher, Sylog. xi; Wks. vol. iv., p. 439). Gregory the Great was consecrated on Sunday, the 3rd of Sept., 590, in the 9th year of the Emperor Mauricius. He was buried on the 12th of March, 604, in the 3rd year of the Emperor Phocas, having governed the See of Rome for 13 years, six months, and ten days. Gregory was son of Gordian, a wealthy senator, and Sylvia, a lady of rank and piety. O'Connor adds "Sed secundum Bedam, Gregorius quieuit xiv. anno ab hoc loco infra." (Rer. Hib.

<sup>4</sup> Bealach-Dhaithe. — O'Donovan states (Four Mast., 572, note n) that the site of this battle was Ballaghanea, par. of Lurgan, co. Cavan. The name of the place is written (in the genitive case) Daethe (or Doethe) under 586 supra, where see note.

<sup>8</sup> Calggach.—First written "Gal-gaig" (genit. of "Galggach") in A. But the copyist has written a C over the first G, by way of suggesting that the name should be "Calggaig" (nom. "Calgach.") This name has been rendered classical by Tacitus' account of the battle fought between a powerful sept of the Airghialla, who were settled in or near the present county of Armagh, a branch of which emigrated southwards, and gave name to the district now corruptly called the barony of Moygoish, county Westmeath. See Reeves's Eccl. Ant., p. 387.

<sup>11</sup> Dun-bolg.—'Fort of Sacks.' For the situation of this place, and the causes which led to the battle, see O'Donov. Four Mast., A.D. 594, note h., where a full summary is given from the account of the battle of Dun-bolg contained in the Bórama Tract, Book of Leinster, p. 294, b., sq.

cient name of a river near Geshill, in the King's County. See O'Donov. Four Mast., under 596, note o.

<sup>5</sup> Coirpre [son of] Feichen.—The name is Coirpri Feicheni in A., but 'Coirpri mic Feicheni' ('C. son of Feichen') in B., and in the Four Mast. Clar. 49 has 'Cairbre St. Feichin,' which is a blunder. In the Geneal. Table of the Hy-Maine, given by O'Donovan (facing p. 97, Tribes &c. of Hy-Many) Cairpri Mac Fechine is set down as the son of a Feradach, and 5th in the line of descent from Maine Mor, from whom the Hy-Many sept was named. See also the Work referred to, at p. 15.

Or, in this year, the repose of Colum-cille, on Sunday night.

Kal. Jan. (Mond., m. 2.) A.D. 601. The repose of [601.] Comgall<sup>7</sup> of Bangor. The battle of Slemain,<sup>8</sup> in which Colman Rimidh, King of Cinel-Eogain,<sup>9</sup> was victor, and Conall Cu, son of Aedh, son of Ainmire, escaped by flight.<sup>10</sup> The battle of Cul-coel, in which Fiachna, son of Deman, fled. Fiachna, son of Baetan, was victor. The death of Uata,<sup>11</sup> son of Aedh. The battle of Echros.<sup>12</sup>

—These entries are recorded under the next year, which is the correct date according to the enumeration of these Annals.

The death of Conall Cu is recorded infra, under 603.

<sup>11</sup> Uata.—Written Ουτατ, gen. of Ουτα, under last year. In the Chron. Scot., at A.D. 592, where he is called King of Connaught, the name is written Uadu; but Uata by the Four Mast., 597. From him was derived the name Clann-Uadach, “descendants of Uadu,” the tribe-name of the O’Fallons of Roscommon, whose patronymic was also derived from Fallomhan, the great-grandson of Uadu.

 tach Mac Erca), by a man of his kindred (who was called<sup>7</sup> Locan Dilmana).

Notwithstanding kingship, notwithstanding law,
 Notwithstanding power over chieftains;
 Behold! Colman Rimid, a king—
 Locan Dithnada<sup>8</sup> slew him!

Assassination of Aedh Slane (son of Diarmaid<sup>9</sup> Derg, son of Fergus Cerrbheoil, son of Conall Cremthainne, son of Niall Nine-hostager), by Conall, son of Suibne. They [i.e.
 Colman Rimidh and Aedh Slaine] reigned<sup>10</sup> together at Tara with equal power. The assassination of Aedh Roin, King of the Ui-Failgi, in Faethgi-mic-Meccnaen<sup>11</sup> (on the brink of Loch-Semdidhe), on the same day in which of reference to their proper place in the text.

<sup>9</sup> Son of Diarmaid, &c.—This clause is interlined in A. and B.
 O'Connor has created some confusion in his edition of these Annals, by making this clause a continuation of that above given (see note 6) in connexion with the name of Colman Rimidh; thus giving both kings the same pedigree, which is wrong.

<sup>10</sup> Reigned.—This entry is very loosely constructed in both A. and B.
 The events are recorded by the Four more simple and intelligible way.

 renders it by "the field of Macnaen."
 The parenthesis which follows (interlined in A. and B.) fixes the faithche as on the brink of Loch-Semdidhe, or Lough-Sewdy. The name is now obsolete, but there can be little doubt that the "green" occupied the site of the present village of Ballymorefollow (and which also are not in B.) are in the top marg. of A., fol. 22a;

(Four Mast., 600, note g) says that this was a Bardic name for Bregia,

'from Tuirbhe, or Turvey, near Swords, in the county of Dublin.'

<sup>4</sup> Aedh Buidhe.—He was king, or chieftain, of the Cinel-Maine (or descendants of Maine, son of Niall Ninehostager), whose territory was in later times known as Tethbha, or Teffia, a district comprising the Kal. Jan. A.D. 604. The battle of Slaebhre, in which [604.]

Brandubh, son of Eacha, was vanquished. The Ui-Neill were victors, (i.e., Aedh Uaridnach, who then reigned). The killing of Brandubh, King of Leinster, by his own tribe, through treachery : (son of Eacha, son of Muiredach, son of Aedh, son of Fedhlim, son of Enna Cennselach, son of Labraidh, son of Bresal Belach, son of Fiacha Baicceda, son of Cathair Mor). He reigned thirty years in Leinster, and in the battle of Damcluain he was slain. Or it may have been Saran 'Saebhderg,' i.e., the 'Herenagh' of Senboth-sine, that killed him, as the poet said :—

False-eyed Saran, a guide hitherto,
'Herenagh' of Senboth-sine,
Was he, no falsehood, without bright judgment,
That killed Brandubh son of Eacha.

Foccas<sup>7</sup> reigned seven years. Death of Laisren abbot of Ia.

Westmeath, with adjacent parts of Longford and King's cos. See O'Donov. Four Mast., at A.D. 1207, note z, and Ir. Topog. Poems, note 35. The Four Mast. (A.D. 600) and the Chron. Scot. (604) state that Aedh was slain by Conall son of Suibhne, on the same day on which Aedh Slane was killed.

<sup>5</sup> Conall Cuu.—Said to have been defeated in the battle of Slemain, supra, 601. O'Connor thinks the name signifies 'Conallus placidus,' and not 'Conallus canis,' as O'Donovan suggests (Four Mast. 600, note k).

<sup>2</sup> Aedhan.—The Chron. Scotorum, in giving his obit at the year 606, adds that this was the 37th year of Aedhan's reign, and the 88th, or 86th, of his age. But Aedhan died in the 74th year of his age, according to Tigernach.

<sup>3</sup> Sons of Baetan.—The death of this Baetan is entered, supra, under the years 580 and 586. The Chron. Scot., which records the murder of Baetan's sons at the year 606, adds that they were slain in 'Dun-Mogna,' a filio matris suæ. In the Book of Leinster (p. 330. col. 4), the slayer of the sons of Baetan is stated to have been his brother, Maelduin, and the place where they were slain is called Dún-Mugnae.

entry of Fiachra Caech's death (Chron. of the Picts and Scots, p. 346,) as if he regarded Fiachra as a Scottish personage; but Fiachra was evidently the son of the Baetan above mentioned (580, 586).

<sup>7</sup> Son of Dall.—Ḍall (gen. of Ḍall) A. and B. O'Connor prints Domhnaill ('of Domhnall'); and Clar. 49 has 'Donill.' The word quiet would imply that the person referred to was an ecclesiastic. There is no corresponding entry in the Ann. Four Mast.

<sup>2</sup> Cluain-U-Aingriđi.—In the List of Successors of St. Patrick, contained in the Book of Leinster (p. 42, cols. 3-4), Senach, who is called garbh ('rough') is stated to have been from Cluain. h. mic Gricci ('Plain of the descendant of Gricci's son'), and of the Ui-Niallain; and it is further added that Senach was 'a blacksmith in Orders, from Kilmore.' The Kilmore here referred to is probably Kilmore, in the bar. of O'Neilland West, co. Armagh. See Todd's St.

<sup>2</sup> Sliabh-Tueth.—Originally written moñ tueth in A., over which a second hand has added τῖρ bealgaðain, as if to correct the name to montis Bealgadhain, or Sliabh-Belgadain (as in MS. B.) The alias reading which would fix the site of the battle at Sliabh-Truim (now known as "Bessy Bell" Mountain, in the bar. of Strabane) is added in the margin in A. and B. Clar. 49 has simply "in bello Montis Belgadhain." But the Four Masters write the name Sliabh-Toadh; and the Chron. Scot.

has "in bello montis Toath (or Taeth)"; whilst in the Book of Leinster (p. 25a) Maelcobha is stated to have been slain in the battle of Sliabh-Toad. Keating writes "Sliabh-Bealgadain."

<sup>3</sup> At.—ei (for ec, or ic) A., B. O'Connor prints ic ("at.") Clar. 49 has "at Legg-in-Riada." The name signifies "the stone of punishment." The place has not been identified.

 Suibne, son of Crachen, King of the Cianachta of Glenngaimhin, and the death of Aedhan son of Mongan, King of Dalriata or [Dal]araide<sup>5</sup>; and the death of Petran, bishop of Lusca. In the same year<sup>6</sup> Aedh, and Critan Areni, died. Burning of Bangor.

Kal. Jan. (Sat., m. 18.) A.D. 616. The burning of [616.]
 the martyrs of Egg. The burning of Donnan<sup>7</sup> of Egg, on the 15th of the Kalends of May, with 150 martyrs ; and the devastation of Torach,<sup>8</sup> and the burning of Condere. Isidore wrote his Chronicle down to this year, thus saying :—Heraclius completed the fifth year of his reign from this time,<sup>9</sup> which is in the fifth year of the raide, of which Aedhan was King.

 See Reeves' Eccl. Antiqq., p. 340.

<sup>6</sup> In the same year.—Eo in A. and B., the word anno being omitted in both MSS. Clar. 49 has eo an.
 O'Connor, in his ed. of these Annals, has joined Eo to the following name OCeò, and formed from the conjunction the unusual form of name "Eac-

 entry is added over that of the preceding entry in A., and partly in B.
 Regarding St. Donnan of Egg (or Donnan Ega, as he is generally called), see Reeves' Adamnan, Additional Note K., p. 303, where much curious information on the subject is given.

 is the word used for "devastation," in A., B., and Clar. 49. The Chron.
Scot. has uarpatio. Torach is Tory Island, off the N.W. coast of Donegal.
 The devastation of Torach is mentioned under the year 612 by the Four Mast., who have no notice of the massacre of Donnan's people above

<sup>2</sup> Eiluin.—Eiluinu, in B., which O'Connor inaccurately prints Eili unn, and he then translates the entry "Disceptatio in Eili hoc anno in Die Pasche," which is worse. The place alluded to was not any of the territories called Eile. Elphin, in the co. Roscommon, may possibly have been intended.

in the genit. case in A. and B., is entered in Ann. Four Mast., under the year 613.

the inopaeð maça ("devastation of Macha") of the following entry for the name of a place. See Reeves' Eccl. Antiqq., p. 68, note p.

The verses that follow, referring to the drowning of Conaing, and which are not in B., are so corrupt that they could scarcely be set right without the expenditure of more time and trouble than the subject is worth. They are much more correctly given in the Chron.

41, col. 5), the name of Fiacha Lurga (as it is there written) occurs after that of Aedh Dubh, whose death is entered under the year 587, supra. Fiachna is also in the List of Kings of Ulad in the Book of Leinster (p. 41, col. 3).

The Irish text of the first of the foregoing stanzas (neither of which is in B.) is written in the lower margin of fol. 23a in A., and the second in low. marg. 22b, in orig. hand.

<sup>3</sup> Ard-Corann.—This place is also mentioned as battle-ground at the years 464, 506, and 510, supra. See note<sup>3</sup> under the year 464. According to the Four Mast. (624) and Chron. Scot. (627), this battle of Ard-Corrann was gained, and Fiachna slain, by Conadh Cerr, king of the Scotch Dalriads (and son of Eochaid Buidhe, son of Aedhan, son of Gabhran). The death of Conad Cerr is entered under the year 628 infra.

<sup>4</sup> Carn-Feradhaigh in Cliu.—Cliu (or Cliu Mail mic Ugaini, i.e., Cliu of Mal son of Ugaini) was the d Irish name of a territory in the S.E. of the present co. Limerick. Carn-Feradhaigh, "Feradach's Cairn," is Kal. Jan. (Thurs., m. 9.) A.D. 626. The battle of [626.] Ard-Corann.<sup>3</sup> The Dalriata were victors; in which fell Fiachna son of Deman. The battle of Carn-Feradhaigh in Cliu,<sup>4</sup> in which Failbhe Flann of Feimin was victor. Guaire Aidhne fled. Conall, son of Maeldubh, fled; and the King of Ui-Maini was slain.

The battle of Both,<sup>11</sup> in which Suibne Menn, son of Fiachna, was victor, and Domnall, son of Aedh, fled. The killing of Suibne Menn, son of Fiachna (son<sup>12</sup> of Feradach, son of Muiredach, son supposed by O'Donovan to be the old name of Seefin, a hill in the bar. of Coshlea, in that county. Four Mast., A.M. 3656, note g.

<sup>6</sup> Ath-cuma-ind-seisir.—The "ford of the slaughter of the Six." Not identified. The orig. text of these lines (a fragment of some poem) is added, in orig. hand, in the lower marg. of fol. 23a, in A. It is not in B. The account of this battle is more fully given in the Ann. Four Mast. (622), where the names of the Connaughtmen slain are mentioned in the prose entry. The Chron. Scot. account (627) is somewhat confused.

<sup>1</sup> Taerr-Breni.—A., B., and Clar. 49. O'Connor renders it "in regione Brefniæ!" But Taerr-Breni should be "Traig-Breni" ("strand of Bren"), as in the Four Mast., Chron. Scot., Book of Leinster (25a), and other authorities. O'Donovan identifies Traig-Breni (or Brena) with a strand on the shore of Lough Swilly, in the bar. of Inishowen, co. Donegal. Four Mast., at 623, note n. The place is again referred to at the year 629.

of Eoghan), King of Ireland, in Taerr-breni,<sup>1</sup> by Congal Caech, son of Scanlan. The rest of Columban, son of Barrdaeni, abbot of Cluain.<sup>2</sup> Murder of Cummen, son of Colman. The wasting of Leinster by Domnall. Domnall, son of Aedh, son of Ainmire, begins to reign.

Kal. Jan. (Sund., m. 1.) A.D. 628. The battle of [628.] Fidh-eoin,<sup>3</sup> in which Maelcaich,<sup>4</sup> son of Scannal, King of the Cruithni, was victor. The Dalriata were slain. Conad Cerr,<sup>5</sup> King of Dalriata, fell. The battle of Dun-Ceithirnn,<sup>6</sup> in which Congal Caech fled, and Domnall, son of Aedh, was victor; and in which fell Guaire, son of Forindan. Or, the battle of Fidh-eoin,<sup>3</sup> in which fell Aedan's grandsons, Rigullon [and] Failbe.<sup>7</sup> The death of Eochaidh Buidhe, King of the Picts, the son of Aedan. So I find in the Book of Cuanu. Or thus<sup>8</sup> it is related in the Book of Dubhdalethe: the battle of Lethirbhe,<sup>9</sup> between the Cenel-mic-Erca and the Cenel-Feradaigh, in which Maelfithrich fell. Ernaine, son of Fiachna, was victor.

Kal. Jan. (Mond., m. 12.) A.D. 629. The battle of [629.] Lethirbhe, between the Cinel-Eoghain themselves, in which Maelfithrich fell; and the battle of Mitán. Taerr-breni<sup>10</sup> is burned; and the killing of Brandubh, son of Maelcobha.

Kal. Jan. (Tues., m. 23.) A.D. 630. The battle of [630.] the son of Alli,<sup>11</sup> and the death of Cined,<sup>12</sup> son of Lugtren, King of the Picts.

Aedan's death is entered at the year 605 supra, and Conang's at 621. O'Connor prints the names of Rigullon and Failbe re guillon Faelbe, and translates "a servo Falbi!"

which of these islands is meant, see Reeves' Adamnan, p. 374, note r. The Four Mast. have the entry at the year 627; but the correct date is 635.

<sup>6</sup> Mor-Mumhan.—Mor mugan, A. Mor mugan, B. Mor-Mumhan ("Mor of Munster") was wife to Finghin, King of Munster, ancestor of the O'Sullivans. She is described as the paragon of the Irishwomen of her time, in several old authorities. A very curious account of her life and adventures is contained in the Book of Leinster, p. 274, sq.

Kal. Jan. (Wed., m. 4.) A.D. 631. The battle of [631.] <sup>BIS</sup> Cathloen,<sup>1</sup> King of the Britons, and of Anfrith.<sup>2</sup> The burning of Great Bangor, in Britain; and the killing of Ronan, son of Baetan. The battle of Ath-abla,<sup>3</sup> in which Dichuill, son of Fergus Tuile,<sup>4</sup> was slain by Munstermen. Inis-Medgoeth<sup>5</sup> was founded. Mor-Mumhan,<sup>6</sup> daughter of Aedh Bennan, died.

Kal. Jan. (Sat., m. 26.) A.D. 633. The murder of [633.] two sons of Aedh Slanè, by Conall son of Suibhne, at Loch-Treithni on Fremhuin,<sup>10</sup> viz.:—Congal, King of the Brega, and Ailill Cruitire,<sup>11</sup> ancestor of Sil-Dluthaigh.

Kal. Jan. (Sund., m. 7.) A.D. 634. Murder of Conall son [634.] of Suibhne, in the house of the son of Nafraech, by Diarmait son of Aedh Slanè. The battle of Cuil-Caelain by Diarmait, son of Aedh Slanè, in which fell Maelumai son of Oengus.<sup>12</sup> The church of Rechra<sup>13</sup> was founded. A great snow killed many in Magh-Bregh. The repose of Fintan<sup>14</sup>

as it is not found in Tigernach, nor in the Chron. Scot.

<sup>11</sup> Battle of Roth.—Adamnan writes the name Roth (Vit. Columb. iii., 5). Better known as the "battle of Magh-rath." The place where this famous battle was fought is now known as Moira, a village in a parish of the same name, bar. of Lower Iveagh, co. Down. A romantic, but valuable, account of the battle has been edited Kal. Jan. (Wed., m. 29.) A.D. 636. The battle of [636.] Roth,<sup>11</sup> and the battle of Saeltirè, were fought on the same day; Conall Cael, son of Maelcoba, colleague<sup>12</sup> of Domnall, of the Cinel-Eogain, was victor in the battle of Saeltirè; and the death of Failbhe Flann of Femhin,<sup>13</sup> King of Munster. Mochuta<sup>14</sup> of Raithin rests.

Kal. Jan. (Thurs., m. 10.) A.D. 637. The battle of [637.] Glenn-Mureson<sup>15</sup> and the siege of Etin.<sup>15</sup> Cronan Mac U Loeghde, abbot of Clonmacnoise, died.

Kal. Jan. (Frid., m. 21.) A.D. 638. The killing of [638.]

by O'Donovan, from the Yellow Book of Lecan, for the Irish Archæol. Soc. (Dublin, 1842.) See Reeves' Adamnan, p. 200, note n.

Carthach, founded a religious establishment at Lismore, co. Waterford, which subsequently became a bishop's see, and was united to that of Waterford, A.D. 1363. Lanigan gives a very interesting account of St. Mochuta. Eccl. Hist. of Ireland, vol. 2, pp. 350-6.

<sup>15</sup> Glenn-Mureson — Etin. — Dean Reeves thinks Glenn-Mureson was the name of "a tract in the debatable ground of West Lothian," and that by Etin was not meant Edinburgh, as some suppose, but "Cair-Eden . . . . . now Carriden, a parish on the Forth, in Linlithgowshire." Adamnan, p. 202, note.

<sup>5</sup> Dolaissi, son of Cuinid.—Mac Cuimðæ, A. Dolaissi is a variation of Molaissi, and Laisren, by either of which names the Saint is better known. His festival in the Calendar is 18 April. In the Book of Leinster, (p. 349, col. 4), and in other old authorities, the father of St. Molaissi is called Cairill.

Kal. Jan. (Sat., m. 2.) A.D. 639. The battle of [639.] Bis. Cathair-Cinncon.<sup>7</sup> Aengus Liathdana was victor. Mael-duin, son of Aedh Bennan, fled.

Kal. Jan. (Mond., m. 13.) A.D. 640. Death of [640.] Maelodhar Caech, King of the Airthera. Death of Bruide son of Foith.<sup>8</sup> Domnall, son of Aedh, pitched his camp in Druim-Náo. Wreck of a boat of the family of Ia. Siege of Ritha.<sup>9</sup> Burning of Maelduin in Inis-Cain.<sup>10</sup> Murder of Maelduin son of Fergus, and of Maelduin son of Colman.

Kal. Jan. (Tues., m. 24.) A.D. 641. The death of [641.] Domnall, son of Aedh, King of Ireland, in the end of January. Domnall Brecc<sup>11</sup> was slain afterwards, at the end of the year, in December, in the battle of Srath-Caruin<sup>12</sup> (by Hoan,<sup>13</sup> King of the Britons). He reigned 15 years. The killing of Ailill, son of Colman, King of fort near Rockbarton, bar. of Small County, co. Limerick. (Four Mast., A.D. 636, note t.) See under the year 642 infra.

obit is given above at the year 628. See under 685 infra, where the death of Domnall Brecc is again entered.

ratōr is added in the margin in A.

 breviation for "contra," MS. B. that

 of Strathclyde. This battle is not noticed in the Anglo-Sax. Chron.

 The Four Mast. (642), and the Chron. Scot. (641), state that she was queen of Faolan, King of Leinster, whose obit is given by the F. M. at the year 665.

 an inaccurate repetition of the entry under the year 639, where the name is more correctly written "Cathair-

 nan son of Foith," referred to under the year 634 supra. O'Connor has strangely misunderstood this entry, which he prints wrongly, and renders

Kal. Jan. (Wed., m. 5.) A.D. 642. Death of Uaisle, [642.] daughter of Suibhne.<sup>4</sup> The repose of Cronan, bishop of Nendruim. The battle of Cenn-con.<sup>5</sup> The burning of Iarnbodb, son of Gartnat.<sup>6</sup> Cellach and Conall Cael (i.e., two sons<sup>7</sup> of Maelcoba, son of Aedh, son of Ainmire), begin to reign, as others say. Constantine, son of Constantine, reigned twenty-eight years. Here it is doubted who reigned after Domhnall. Other historiographers say that four kings reigned, viz., Cellach and Conall Cael, and the two sons of Aedh Slane (son of Diarmait,<sup>8</sup> son of Fergus Cerrbheoil, son of Conall Cremthainn, son of Niall Nine-hostager), viz. :—Diarmait and Blathmac, in joint sovereignty.

Kal. Jan. (Thurs., m. 16.) A.D. 643. Murder of two [643.] grandsons of Boghaine, viz. :—Maelbresail and Maelan-faith. The killing of Flann Aenaigh. The death of Bresal, son of Sechnasach.

Kal. Jan. (Sat., m. 27.) A.D. 644. Death of Furu- [644.] dran, son of Becc,<sup>9</sup> son of Cuanu, King of Ui-Mic-Uais. Locheni, son of Fingin, King of the Cruithni,<sup>10</sup> died.

Kal. Jan. (Sund., m. 8, alias 9.) A.D. 645. The [645.] wounding of Scannal, son of Becc, son of Fiachra, King of the Cruithni.<sup>10</sup> Mac Lasre, abbot of Bangor, rested.

by "Comburitur postea propter boyes filii Garthnat!"

King Aedh, son of Ainmire. See above, at the year 597.

<sup>10</sup> Cruithni.—These were the Cruithni (or Picts) of Ireland. Skene thought the Picts of Scotland were meant, as he has included these two entries in the extracts regarding Scotch events, taken by him from these Annals. Chron. Picts and Scots, (p. 348). See Reeves Adamnan, p. 94, note h, and Todd's Irish Nennius, Add. Notes, p. xlvii.

 tioned by his epithet "Bolg-luatha" under 625 and 627 supra, where see notes. The death of a "Crunnmael Erbuilg," King of the Leinstermen, is entered infra, at the year 655, who seems to be the same person, Erbuilg (of the "big sack" or "belly") being probably a variation of the epithet

Connaught, whose obit is given by the Four Mast., and also infra, at A.D.
 662. On the lower margin of MS. A., fol. 23b, four stanzas in Irish are written (which are not in B.), without any sign to indicate where they should be introduced into the text, if they were intended to be so introduced. The three first are ascribed to Cumeni, and the fourth to Guaire. But as they are somewhat corrupt, and contain no historical fact, it has not been considered necessary to reproduce them here.

Kal. Jan. (Mond., m. 19, alias 20.) A.D. 646. Maelcobha, son of Fiachna, King of Ulad, was slain. Duncath, descendant of Ronan, slain. The battle of Colgu, son of Crunnmael Bolg-luatha,<sup>1</sup> King of the Ui-Ceinn-selaigh. [646.]

Kal. Jan. (Tuesd., m. 30, alias 1.) A.D. 647. Fursa<sup>2</sup> [647.] BIS. the Pious died.

Kal. Jan. (Thurs., m. 11, alias 12.) A.D. 648. The [648.] killing of Raghallach, son of Uada, King of Connaught. The battle of Carn-Conaill, where Guaire<sup>3</sup> fled, and Diarmait, son of Aedh Slanè, was victor. The death of Oengus Bron-bachal,<sup>4</sup> King of Cinel-Coirpri. The war of the descendants of Aedan,<sup>5</sup> and of Gartnat son of Accidan. The repose of Fursa<sup>6</sup> in Peronne.

Kal. Jan. (Frid., m. 22, alias 23.) A.D. 649. The [649.] battle of Ossu [Oswiu] against Pante [Penda]. The battle of Dun-Cremtain, in which fell Oengus son of Domnall. The sons of Maelcobha were victors, viz.:—Cellach and Conall Cael. The death of Cathasach, son of Domnall Brecc.<sup>7</sup> Death of Cronan of Magh-bilè. In this year Bede was born<sup>8</sup>.

Kal. Jan. (Saturd., m. 3, alias 4.) A.D. 650. The [650.] repose of Aedan, bishop of the Saxons; and the killing of two sons of Bla[th]macc, son of Aedh Slanè, viz.:—Dunchad and Conall.

<sup>2</sup> O, mill.—CC muilinn. These words should be repeated, to complete the line, according to a practice frequently followed by Irish Poets. In the Ann. Four Mast. (647), the authorship of these verses is ascribed to Maelodran. But in a curious account of the catastrophe, and the cause thereof, contained in the MS. Rawlinson, B. 502, Bodleian Lib.

(fol. 73, b 2), the composition is attributed to Ultan (i.e., St. Ultan of Ardrackan). In this account, three persons are stated to have been killed, viz.:—Dunchad, Conall, and Maelodhar, who are represented as the sons of Diarmait MacCerbhaill (sl. 564 supra). But this last statement must be an error. The event is thus referred to in Mageoghegan's Transl. of the Annals of Clonmacnoise, at the year 648. "The two sons of Hugh Slane, Donogh and Conell, were killed by the Lynstermen, near Mollingar,

 Gave his sons for . . . . .
 Jesus shall take his two sons
 From Blathmac, in revenge therefor.

Maelodran sang :—

O, mill,<sup>2</sup>
 Though much of wheat thou didst grind,
 It was not the grinding of oats
 Thou didst grind on Cerbhall's descendants.

The stuff which the mill grinds
 Is not oats but red wheat.
 Of the saplings of the great tree
 Is the 'feed' of Maelodrain's mill.

 The death of Ferith son of Totholan, and of Tolarg son of Foith,<sup>7</sup> King of the Picts. The murder of Conall in the mill of Oran, called Mollen-Oran." See O'Donov. Four Mast., A.D. 647, note d.

<sup>3</sup> Oissen son of Osirg.—Oswine, son of Osric, King of Deira from 647 to 651, when he was slain. See Anglo-Sax. Chron., and Bede's Eccl. Hist., III., 14.

<sup>6</sup> Culene.—It is stated in the Ann. Four Mast. (648), and Chron. Scot. (649), that Culene was King of Ui-Failghe, or Offaly.

<sup>7</sup> Tolarg son of Foith.—Foith is the form in which the Irish writers generally represent the "Wid" of the Pictish Chronicle, in which the name of Talorc (for Tolarg) appears after the names of "Garnard filius Wid," and "Breidei filius Wid," with the addition "frater eorum." See Skene's Chron. Picts and Scots, p. 7.

<sup>6</sup> Duchua Lochra.—Duchua (or Dachua) of "Luachair." Also called Mochua and Cronan. His festival is given as 22nd June in the Calendar, at which date the Martyr. Donegal has "Cronan, that is Mochua of Luachair, Abbot of Fearn (Ferns, co. Wexford").

<sup>7</sup> Aedh Bedri — Cummen. — The Four Masters (649), and the Chron. Scot. (651), state that Aedh Bedri (or Beathra) was the son of Cummen.

<sup>8</sup> Srath-Ethairt. — The Srath (or Strath=stratum), or "holm," of Ethart. Not identified. Dean Reeves thinks it was the name of a place in Perthshire. Adamnan, p. 375, note u. The record of this battle is more fully given in the Chron. Scot., at the year 651.

Kal. Jan. (Wedn., m. 6, alias 7.) A.D. 653. The [653.] killing of Conall,<sup>3</sup> son of Maelcobha, i.e., by<sup>4</sup> Diarmait, son of Aedh Slane. Bishop Colman Mac-Ui-Telduibh,<sup>5</sup> and Ossene Fota, two abbots of Cluain-Iraird, died. Duchua Lochra,<sup>6</sup> abbot of Ferns, rested. The killing of Fergus, son of Domnall, and of Fergus, son of Rogailnech, and of Aedh Bedri,<sup>7</sup> and of Cummen.<sup>7</sup> The battle of Srath-Ethairt,<sup>8</sup> in which Duncath, son of Conang,<sup>9</sup> was slain. [The death] of Aedh Roin, son of Maelcobha. Beda<sup>10</sup> was born in this year.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 655. The battle of Cumascach<sup>12</sup> son of [654.] Ailill, in which he fell. Crunnmael son of Suibhne was [655.] victor. Battle of Pante,<sup>13</sup> King of the Saxons. Ossu<sup>14</sup> was victor. Battle of Anna.<sup>15</sup> The death of Crunnmael Erbuile,<sup>16</sup> son of Ronan, King of the Leinstermen. The

<sup>11</sup> Nem Mac-Ui-Birn.—"Nem, son of the descendant of Birn." O'Connor very inaccurately prints the name Nein mc hui Ibirubir! The Four Masters state (654) that Nem was a successor of Enne of Ara. (St. Enna, or Enda, of Aranmore Island, in Galway Bay). Nem's day in the Calendar is June 14.

<sup>12</sup> Battle of Cumascach.—The Four Mast. (650) call this the battle of Flescach, and add that Cumascach, son of Ailill, was Chief of Ui Cremh-thainn. The site (Flescach) has not been identified. By "battle of Cumascach," the Annalist meant that it was a battle in which Cumascach was slain. There are numerous examples of this practice throughout these Annals.

that Delenn may be Telenn, in the west of the co. Donegal. Four Mast., A.D. 654, note a.

Death of Cel- [657.] lach<sup>9</sup> son of Maelcobha, and of Cellach, son of Saran (or Ronan),<sup>10</sup> and of Fiachra Telnan, and of Blathmac, son of Ronan, son of Columb.<sup>11</sup> Death of Guret, King of Al-Cluathe,<sup>12</sup> and of Fergal<sup>13</sup> son of Domnall. A great storm. Tomain, son of Taithen, dies.

Kal. Jan. (Tues., m. 2.) A.D. 658. Dimma Dubh,<sup>14</sup> [658.] bishop of Connor, and Cummeni, bishop of Naendruim, and Dunchadh son of Aedh Slanè, died; and the slaying of Ordoith son of Sechnasach, and of Concenn son of Ladgnen, and of Flodubur<sup>15</sup> King of the Franks.

a curious combination of Fergaile, the genit. case of the name Fergal, and the Lat. conjunction que.

chaidh Buidhe, son of Aedan, and 12th King of the Scotch Dalriads.

<sup>5</sup> Totholan.—The name is otherwise written Tuathalan, and is a diminutive of the name Tuathal. This is the last entry on fol. 24a of MS. A., on the upper margin of which a stanza in Irish is written, and two on the lower margin, without any marks to indicate the place in the text where they should be introduced. It is doubtful if they have any particular connection with the text at all, as they do not occur in MS. B., nor in Clar. 49. [They do not seem worth printing.

nepotis in A. and B., but nepos in Clar. 49. For the name "Conainn," the Four Mast. and Chron. Scot. (657) have "Conaing."

<sup>8</sup> In Peronne.—In perpuna, A. In pruna, B. Clar. 49 has "in prisona," although O'Connor states (note 2, ad. an.) that this MS. reads "in propria persona!" The death of St. Fursa is noticed above under the years 646 and 647. The present entry is added in al. man. in A. But it is part of the original text in B.

Dr. Todd. See Book of Hymns, pt. I., pp. 81-93.

<sup>14</sup> Diarmaid's colleague.—ƿocuƿ Diarmada. The battle of Ogoman seems to have been fought between the two brothers, Diarmaid and Blathmac (sons of Aedh Slainé), who were Joint-Kings of Ireland at this time, and whose death is entered under the year 664 infra.

Editor expresses the opinion that from this "Fertais" the name of Belfast has been derived.

For various other forms of this curious name consult Reeves' Adamnan, p. 62, note b. See Armstrong's Gaelic Dictionary, under the word sgiathanach, where a good deal of nonsense regarding the etymology of the name "Skye" is printed.

<sup>6</sup> Diarmaid.—This entry is represented in B. by Uel hic Diarmait 7 Blaimac 7 Fechin morctui runt .i. don buíoe conaill. ("Or in this year Diarmait, and Blai[th]mac, and Fechin died, i.e., of the 'Buidhechonaill.'") The decease of all three is entered above at the year 664.

<sup>8</sup> Cinel-Coirpre, i.e., the race of Cairbre, son of Niall Nine-hostager, who were at this period seated in the present bar. of Granard, co. Longford, but whose descendants afterwards gave name to the districts now represented by the baronies of Carbury, in the cos. of Kildare and Sligo.

<sup>14</sup> [Many] were destroyed there. — The original, σελετι ρυντ ιβουγ, seems corrupt, and should probably be corrected to ετ μυλτι σελετι ρυντ ιβι (or ιβουεμ). For ιβουγ, O'Conor reads ibi, as does the "translator" (?) of Clar. 49.

deal of attention to St. Colman, Eccles. Hist., Book III., caps. 25, 26.

The Four Masters, who often ignore events connected with Scotch history, have no reference to the death of Maelduin son of Rigullan, or of Bodb son of Ronan Ua Congaile, having apparently regarded them as members of the Gaelic family of Alba (or Scotland).

of Failbhe is noticed at the year 672. His obit appears under 678 infra.

<sup>12</sup> In the months.—in menye, A., B., and Clar. 49. The appearance of this comet is noticed in the Anglo-Sax. Chron. at the year 678, where it is stated that it shone every morning for three months like a sun-beam. Its appearance is likewise recorded in the Chron. Scot. and Annals of Clonmacnoise, at the year 673, but under 677 (which is the proper year) in Tigernach.

<sup>2</sup> Beccan Ruimm.—Plainly so written in A. and B. But Clar. 49 incorrectly reads Ruimim, whilst O'Conor prints Beccan puim . . . . The Four Masters, who write the name "Becan Ruimind," state (675) that he died in Britain, on March 17th, which is his festival day in the Martyr. of Donegal.

Slaughter of the Cinel-Loarnn, in Tirínn. Toimsnamho, King of Ossory, [slain.]<sup>3</sup> The battle of Dun-locha, and the battle of Liacc-Moelain, and the enslavement of Elend. The death of Drost son of Domnall. A battle in Calathross,<sup>4</sup> in which Domnall Brecc was vanquished.

Kal. Jan. (Sat., m. 13.) A.D. 678. The repose of [678.] Failbhe,<sup>5</sup> abbot of Ia. Cennfaelad,<sup>6</sup> son of Ailill, son of Baetan, a wise man, rested. The battle of Finsnechta<sup>7</sup> against Becc Bairche. The falling asleep of Nechtan Neir. Domnall, son of Suibne, dies by the Ulaid.<sup>8</sup>

Kal. Jan. A.D. 679. Colman, abbot of Bangor, rests. [679.] MS. The assassination of Fianamail,<sup>9</sup> son of Maeltuile, King of the Leinstermen. Cathal, son of Raghallach, dies. A battle of the Saxons, in which Ailmíne son of Ossu<sup>10</sup> was to 679, and predecessor of Adamnan. Failbhe is mentioned above at the years 672, 675.

Mast., at A.D. 678, Fianamail is stated to have been slain by one of his own people, at the command of Finachta Fledach. But in the list of Leinster Kings in the Book of Leinster (p. 39, col. 2), Fianamail (the term of whose reign is given as 12 years), is stated to have been slain by the Ui-Cend-selaigh in the battle of Aife, or of Selga, in the fortuatha ("borders") of Leinster, or by one of his own people. In the Fragments of Irish Annals, the beginning of Fianamail's reign is erroneously entered under the year 679.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 682. Dunchad Mursce,<sup>16</sup> son of Mael- [682.]

Picts and Scots. See the Index thereto, v. Dunfother.

<sup>11</sup> Cennfaelad.—In the Ann. Four Mast. (680) it is stated that Cennfaeladh was slain after the house in which he was sheltered had been captured against him; and that his slayer was one Ulcha Derg ("Red Beard") of the "Conmaicne Cuile."

of Dalaraide in Antrim. Not the Picts of Scotland.

<sup>15</sup> Corcach.—Cōrcōigī, the genit. form. Ware has no notice of this successor of St. Barra, or Finnbar, founder of the Monastery of Cork.

Dunchad (who was King of Connaught) had lived, or been fostered, in the territory of "Muirisc," in the north of the present barony of Tire-ragh, co. Sligo. See O'Donovan's
Hy Fiachrach, p. 314, note f.

of Glassary in Argyle." Reeves'

<sup>2</sup> Dun-Duirn.—Dean Reeves thinks that this may be "Dundurn, at the east end of Loch-Earn in Perthshire" (Adamnan, p. 377, note c.)

<sup>3</sup> Of October.—October, B. See Reeves' Adamnan, p. 182, note a, in which the learned Editor, with characteristic industry, has collected numerous references to the pestilences which prevailed in this country anciently.

"Tree of St. Lasair," a monastery said to have been near Clonmacnoise.
See Todd's Irish Nennius, p. 208, note x. The site of the monastery is not now known.

"abb Aondromo," "abbot of Aon-druim." A very old hand, like that of Ussher, writes "Antrim" in the margin. But Nendrum (Mahee Island, in Strangford Lough) seems to have been meant. See Reeves' Eccl.

The words hoc anno are omitted in B.

in inrola, Clar. 49. The Chron.
Scot. (681=684) has in hiberia

dubh, was slain. The battle of Corand, in which were slain Colgu son of Blathmac, and Fergus, son of Mael-duin, King of the Cinel-Coirpri. The siege of Dun-Att,<sup>1</sup> and the siege of Dun-Duirn.<sup>2</sup> The beginning of the mortality of children, in the month of October.<sup>3</sup> The falling asleep of Airmedach of the Craebh.<sup>4</sup>

Kal. Jan. A.D. 683. Mortality of children. The [683.] BIS. death of Maine, abbot of Noendruim;<sup>5</sup> and the death<sup>6</sup> of Derforgall. The death of Cucolum. The battle of Caissel-Finnbair. Loch Echach<sup>7</sup> was turned into blood in this year.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 684. A great storm. An earthquake [684.] in the Island.<sup>8</sup> The Saxons wasted<sup>9</sup> Magh-Bregh, and several churches, in the month of June. The death of Conghal son of Guaire, and the death of Bresal,<sup>10</sup> son of Fergus, from disease.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 685. The battle of Dun-Nechtain<sup>11</sup> was [685] fought on the 20th day of May, on Saturday, in which Etrith,<sup>12</sup> son of Oswy, King of the Saxons, the 15th year of his reign being ended,<sup>13</sup> was slain, together with a great ἰνρολα ("in the Island of Ireland"), which seems more correct.

represented by the baronies of Iveagh, co. Down. Reeves' Eccl. Antiqq., pp. 348-352.

<sup>1</sup> Tula-aman.—The meaning of this is unknown to the Editor, who is unable to say whether it is the name of a person, or a term for some fiery element. O'Connor translates "Tula regalia"!

<sup>3</sup> Domnall Brecc.—If this is the same Domnall Brecc referred to above at the years 641 and 677, as no doubt he is, there is much confusion regarding him, not only in these Annals, but also in the Annals of Tigernach. See Reeves' Adamnan, pp. 202-3.

The Chron. Scot., at the year 682 (=685), records the death of Domnall Brecc in nearly the same words as are used in the entry at 641 supra.

<sup>4</sup> Banban Oscach.—The epithet oscach is possibly for os cach, "beyond all." He is called "Banban eḡnaidh," or "Banban the learned," at his festival day (9th May), in the Martyr. of Donegal, and "Banban sapiens" in the Martyr. of Tallaght. In the Fragments of Annals, at 686, Banban is called "Scribe of Kildare."

Kal. Jan. A.D. 686. The killing of Feradach, son of Congal. The repose of Dochuma-Conoc, abbot of Glenn-da-locha. The 'falling asleep' of Rosseni, abbot of Corcach-mor.<sup>5</sup> The death of Osseni, bishop of the Monastery of Finntan son of Finnguine.<sup>6</sup> Adamnan brought back 60 captives<sup>7</sup> to Ireland. [686.]

Kal. Jan. A.D. 687. The repose of Segeni, from Achadh-claidib,<sup>8</sup> bishop of Ard-Macha. Murder of Cano, son of Gartnaid. Finsnechta<sup>9</sup> entered into religion. The battle of Imlech-Pich,<sup>10</sup> wherein fell Dubhdainbher, King of Ard-Cianachta,<sup>11</sup> and Uarcride<sup>12</sup> Ua Osseni; and Congalach, son of Conang, escaped by flight. Niall, son of Cernach,<sup>13</sup> was victor. [687.]

Chron. Scot. 683 (=687), state that Finntan (called Munnu) was the son of Tulcan. This Finntan was the founder of the monastery of Tech-Munnu, or Taghmon, co. Wexford. But Osseni is usually regarded as abbot of Clonenagh, Queen's co., with which Finntan (Munnu) was also connected.

Ταῖδῃ. A Bardic name for the land of the sept which gave name to Ard-Cianachta, and which was descended from Tadhg, son of Cian, son of Oilill Oluim (King of Munster in the 2nd century).

 To see your dogs, your grayhounds, your women,
 In the possession of your foes.

If Crundmael's son had not healed
 My sorrow for me, truly,
 Of blood and gore my tears would be,
 For the dead of Imlech.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 688. Iolan, bishop of Cenngarath,<sup>4</sup> [688.] died. Finnachta returns to the kingship.<sup>5</sup> The killing of Diarmait of Midhe, son of Airmedach 'caech.'<sup>6</sup> Death

 Crannamhna.<sup>9</sup> Part of the Sun was darkened.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 689. Congal, son of Maelduin, son of [689.]

fies (note e, ad. an.) with "Derry-brughis, alias Killyman, in the county of Armagh."

devotional forms of the name Becan. The church, anciently called Cluain-ard-Mobecoc, is now known, according to O'Donovan, as the old church of Kilpeacan, in the bar. of Clanwilliam, co. Tipperary. (Ann. Four Mast., A.D. 689, note f.) This Becan is wrongly said to be of Cluain-Iraird (Clonard, co. Meath), in Tigernach (690), Four Mast. (687), and Frag. of Irish Annals (690).

of Ordoith,<sup>1</sup> and Ailill, son of Dungal of Eilne,<sup>2</sup> son of Scannal, were slain. The burning of Armagh. The death of Finguine the Tall,<sup>3</sup> and of Feradach the Fat son of Nechtlecc; and Coblaith daughter of Cano dies. Dobécoc of Cluain-ard<sup>4</sup> rested. Justinian<sup>5</sup> the younger, son of Constantine, [reigns] ten years.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 690. Cronan son of Ua Chualne, abbot [690.] of Bangor,<sup>6</sup> died. Theodore, bishop of Britain, rested. The Dalriata<sup>7</sup> spoiled the Cruithni and the Ulaid. Fithchellach, son of Flann, King of Ui-Maine, dies. A great storm, on the 16th of the Kalends of October, overwhelmed some six persons of the community of Ia.

Kal. Jan. (Mond., m. 7.) A.D. 691. Adamnan comes [691.] to Ireland in the fourteenth year<sup>8</sup> after the death of Failbhe. Conchad the bishop dies. Fergus son of Aedan, King of the Province,<sup>9</sup> died. The killing of Maeldith-raibh son of Eoganan. The moon was turned<sup>10</sup> into the colour of blood on the Nativity of St. Martin. The siege of Dun-Deavæ dibsi.<sup>11</sup>

Kal. Jan. A.D. 692. Bruide son of Bili, King of [692.] Fortrenn, dies, and Alphin son of Nechtin. The death<sup>12</sup> of ries of the Cruithne and Ulidians, now the county of Down, and the southern half of Antrim." Reeves' Adamnan, p. 377, note d.

<sup>9</sup> Fergus son of Aedan, King of the Province.—By "the Province," is meant Ulidia, generally designated in Irish Annals the coicir, "fifth," or Province. The Four Masters (689, O'Donovan's ed.) have "Fergus son of Lodan." The Frag. of Ir. Annals (692) have "Fergus son of Aodhan." But the name in the list of "Kings of Ulad" in the Book of Leinster (p. 41, col. 3) is "Oengus son of Aedan,"

<sup>12</sup> Death.—Mονr, A. MS. B. has the abbrev. for "et" instead of monr, and makes the entry run on as a continuation of the previous sentence, which ends with "Nechtín," in A. Clar. 49 does not exactly agree with A. or B. But the variations are of no importance.

gart son of Finguine, whose killing ("Jugulatio") is noticed above at the year 685. This Finguine may have been the same as Finghin, fourth in descent from Conall (son of Comghall), 6th King of the Scotch Dalriads. See Reeves' Adamnan, Geneal. Table of Dalriadic Kings.

Kal. Jan. (Frid., m. 10.) A.D. 694. Finsnechta,<sup>12</sup> King of Tara, and Bresal his son, were slain (at Grellach-dollaigh<sup>13</sup>), by<sup>14</sup> Aedh, son of Dluthach (son<sup>15</sup> of Ailill, son of Aedh Slanè), and by Congalach, son of Conang (son<sup>15</sup> of Congal, son of Aedh Slanè). [694.]

the Kingship of the Mercians in 675, on the death of his brother, Wulfhere. But the last battle Æthelred is stated to have fought was a battle against King Ecgferth of Northumbria, in 679 (Anglo-Sax. Chron.) In this case, the above entry is somewhat out of place. See Lappenberg's England under the Anglo-Saxon Kings. (Thorpe's Transl.), London, 1845, vol. i., p. 291.

Finnachta, form the subject of a long tract in the Book of Leinster p. 294b, sq.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 698. A mortality of cows in Saxon- [698.] land.<sup>15</sup> The battle of Fiannamail son of Osseni. Tarain<sup>16</sup> proceeds to Ireland.

<sup>10</sup> Aedh Aird.—"Aedh of Ard." "High Hugh," Clar. 49. The name is written Aedh Airedh in the Ann. Four Mast. (696), and Aed Airech vel [Aed] Ared, in the list of the Kings of Dalaraide in the Book of Leinster (p. 41, col. 5), where Aed is stated to have been slain in the battle of Fernmag. The entry of this battle in the Frag. of Annals (697) is very inaccurate.

<sup>11</sup> Bernith, who was called Brectrid.—The "Berctus," or "Behrt," who wasted the plain of Bregia in 684. See above under that year. The Anglo-Sax. Chron. has the death of "Eorht the aldorman" at the year 699 (Thorpe's Translation).

<sup>13</sup> Ainfcellach.—The son of Ferchar Fota (or "Ferchar the Tall.") He was of the House of Loarn Mor, and 17th King of the Scotch Dalriads. The death of Ainfcellach, in the battle of Finn-glenn, is recorded under the year 718 infra. See under the years 733 and 735.

the same as the "Fiannamail son of Osseni," mentioned under the preceding year.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 700. A mortality of cows.<sup>8</sup> Colman [700.] Ua Oirc,<sup>9</sup> Cellach son of Maelracha, a bishop, [and] Dicuill,<sup>10</sup> abbot of Cluain-eois, died. Ailill, son of Cu-cen-mathair,<sup>11</sup> King of Munster, dies. Feidelmídh, son of Fergus, son of Aedhan,<sup>12</sup> dies. The assassination of Aedh Odbha.<sup>13</sup> Aedh, son of Dluthach,<sup>14</sup> [and] Congal, son of Eoganan, died. A conflict in Scii<sup>15</sup>, in which Conaing, son him Colman Ua hEirc ("C. grandson or descendant) of Erc," and state that he was abbot of Cluain-Iraird (Clonard in Meath.) The Martyr of Donegal has his festival at Dec. 5.

<sup>15</sup> A conflict in Scii.—Imbairecc 1 Scii. Dean Reeves translates this "bellum navale" (Adamnan, 378), and Skene "Water battle" (Chron. Picts and Scots, p. 353). Both were no doubt misled by O'Connor, who wrongly prints Imbairecc iscu, and translates "prælium navale," confounding the words iscu ("in Skye") with uisce, the Irish for "water." The name of Skye is written "Scia" in Adamnan (lib. i., cap. 33). See Reeves' ed., p. 62, note b.

Cinel-Cathbaid) was the tribe-name of the descendants of Cathbad, grandson of Loarn Mor, 1st King of the Scotch Dalriads.

<sup>6</sup> Ui-Fidgenti. — For Finngenti, A. and B. incorrectly read finngenti (which would mean "Fair Gentiles," and was the name applied by the Irish to one class of the Norse invaders of Ireland). For the situation and history of the Ui-Fidgenti, see O'Donovan's Four Masters, note m, at A.D. 1178.

of Dunchad,<sup>1</sup> and the son of Cuanna, were slain. The destruction of Dun-Ollaigh<sup>2</sup> by<sup>3</sup> Selbach.<sup>4</sup> The killing of the Cinel-Cathbotha.<sup>5</sup> The assassination of Conall, son of Suibhne, King of the Desi. descendant (or grandson) of Conaing." The Four Masters (699) state that Irgalach was "son of Conaing," as in the Frag. of Irish Annals (A.D. 700, 702). In the latter authority, at the year indicated, some very curious particulars are given regarding this remarkable character, and his strange contest with Adamnan. See also Reeves' Adamnan, pp. liii., liv., 179. Irgalach's death is entered under the next year; and his son, Cinaeth, is mentioned at 723.

<sup>14</sup> The enemy.—The word ἀνταγωνιστής, which seems to have been omitted in A., B., and Clar. 49, occurs in the Chron. Scot. (at 699), and in the Frag. of Annals (703). The name of Rathgann (or Radgund, as it is written in the Frag. of Ann.) is omitted in the Chron. Scot. O'Connor, with his usual inaccuracy, prints in place of the above clause, "Ecclesiarum Dei [Vindicatores] Ulait victores erant."

"The battle of Corand in which fell Loingsech, son of Oengus, King of Ireland, with his three sons, and the King of Cairpri of Drium-cliaibh, and the King of Ui-Conaill-Gabhra, and ten kings of the kings of Ireland along with them. In Cloenfind, at the head of Oenagh-Logha [it was fought], between the Cinel-Conaill and Connaughtmen. Cellach Cime, son of Raghallach, son of Uata, King of Connaught [ ]." A few words have been cut off by the binder.

On the 4th of the Ides of July, at the 6th hour of Saturday,<sup>2</sup> this battle was fought. Colman, son of Finnbarr, abbot of Lis-mor, died. Ailen-daingen<sup>3</sup> is built. <sup>1</sup> Siege of Rithe.—Obcepio, A. Obcepio, B. The situation of Rithe does not seem to be known; but it is probably in Scotland.

Gaedil." A good deal regarding Aldfrith is collected in Reeves' Adamnan, p. 185, note l. The death of Aldfrith is entered in the Anglo-Sax. Chron. under the year 705.

<sup>2</sup> Conamail, son of Cano.—The name of Cano (who was also called Cugarbh, and Cano-garbh), is usually printed "Canonni" by modern editors. But Canonni is the genit. case of Cano. The form in the Frag. of Annals (686=687) is Cana. The death of Cano is recorded above under the year 687; and his son Conamail is mentioned at 672.

<sup>3</sup> Cennmagair-Fanat.—The original of these two clauses is added by way of gloss in A. and B. Cennmagair is now known as Kinnaweir, in the bar. of Kilmacrenan, co. Donegal; and Fanat is a well-known district in the same barony. Clar. 49, which O'Connor quotes approvingly, has "Congal . . . . regnare in-cipit in Cennmagair, i.e., Fanad," which is not correct. See Ann. Four Mast. at A.D. 702, where the accession of Congal is noticed.

<sup>13</sup> Bachall.—This is for "baculum." Clar. 49 has "the Crostaf [Cross-staff] of Becc Bairche." The entry means that Becc Bairche, assumed the pilgrim's staff; in other words, became a pilgrim. The Four Masters, under the year 704, state that he died on his pilgrimage 12 years afterwards. In the list of the Kings of Ulad in the Book of Leinster, p. 41, col. 3, Becc Bairche, who is stated there to have reigned 24 years, is said to have "died in pilgrimage (éc 1 n-aibíthri). In his Ed. of the Ann. Ult., at this year (note 1), O'Connor gives much unnecessary information on the subject of penance. This Becc Bairche, who was a famous character in Irish History, is referred to above under the years 673 and 678.

<sup>3</sup> Cucuarain.—Canir cuarani, A., B. The Four Masters, at A.D. 706, say that Cucuarain was "King of the Cruithni (i.e., the Picts of Dalaraide, in Antrim), and the Ulaid," and that the name of his slayer was Fionnchu Ua Ronain. The Chron. Scot. (704) agrees with the Four Mast., except as to the name of Cucuarain's destroyer, whom it calls "Finchu Ua Rebain." In the list of the Kings of Ulad contained in the Book of Leinster, p. 41, col. 3, "Cuc-huain" (as the name is represented in the Facsimile), is stated to have been 'son of Dungal,' to have reigned two years, and to have been slain by one "Scandal Find Ua Redain of the Dalaraide." Elsewhere in the latter authority, however (p. 25, col. 1), the same person is described as Cucuárain ní Ulao 7 Cruithentuaithe ("Cuchuarain, King of Ulad and Pictland"). The name of Cucuarain is correctly included in the list of the Kings of Ulad in Reeves' Eccl. Antiqq., p. 354, where the length of his reign is given as five years.

<sup>5</sup> Magh-Elni.—"Magh-Ele," in Four Mast., and Chron. Scot. This was the name of a plain on the east side of the River Bann, about Coleraine, in the co. Antrim. See Reeves'

Suibhne. A hosting of Congal,<sup>1</sup> son of Fergus, upon the Leinstermen. Dunchad<sup>2</sup> held the government of Ia.

The battle of Selga<sup>6</sup> in the borders of Leinster,<sup>7</sup> against the Ui-Cennselaigh, in which were slain two sons of Cellach Cualann, Fiachra and Fiannamhail, and Luirgg<sup>8</sup> with Cellach's Britons; and after a little time Coirpri, son of Cucoluinn, was slain. Maeldoborcon, bishop of Kildare, rested. A battle against the Orkneys, in which the son of Artablár was slain. The plague which is called 'baccach,'<sup>9</sup> with dysentery,<sup>10</sup> in Ireland. Macnio, son of Dubh-da-inber, dies. The killing of Conall, son of Feradach.

<sup>6</sup> Selga.—Selga, or Selggae (as the name is written in the MS. A.), is the genit. form of selg, "hunting," "chace." O'Donovan states (Four Mast., A.D. 707, note n), that Selgge was "the name of a place near Glendalough, in the county of Wicklow." See next note.

<sup>7</sup> In the borders of Leinster.—h<sub>1</sub> for tuath laigen, A. B. Translated "in the outwarde parte of Leinster," in Clar. 49. In the list of the Kings of Leinster in the Book of Leinster (p. 39, col. 2), the death of Fiannamail son of Maeltuili, King of that Province (sl. 679, supra), is stated to have occurred i cath aife no selga . . . . . i for tuath laigen breg, "in the battle of Aife, or Selga, . . . . . in the borders of Brega." The For- tuatha of Leinster comprised that part of the present county of Wicklow containing Glendalough and the Glen of Imaal.

<sup>8</sup> And Luirgg.—et Luirgg, A. B., and Clar. 49. Evidently used as a proper name. But nothing seems known respecting such a person. The corresponding passage in the Ann. Four Mast. (707) is 7 araid ro bnechnuib tangetar hi fornaide Ceallais, "and some of the Britons who had joined Cellach's army." Ceallach Cualann, who was ancestor of the Ui-Cellaigh-Cualand, a tribe seated in the north of the present co. Wicklow, was rather a famous person in his time. See at the year 703 supra; and again at 714, where his death is recorded.

of Kildare is the second entry under this year.

<sup>5</sup> Maelanfaid 'insci.'—Maelanfaid 'of the speech.' Clar. 49 has "Maelanfa in Sci," as if to convey that Maelanfaid had been slain in Skye. O'Connor, with his usual inaccuracy, misprints "Maelanfaid insci" Maelean for insci, and translates for insci "supra insulam"!

son of Mochloingse, King of the Ui-Meith, and Curoi, son of Aedh,<sup>11</sup> son of Dluthach. A slaughter of the Picts in Magh-Manonn,<sup>12</sup> by the Saxons, wherein Finngwine son of Skene copies this entry (Chron. Picts and Scots, p. 353), as if he thought that "Oengus, son of Maelanfaid," was a Scottish character, apparently without having taken the trouble of ascertaining whether he was Scottish or Irish.

<sup>9</sup> Ui-Meith.—There were two tribes of this name descended from Muiredach Meth ("the fat"), son of Imchad, son of Colla Da-crioch; one of which gave name to the district called Ui-Meith-Tire (in the present co. Monaghan), and the other Ui-Meith-Mara (in the co. Louth). The sept of Ui-Meith-Mara is probably here referred to. See O'Donovan's ed. of Leabhar na g-Ceart, p. 148, note a.

infra.) Not identified. See O'Donovan's Four Mast., A.D. 709, note s.

<sup>6</sup> Tairperi-boitter.—Dean Reeves thinks that this was probably the Tarbert which gave name to East and West Lochs Tarbert, the inlets of the sea which nearly insulate Cantyre on the north. Adamnan, p. 380, note l. It is again referred to at 730, infra.

Deileroth, was untimely slain. Cennfaeladh, abbot of Fobhar, dies. An encounter of Britons and Dalriata, on Lorgg-ecclet,<sup>1</sup> where the Britons were defeated. Murgal, son of Noe, dies. The destruction<sup>2</sup> of the Ui-Neill at Cuince-Robairgi,<sup>3</sup> in which the son of Condi, and the sons of Dibhcein, were slain.<sup>4</sup> Diccolan the Wise, and Ultan, son of Cummeni, bishop of Telach-Olaind,<sup>5</sup> died.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 711. Coeddi, bishop of Ia, rests. The [711.] BIS. burning of Tairpert-boitter.<sup>6</sup> Congal, son of Doergart,<sup>7</sup> dies. The siege of Aberte,<sup>8</sup> by Selbach. A battle between two descendants of Aedh Slanè, in which Mane, son of Niall,<sup>9</sup> was slain. Flann, son of Aedh, son of Dluthach was victor. The Ulidians were overthrown, where Dubthach, son of Becc Bairche,<sup>10</sup> was slain. The two sons of Feradach, son of Maelduin, perished in the slaughter of the Cinel-Loeghaire.<sup>11</sup> A battle among the Lower Leinstermen,<sup>12</sup> wherein Bran Ua Mailduin and his son were inaccurately given by the Four Mast. (710), who represent Niall as having been slain in the conflict. But Niall had been dead very many years at that date.

<sup>11</sup> Cinel-Loeghaire.—There were two tribes known by this name, both descended from Loeghaire (ob. 462 supra), monarch of Ireland in St. Patrick's time; the one, called Cinel-Loeghaire of Midhe (or Meath), and the other, Cinel-Loeghaire of Brega (or Bregia, in the S. part of the present co. Meath). The former tribe would seem to be here referred to. In the Pedigree of the Cinel-Loeghaire contained in the Book of Leinster the Feradach mentioned in the foregoing entry is set down as seventh in descent from said King Loeghaire, and Cainelban (from whom the territory of the Cinel-Loeghaire of Midhe was sometimes called O'Coindelbhain's country) as fifth in descent from Feradach. See O'Donovan's ed. of O'Dubhagain, note 14 (p. iv.)

<sup>12</sup> Among the Lower Leinstermen.—apud ʁaʁinenʁeʁ ʁeʁioneʁ (for ʁeʁeʁioneʁ), A., B. "Apud Low Leinster," Clar. 49. The Four Masters (712) have ʁa ʁaʁmʁ ʁeʁʁa-baʁ ("by the South Leinstermen"). ʁeʁeʁioneʁ is obviously a mistake for ʁeʁeʁeʁioneʁ, or 'Southern.' In a copy of Tigernach contained in the MS. H. 3, 18, Trin. Coll., Dublin, the reading is ʁaʁenenʁeʁ ʁeʁeʁeʁioneʁ, over which Roderick O'Flaherty has written ʁaʁʁm ʁeʁʁabaʁ.

written "Kenneth." Ciniod was apparently the brother of Brude, son of Derilè (705, supra), King of the Picts of Scotland.

<sup>6</sup> Obtained.—obtenuit, A. O'Donovan erroneously observes (Four Mast., at A.D. 713, note f'), that the obit of Dorbeni "is not in the Annals of Ulster." The correct date is 713, according to the criteria. See Reeves' Adamnan, p. 381, note n.

<sup>7</sup> Slain in battle.—In a list of the Christian Kings of Munster contained in the Book of Leinster (p. 320, col. 1), Cormac, son of Ailill, son of Maenach (supra, 661), is stated to have been slain, after a reign of nine years, in the battle of Carn-Feradhaigh, gained over the Deis Tuaiscert (or "Northern Deis.") See above, slain. Dubhguala, abbot of Glenn-da-lacha, perished. Dluthach, son of Fithchellach, was burned by fire. Beda<sup>1</sup> composed a great book.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 713. A battle, 'imesech,'<sup>8</sup> in Magh-Singittae,<sup>9</sup> at Bile-thenedh in Assal,<sup>10</sup> wherein Flann, son of Aedh, son of Dluthach, and Dubhduin descendant of Becc, were slain in the latter encounter of the battle; and Colgu, and Aedh son of Diarmait, were killed in the first encounter. Dun-Ollaigh<sup>11</sup> is constructed by Selbach. [713.]

at A.D. 626, where Carn-Feradhaigh is said to be in Cliu, a district in the co. Limerick. For the situation of the Deis or Deise, see O'Donovan's Suppl. to O'Reilly's Dictionary, under Deise beag. In the Annals of the Four Masters (710), this battle is stated to have been gained by the Northern Deis, and Cormac is incorrectly said to have been the son of Finghin, who was really Cormac's grandfather.

<sup>3</sup> Garbsalach. — Not identified. The name would signify the "Rough-dirty" (or the "Dirty-rough") place. Though evidently the name of a place, O'Conor understood Garbsalach to mean "fæda contentio."

Alen-daingen<sup>1</sup> was demolished. Fogartach Ua Cernaigh,<sup>2</sup> was banished from the Kingdom, and went into Britain. The slaughter of Garbsalach<sup>3</sup> in Midhe, in which Forbasach descendant<sup>4</sup> of Congal, King of the Ui-Failghe, was slain by the men of Midhe, on the same day as the afore-said battle. Great drought. A battle between two sons of Becc Bairche,<sup>5</sup> and the son of Bresal, King of Ui-Echach, in which the sons of Becc were victors. In this year pilgrims<sup>6</sup> were slain by Munstermen, viz., the Clarainech, with his whole family. A bright night in Autumn.

<sup>8</sup> Son. — The original of this clause is added in the margin in A., where Flann is called "bishop" of Ard-macha (or Armagh). It is not in Clar. 49. The words māc Sgann-lāin ("son of Sgannlan"), are part of the text in B., in which do iū meit ("of the Ui-Meith") is interlined in the original hand.

<sup>9</sup> [Airmedach] Caech. — "Airmedach the Blind" (or "One-eyed.") The MSS. A. and B., which omit the name of Airmedach, have ceci for caeci. The Four Mast. (713) state that Murchadh was chief of the Ui-Neill of Clann-Colmain. But in the Book of Leinster (p. 42, col. 1), his name occurs in the list of the Kings of Uisnach. See under A.D. 688 supra.

<sup>1</sup> Fogartach.—There is some confusion regarding the length of Fogartach's reign. According to the Ann. Four Mast. (719), he was only one year King of Ireland. O'Flaherty, who gives 722 as the date of Fogartach's accession, gives him a year and some months. Ogygia, p. 432. Fogartach's expulsion from the Kingdom (de regno) is noticed above under the year 713, and his return from his exile in Britain is mentioned by the Four Mast. at 714. If he "reigned again" in 715, as above stated, he must have reigned as the rival of Fergal son of Maelduin, who was King of Ireland, according to these Annals, from 709 to the death of Fergal in 722 (infra, 721), when

son of Deleroth, dies. Fogartach,<sup>1</sup> grandson of Cernach, again reigns. Easter is changed<sup>2</sup> in the Monastery of Ia. Faelchu, son of Dorbeni, assumes the chair of Columba,<sup>3</sup> in the 74th year of his age,<sup>4</sup> on the 4th of the Kalends of September, on Saturday. Death of Celi-Tigernaigh, abbot of Cluain-eois. Flann Foirbthe,<sup>5</sup> son of Fogartach, died. Death of Artbran, son of Maelduin.

Kal Jan. A.D. 716. Dunchad, son of Cennfaeladh, [716.] abbot of Ia, died. Etulb, son of Etulb, died. Condalach son of Conang,<sup>6</sup> King of the Ui-Crimthainn, was slain. of Britain." The great mountain chain dividing Perthshire and Argyll, terminating in the Grampian Hills. Also called Druim-Alban. (Reeves' Adamnan, p. 64, note a.) Dr. O'Brien states that Druim-Alban was otherwise called Braid-alban. Irish Engl. Dictionary, voce Drom-saileach.

Kells, co. Meath, where there are some remarkable remains of antiquity.

<sup>12</sup> Son of Ruba.—The Four Masters (A.D. 715) have "Maelruba." But the Frag. of Annals say "the son of Maelruba," which is probably more correct. "Ruba" is not found as a proper name.

of Dluthach, and Amalgaidh, grandson of Conaing, and his brother Fergal. Conall Grant<sup>1</sup> was victor. And Conall Grant,<sup>1</sup> grandson of Cernach, was slain at the end of two months after the battle, by Fergal,<sup>2</sup> son of Mael-duin. Cronan Ua hEoain,<sup>3</sup> abbot of Lis-mor, dies. Fiannamail, descendant of Boghaine, son of Finn, abbot of Inis-Maighe-Samh,<sup>4</sup> and Dubhduin, descendant of Faclan, bishop, abbot of Cluain-Iraird; Conri, son of Congal Cennfota,<sup>5</sup> and Ailill, son of Finsnechta, were slain. It rained a shower of honey upon Othan-becc.<sup>6</sup> It rained a shower of blood upon the 'foss'<sup>7</sup> of the Leinstermen. Hence Niall 'Frosach,'<sup>8</sup> son of Fergal, who was born then, was so called. An eclipse of the moon at its full.<sup>9</sup>

Kal. Jan. (Saturd.<sup>10</sup>) A.D. 718. Airmedach, son of Tadhg, and Crichan, King of Ui-Mic-Uais, were slain; and Ertuile, son of Fergus Goll, was slain. Drostan of the oratory<sup>11</sup> rested in Ard-Breccain.<sup>12</sup> Cu-dimeriggio dies. Tuibride, descendant of Dunchadh, was slain. A battle among the Leinstermen, in which Aedh, son of Cellach,<sup>13</sup>

on glenno lügen. (the "glen," or "valley," of Leinster.)

day of the week"), added in al. man. in A. Not in B.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 719. A rainy summer. Sinach of [719.] BIS. Inis-Crothrann<sup>12</sup> slept. A great sea-burst<sup>13</sup> in the month of October.<sup>7</sup> Theodore,<sup>14</sup> one year.

to have been committed on the family, or community, of Bishop Suibhne. Neither is it referred to in Tigernach's Annals, or in the Chron. Scotorum.

<sup>12</sup> Inis-Crothrann—. Rectè Inis-Cloth-rann. An island in the expansion of the Shannon called Loch-Ribh, or Loch-Ree, and within the limits of the co. Longford. It is said to have been called Inis-Clothrann, from Clothra, the mother of Lugaid Riabnèrg, 109th King of Ireland, (Ogygia, p. 289), and daughter of Eochaid Feidlech (104th King, ib., 267). The Book of Leinster (p. 124b) has a curious account of the killing of the famous Queen Medb of Connaught, by Furbaide, son of King Conor Mac Nesa, the particulars of which remind one strongly of the legend of William Tell. See O'Curry's Manners and Customs, Vol. 2, pp. 290-1. O'Donovan erroneously states (Four Mast., 719, note c) that the foregoing entry "is not in the Annals of Ulster."

 aigh,” is incorrectly printed Mamaiḡ by O’Conor. The festival of Maenach is given in the Martyr. of Donegal, at Oct. 17.

 See Chron. Scot. (ed. Hennessy), p.
 136, note 2, and Todd’s Cogadh
Gaedhel re Gallaiḡh, Introd., p. xl., note 2. O’Donovan thought that Lann-leri was the place now called Lynn, in the barony of Fartullagh, co. Westmeath. (Four Mast., A.D.
 740, note w, and 825, note g.) But he was mistaken.

 Now Rush, in the par. of Lusk, co.
 Dublin. See the Felire of Oengus
 at the 10th of April.

<sup>4</sup> Exaction.—A. and B. have maiḡm (“breach,” “defeat”), which is evidently by mistake for naḡm, “exaction,” “binding,” as in the Chron. Scot. and Ann. Four Mast.

 (717). Clar. 49 has “The praying of Leinster by M’Maileduin, and the slaughter of the Boroive, and the slaughter of Gialne in Leinster,” which is very wrong. Regarding the ‘borama’ (or ‘cow-tribute’), see note 2 at p. 18 supra.

 Clar. 49 has “by.” The Four Mast. have la, “with,” or “by”; which seems more correct.

 670 and 672, supra.

 “Aporcrossan.” See under A.D. 672,
supra.

 Maelcorghais whose festival is noted at March 12th, in the Martyr. of Donegal.

 place now called Dromin, situated

The genit. case of the name, μαρταρ-ται, would be Anglicised "Martaray," "Martary," or "Martry;" forms which are represented in the Townland Index. (Census of Ireland, 1861.) But the particular place referred to here has not been identified.

<sup>6</sup> Airthera.—The name of this district is still preserved in the baronies of Lower and Upper Orior, in the co. of Armagh. The names and number of the principal persons who were slain in the battle of Almuin are more fully given in the Ann. Four Mast., and Chron. Scot. (718), and Ann. Clonmacnoise (720).

third of the Ides of December, the sixth<sup>1</sup> day of the week, in which were slain (i.e., by Murchad, son of Bran<sup>2</sup>), Fergal, son of Maelduin (son<sup>3</sup> of Maelfithrich, son of Aedh Uaridnach), and Conall Menn, King of Cinel-Coirpri; Clothgno, son of Colgu; Dubhdacrich;<sup>4</sup> Flann, son of Rogellnach; Aedh Laigen, son of Fithcellach, King of Ui-Maine; [Niall<sup>5</sup>] son of Muirges; Nuadha, son of Dunchad; Eicnech, son of Colgu, King of the Airthera,<sup>6</sup> and Fergal Ua Aitechta.

O'Connor (Rerum Hib. Script., iv., p. 78), and by O'Donovan (Four Mast., A.D. 719, note d). The former thus blunderingly jumbles three entries into two: "Indrechtach mac Muireadaig rex Connacht moritur in clericatu. Selbaic Sianac Tailten [Selbach genealogus Taltinensis] moritur"! O'Donovan, who ought to have known better (and in whose ed. of the Four Mast., the obit of "Sinach of Taittiu is given under the year 720) follows the incorrect reading of O'Connor. The Annalist simply meant to convey that Selbach (18th King of the Scotch Dalriads, ob. 729, infra) assumed the religious habit, or went on a pilgrimage, in the year 722 (=723 Tig.)

the Cave" (uaim, a "cave"). The Martyr. of Donegal, at November 24, identifies Colman Uamach with Colman, son of Lenin [founder and abbot] of Cloyne, co. Cork; in Irish Cluain uama (the cluain, or meadow) of the cave. But they were different persons, as the death of Colman, son of Lenin, is given in the Ann. Four Mast. under A.D. 609. See Harris's Ware, p. 573, and Colgan's Acta Sanctorum, p. 539, note <sup>15</sup>.

<sup>8</sup> Colman Banban.—The death of Colman Banban is entered in the Ann. Four Mast. at the year 720, and in the Frag. of Annals at 725. In the latter authority he is called saoi (or "sage") of Cill-Dara (Kil-son of Cucarat. Caech-scuili, scribe of Daire-Calgaidh,<sup>1</sup> rested.

Colman Uamach,<sup>6</sup> scribe of Armagh; Rubin, son of Conna, scribe of Munster, and the son of Broccan, of Tech-Theille,<sup>7</sup> who was a good master of Christ's Gospel, and Colman Banban,<sup>8</sup> scribe of Kildare—all 'fell asleep.' Kal. Jan. A.D. 725. Nectan,<sup>14</sup> son of Derile, was put [725.] in fetters by King Drust. Dachonna the Pious, bishop of Condere, died. Tolarggan 'maphan'<sup>15</sup> died. The killing of Crimthan, son of Cellach,<sup>16</sup> in the battle of Belach-licce, at an immature age. The repose of Manchein of dare). He was probably the same as the "Banban egnaidh" ("Banban the Wise"), whose festival is given in the Martyr. of Donegal at May 9. The Felire of Oengus, at 26 Nov., mentions a "Banban," bishop of Leighlin, of the Corco-Duibhne, who is not noticed in Ware's list of the bishops of that diocese.

<sup>3</sup> Druim-fornocht.—The "Naked (or exposed) Ridge." O'Donovan thought that this was "the Druim-fornocht mentioned in the foundation charter of the abbey of Newry, and which comprises the present townlands of Crobane and Croreagh, in the Lordship of Newry." (Ann. Four Mast., A.D., 721, note o.) But in O'Clery's Pedig. (p. 31) Druim-fornocht is stated to have been the name of a place in the "Lagan" [in the barony of Raphoe, co. Donegal], which is more likely to be correct, considering that the battle in question is stated to have been fought between the Cinel-Conaill and Cinel-Eogain, who occupied respectively the present counties of Donegal and Tyrone.

<sup>5</sup> Irros-Foichne.—Irroir Foichne. Dean Reeves correctly observes that this place, the name of which he prints "Ros-foichne," has not been identified, and that it is doubtful whether the place was in Scotland or Ireland. (Adamnan, p. 383, note x.) But Skene identifies it with a "Ross-feochan," the situation of which he does not give. (Chron. Picts and Scots., Preface, p. cxxx.) As there is no notice of the conflict in the Ann. Four Mast., it may be presumed that the compilers of that Chronicle considered it to have taken place in Scotland; although the killing of "some of the Airghialla" (see next note) would imply that the fight had occurred in Ireland.

The relics of Adamnan were translated to Ireland, and the Law<sup>9</sup> was renewed. The battle of Moin between . . . . in Leinster,<sup>10</sup> in which fell Laidgнен<sup>11</sup> son of Cumelde. Dunchad was victor. Murchad son of Bran,<sup>12</sup> King of the Leinstermen, ḡiallaib. denoib seems an error for denib, donoib, or donoib ("of the"; see Ebel's Zeuss, p. 216.) Dean Reeves renders denoib ḡiallaib by "utrorumque Airghialla" (Adamnan, p. 383), and Skene, like Clar. 49, "of the two Airghiallas" (Chron. Picts and Scots, p. 355.) But there were not two tribes of Airghialla.

in Leinster.—This entry is decidedly corrupt, the words ḡiallaib especially so. The Frag. of Annals, in the corresponding place (A.D. 727), have Cat Maistiú ríur laigib réin ("battle of Maistiú," or Mullaghmast, "between the Leinstermen themselves.")

gal, at March 3, mentions a Cele-Crist, bishop of Cill-Cele-Crist, in Ui-Dunchadha, i pporcailb i laig-noib (for i pporcailb i laignoib, in Fortuatha ["border territories"] in Leinster). The territory of Ui-Dunchadha comprised the district through which the river Dodder flows. See O'Donovan's Four Mast., A.D. 1044, note l.

<sup>7</sup> Druim - Corcain. — "Corcan's Ridge." The Four Mast. have "Druim-Corcain." Keating (in his account of the reign of Cinaedh) calls it "Druim-Carrthoinn." The place has not been identified.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 727. The battle of Druim-Corcain,<sup>7</sup> [727.] BIS. between Flaithbertach son of Loingsech, and Cinaedh, son of Irgalach (son of Conang Cumach,<sup>8</sup> son of Congalach, son of Aedh Slanè), in which Cinaedh, and Eudus son of Ailill, Maelduin son of Feradach, and Dunchad son of Cormac, were slain. The battle of Ailinn between two brothers, sons of Murchadh son of Bran,<sup>9</sup> and Dunchad, the elder, was slain. Faelan,<sup>10</sup> the younger, reigns. Flann of Ointrebh,<sup>11</sup> abbot of Bangor, died. The battle of Monidicroibh<sup>12</sup> between the Picts themselves, wherein Oengus was victor, and a great many were slain on the side of King Elpin. A lamentable battle was fought between the same persons, near Castle-Credi,<sup>13</sup> where Elpin fled. Domnall, son of Cellach, King of Connaught, dies. The repose of Mac-Bethach, a wise man of Munster.

Scotland. See Reeves' Adamnan, p. 383, note z.

<sup>14</sup> Egebericht.—The Egbert, or Egeberct, through whose exertions the change in the time of keeping Easter is stated to have been effected in Ia, or Iona (supra, A.D. 715). See Bede's Eccl. Hist., Book 3, chap. 4, and Book 5, chaps. 22, 23; and Reeves' Adamnan (App. to Preface, p. 1), and 379. The death of St. Ecgberht, "in Iona," is entered in the Anglo-Sax. Chron., at A.D. 729.

<sup>9</sup> Suibhne.—This was evidently the Suibhne referred to above under A.D. 718, where his family is stated to have been slain in Armagh. As the Lists of Comarbs of St. Patrick (or Bishops of Armagh) generally give 15 years as the length of his episcopacy, Suibhne must have been bishop of that See at the time of the outrage (which outrage, it may be added, is not noticed by the Four Masters). The death of Ferdacrich, son of Suibhne, who succeeded Celepetair as abbot or bishop of Armagh, in A.D. 757, is given at 767 infra.

Loch-Loegdae,<sup>1</sup> between the host of Nectan and the army of Oengus; and the 'exactors'<sup>2</sup> of Nectan were killed, viz., Biceot son of Monet, and his son; Finguine son of Drostan; Feroth son of Finguine, and many others; and the family of Oengus<sup>3</sup> triumphed.<sup>4</sup> The battle of Druim-Dergblathug<sup>5</sup> in the country of the Picts, between Oengus, and Drust King of the Picts, and Drust was slain. The killing of Cathal Core son of Niall.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 729. An earthquake on the 6th of the Ides of February, the fourth day of the week. Return of the relics<sup>6</sup> of Adamnan from Ireland, in<sup>7</sup> the month of October. Bran son of Eugan, Selbach<sup>8</sup> son of Fercar, died. Suibhne,<sup>9</sup> descendant of Mruichesach (alias son of Crunnmael),<sup>10</sup> bishop of Armagh; Mac Onchon, scribe of Kildare; the Gall from Lilcach,<sup>11</sup> and Mac Concumba, scribe of Cluain-mic-Nois, 'fell asleep.' Oitechde, son of Baithechde, the son of Blathmacc, and Oengus son of Becc Bairche, rested. The killing of the son of Cinadon. A camp melee against Domnall son of Murchad,<sup>12</sup> in the Cula, i.e., 'adaigh noidhe nephain,'<sup>13</sup> or of Imlech-Senaich. [729.]

<sup>10</sup> Crunnmael.—This clause, which is not in B., is added in al. man. in A. In the list of Bishops of Armagh contained in the Book of Leinster (p. 42, col. 3), it is stated that Suibhne was the son of Crunnmael, son of Ronan; and of the Ui-Niallain, a local tribe which furnished many bishops to the See of Armagh.

<sup>13</sup> 'Adaigh noidhe nephain.'—This is unintelligible to the Editor, and seems corrupt. Skene has printed this entry among his extracts from this Chronicle, in his Chron. Picts and Scots (p. 356), and has given a translation which is quite inaccurate. Dr. O'Connor, in his edition of part of these Annals (at 729), also attempts a translation, which is even worse than that of Skene, for he renders the entry by, "Prælium Dunad, contra Domhnaldum filium Murcadi, in locis Saltibus obsitis in angustiis viarum Nephain, vel Imlecho Senaic;" a translation entirely misleading.

Faeldobur Becc, the Wise, of Fobar; Adamnan, bishop of Rath-maighe-oenagh,<sup>6</sup> and Colman Ua Littain, doctor of religion, rested. The killing of Moenach, son of Sechnasach. The death of Echaid, son of Colggu, anchorite, of Armagh. Colman of Telach-Ualand, [and] Brecc Berbha, slept. Coblaith, daughter of Cellach Cualand, dies.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 731. The death of Flann Sinna, [731.] descendant of Colla, abbot of Cluain-mic-Nois.<sup>7</sup> The killing of Dathgus, son of Baeth, King of the Deise. Dubhdalethe son of Dunchu, Flann Cuirrigh son of Aithechda, died. The battle of Connaught, in which Muiredach son of Indrechtach<sup>8</sup> was slain. The pontiff of Magh-Eo of the Saxons,<sup>9</sup> Gerald, died. A great philo-obit, "in clericatu," is entered above at the year 722. His son, Muiredach, whose death is here recorded, is stated by the Four Mast. (A.D. 726), and other authorities, to have been bishop of Magh-Eo; an error which owes its origin to the fusion into one of the above two distinct entries regarding Muiredach, son of Indrechtach, and Gerald of Magh-Eo. O'Connor, for instance, prints both entries as one, thus:-- "Bellum Connacht in quo cecidit . . . Muredach mc Inrehtaig Pontifex Maigi heu Saxonum Geraalt obiit."

<sup>9</sup> Magh-Eo of the Saxons.—Mayo, the seat of an ancient bishopric, in the parish of Mayo, and county of the same name. See O'Donovan's Four Mast., A.D. 726, note b, where some strange mistakes regarding the date of the death of St. Gerald of Mayo, committed by Colgan, Dr. O'Connor, and others, are corrected. For some further account of St. Gerald, who was an Englishman, see Lanigan's Eccl. Hist., Vol. III., pp. 166–168.

sopher of Ireland, Ua Mithrebtha, died. Cellach, daughter of Dunchad, of the Ui-Liathain,<sup>1</sup> a most excellent and gracious queen, slept. Teimnen of Cill-Garadh,<sup>2</sup> a devout cleric,<sup>3</sup> rested. Cellach, son of Tuathal, King of the Ui-Crimthain, was slain. A battle between Cinel-Conaill and [Cinel]-Eogain, in which the son of Fergal, Aid (i.e., Aedh),<sup>4</sup> triumphed over Flaithbertach,<sup>5</sup> son of Loingsech (son of Aengus,<sup>6</sup> son of Domnall, son of Aedh, son of Ainmire), of whose force these leaders were slain: Flann Gohan, son of Congal, son of Fergus, [and] Flaithgus, son of Dubhdiberg. Tomaltach, son of Duinechdo, dies. A battle between the South Leinstermen and the Munstermen, in which Aedh, son of Colgu,<sup>7</sup> was victor. Sebdann, daughter of Core, abbess<sup>8</sup> of Kildare, died. Fergus son of Conall Oircnech,<sup>9</sup> and Ferdomnach, scribe of Armagh, died. Congalach of Cnucha dies.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 732. Dungal,<sup>10</sup> son of Selbach profaned Torach, when he took Brude out of it; and on the same occasion he invaded the island of Cuilen-rigi.<sup>11</sup> Muiredach, son of Aincellach, assumed the government of the Cinel-Loairnd. Another encounter<sup>12</sup> between Aedh, son of Fergal, and the Cinel-Conaill, in Magh-Itha, wherein were slain Conaing, son of Congal, son of Fergus, and many others. The birth of Donnchad,<sup>13</sup> son of Domnall.

form in which the name is given at 802 infra. Dean Reeves considers it to be probably the island called Inch, off Inishowen, co. Donegal. Adamnan, p. 384, note f. MS. B. has κυλρην ριγι.

original of this clause, which is not in B., is added in al. man. in A.

that Aedh Róin, after a reign of 26 years, fell by Aedh Allan "in the battle of Fochard" (now Faughard, a village about two miles to the north of Dundalk, co. Louth). The Four Mast., at A.D. 732, calls this battle the "battle of Fochart in Magh-Muirtheimhne." See last note.

Cennfaeladh, King of Luighne, dies. Aedh Allan begins to reign.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 734. Ogedchar,<sup>1</sup> bishop of Nendrum, [734.] rests. A battle in the regions of Murtheimhne,<sup>2</sup> between the Ui-Neill and the Ulidians, in which Aedh Roin,<sup>3</sup> King of Uladh, and Conchad, son of Cuanu, King of Cobo,<sup>4</sup> were slain. Aedh,<sup>5</sup> son of Fergal, was victor. A battle between the Munstermen and Leinstermen, in which perished many of the Leinstermen, and Munstermen<sup>6</sup> almost without number; in which Ceallach, son of Faelchar, King of Ossory, was slain; but Cathal, son of Finnguine, King of Munster, escaped. Airechtach, grandson of Dunchadh Muirsee,<sup>7</sup> King of the Ui-Fiachrach, and Cathal, son of Muiredach, King of Connaught (from whom are the Clann-Cathail of Magh-Ai<sup>8</sup>), die. Murder of Flann, son of Conang, abbot of Cillmor-dithribh.<sup>9</sup> A huge dragon was seen in the end of autumn, with great thunder after it. Beda, the wise man of the Saxons, rested.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 735. Oengus, son of Fergus, King of [735.] BIS. the Picts, devastated the regions of Dalriata, and seized Dun-At,<sup>10</sup> and burned Creic;<sup>11</sup> and bound two sons of Selbach in chains, viz.:—Donngal<sup>12</sup> and Feradach. And soon after, Brude, son of Oengus, son of Fergus, died.

<sup>8</sup> Clann Cathail of Magh-Ai.—Clann-Cathail was the tribe-name of the O'Flanagans of the co. Roscommon, whose territory was anciently included in the great plain of Magh-Ai, in the district now forming that county. The original of this clause, which is not in B., is added in al. man. in A.

North, co. Roscommon. See Reeves' Adamnan, p. 99, note g.

battle of Cat, at the year 749 infra, where he is stated to have been the brother of Oengus [king of the Picts], whose obit is given at the year 760.

of Cellach Cualann, king of Leinster, whose obit is entered at the year 714 supra.

old Irish MS. known as the Leabhar Breac, called "Mac Conglinne's Vision"; a translation of which, by the Editor of the present work, was published in Fraser's Mag. for September, 1873.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 737. Faelan, grandson<sup>7</sup> of Bran, king [737.] of the Leinstermen, died at an unripe age, and unexpectedly. Tole,<sup>8</sup> bishop of Cluain-Iraird, a worthy soldier of God, rests. Cernach, son of Fogartach,<sup>9</sup> is treacherously slain by his own wicked associates; whom the calves of the cows, and the women of this lower world, in long continued sadness bewailed. The battle of Ath-Senaigh<sup>10</sup> (i.e., the battle of Uchbadh,<sup>11</sup> on the 14th of September, the 6th day of the week), was obstinately fought between the Ui-Neill and the Leinstermen, wherein the two kings respectively, men of heroic valour,<sup>12</sup> encountered each other in single combat, namely, Aedh Aldan, king of Tara, and Aedh son of Colgu, king of Leinster; one of whom, Aedh Aldan, left the field alive, though wounded, while the other, Aedh son of Colgu,<sup>13</sup> had his head severed by the sword<sup>14</sup> of battle. Thereupon the race of Conn enjoyed a signal victory, whilst with unwonted measure they routed, trampled, crushed, overthrew, and consumed their adversaries of Leinster, insomuch that almost their entire army perished, and was only saved from utter annihilation by the escape of a few, who bore away the tidings of the disaster; and

gour pectonep*, A.; B. Clar. 49 has celsi vigores rectores.

 wise called Aedh Menn, was only king of Ui-Cendselaig, or Southern Leinster, according to a list of kings of that province contained in the Book of Leinster, p. 40, col. 1.

 the Fotharta at the time of the above-mentioned battle, were the two septs who gave name to the districts now represented by the baronies of Forth in the cos. of Carlow and Wexford.

 the sign for et or ocur, in A. and B.
 Clar. 49 reads qui.

<sup>4</sup> Of Inis.—Inſeo. Inis means an "Island." But there is nothing in either MS. to indicate what island is here referred to.

 of Munster. See under the year 736.

<sup>6</sup> Ui-Faelain.—This was the tribe-name of the powerful sept descended from Faclan, king of Leinster, whose obit is given among the entries for this year. The name was also applied to the territory occupied by the clan, which included the northern part of the co. of Kildare until shortly after the English invasion, when they were driven out of this district, and settled

such was the carnage in this battle, that more are reported to have fallen in it than we read of ever having perished in any one onslaught and fierce conflict of all preceding ages. The best captains, also, were slain in this battle, viz. :—Aedh,<sup>1</sup> son of Colgu, and Bran Bec, son of Murchadh (two kings of Leinster), Fergus, son of Moenach, and Dubhdacrich, son of the grandson of Cellach, son of Trien, two Lords of Fotharta ;<sup>2</sup> Fiangelach Ua Maelaitheen ; Conall Ua Aitechta ; the four sons of Flann, descendant of Congal ; Eladach, descendant of Maeluidhir, and many others who,<sup>3</sup> for the sake of brevity, are omitted. The killing of Fergus, son of Cremthan. The death of Coscrach, son of Noindenach, king of the Galenga. The battle of Inis,<sup>4</sup> in which Fernbeand was slain. Death of Sothcathach, descendant of Maeltuili. A hosting by Cathal, son of Finnguin,<sup>5</sup> to the Leinstermen, when he carried off the hostages of the Ui-Faelain,<sup>6</sup> and great spoils.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 738. Fergus Glutt, king of Cobha, [738.] died from the envenomed spittles<sup>7</sup> of evil men. Cuana, descendant of Bessan, scribe of Treoit,<sup>8</sup> rests. The 'falling asleep' of Samhthann of Cluain-Bronaigh ; and the 'falling asleep' of Ua Maeledathnen, bishop. The burning of the family of Domnall<sup>9</sup> in Bodbrath,<sup>10</sup> where Ailill of Brig-Leith was slain in the banquet-house. Death of Ailill, son of Tuathal, king of the Ui-Cremthainn. Flann, in the east of the present county of Wicklow. In later times the most respectable representatives of the sept were the families of O'Byrne and Mac Eochaidh (or Keogh). The Four Masters (A.D. 733) state that the hostages were taken from Bran Bec ("Bran the Little"), whose death is recorded under this year.

Fergus Glut that wicked people used to cast spittles, in which they put charms, in his face, which was the cause of his death.

Ireland in 742, and who is elsewhere referred to in these Annals by his Christian name (Domnall) merely. The re-entrance of Domnall into religion is recorded at the year 743 infra.

son of Cellach, son of Crundmael, bishop of Rechra,<sup>1</sup> dies. Talorgan, son of Drostan, king of Ath-Foithle,<sup>2</sup> was drowned, viz., by Oengus.<sup>3</sup> Death of Aedh, son of Garbhan.

The 'falling asleep' of Mancheine of Tuaim-greine.<sup>8</sup> The 'falling asleep' of Saint Bran of Lann-Ela. Flann Febhla, abbot of Gort-chonaich, dies.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 740. Death of Conla of Tethba, and [740.] of Amalgaidh, king of Conaille. The killing of Murchadh, son of Fergal,<sup>9</sup> son of Maelduin; and Conall, son of Iarlaith, dies. Death of Flann Aighle, bishop of Echdruim.<sup>10</sup> Death of Fuirechtach, superior of Inis-Coil.<sup>11</sup> Befail, daughter of Sechnasach, dies. The battle of Forboros,<sup>12</sup> in which Fiannamail's two sons, viz., Indrechtach and Conall, and others, were slain. The killing of Ernaine, son of Eculp. Battle of Carn-Feradhaigh,<sup>13</sup> in scendant of Congal;” the same person referred to above under the year 737, where four of his sons are stated to have been slain in the battle of Ath-Senaigh. The obit of Flann is given by the Four Masters at A.D. 746.

<sup>8</sup> Tuaim-greine.—Tomgraney, in the barony of Upper Tulla, co. Clare. The Chron. Scot., at A.D. 964, refers the erection of its cloigtech (or Round Tower) to Gormac Ua Cillin, whose obit is given at that year in the same Chronicle. The entry is remarkable as being the first record occurring in the Irish Annals, indicating the date of the erection of a Round Tower.

whose death in the battle of Allen (co. Kildare) is recorded at the year 721 supra.

<sup>4</sup> Petronilla.—There can be no doubt that there was a very early martyr or confessor of this name, which is a diminutive—not of Peter, as is supposed, but of Petronius, and formed in the same manner as Drusilla and Priscilla; although in French it is Perrine. She was probably of the noble Roman "familia Petronia." And as to her relationship to St. Peter, it may, as Baronius suggests, have been in the same sense as "Marcus filius meus." This writer treats of her under the year of Christ 69, (cap. xxxiii.—Annales, tom. i., p. 640 b—ed. Lucae 1738). She is commemorated at the 31st of May, in the Roman and other Martyrologies; and all the particulars that are known or conjectured of her history are to be found in the Actt. SS. of the Bollandists at that day. Of her translation (above represented by athu-gar) the earliest authority is the chronicle of Sigebert of Gemblours, who died in 1113, and, at 758, has the following entry:—"Corpus Sanctae Petronillae, Petri apostoli filiae, a Paulopapa transponitur, in cuius marmoreo sarcophago, ipsius apostoli Petri manu sculptum legebatur: Aureae Petronilae, dilectissimae filiae. —Pistorius, Rer. Germ. Script., tom. i., p. 776 (ed. Ratisb. 1726). According to most ancient authorities the 'translation' of the remains of St. Petronilla which fell Torcan Tinireid. The killing of Ailill Corrach, son of Flann,<sup>1</sup> king of the Ui-Failghe. The battle of Druim-Cathmail, between the Cruithni<sup>2</sup> and Dalriata,<sup>3</sup> against Indrechtach. The 'smiting'<sup>3</sup> of the Dalriata by Oengus, son of Forgas. The body of Petronilla,<sup>4</sup> daughter of Peter, was translated in this year; and these words were found written, in Peter's own handwriting, in the marble tomb out of which it was taken, viz.:—"the place [of rest] of Petronilla, most dearly beloved daughter."

Kal. Jan. A.D. 741. Death of Airechtach, son of [741.] Cuanu, superior of Ferns. The devastation of Cinel-Fiachach<sup>5</sup> and Delbna,<sup>6</sup> by the Osraighe. Death of Cathal, son of Finngwine, King of Cashel. Death of Maelochtraigh, abbot of Cill-Fobrich. Death of Cudgilè, scribe and abbot of Lughmadh. Death of Aedh Balb, son of Indrechtach, son of Muiredach, King of Connaught. The strangling of Conaing,<sup>7</sup> son of Amalgaidh, King of Cianachta. The killing of Artru, son of Aithechda, King of the Ui-Cremthainn. A leprosy in Ireland. Besiege-was effected by Pope Paul I., who was under the fear that the cemetery in which they were deposited might, with other cemeteries, be desecrated. "Erat inter alia (Baronius says) vetus cœmeterium, S. Petronillæ dictum, ex quo idem Pontifex sacrum corpus ejusdem sanctæ sublatum, transtulit apud basilicam Vaticanam hoc anno." Annales, J. C. 758 (tom. 12, p. 644). See Stoke's ed. of the Felire of Aengus, p. xci.; Obits and Martyrology of Christ Church, Dublin, p. 121; and Book of Lismore, fol. 52, b, 1. The Pontificate of Pope Paul (I.), 757-766, embraces the date of 'Translation' of St. Petronilla's remains, as given by Sigebert, but is 18 years later than the date in these Annals. It is to be further observed, that the motto said to have been found on her tomb, as given by Aringhi (Roma Subterranea) and older writers, commences with the word aureæ, whereas these Annals read area, in which case the word was probably supposed to bear the interpretation of cœmeterium, or sepulchrum.

<sup>4</sup> Dam-Derg.—This place has not been identified. The Four Mast. (738) state that it was in Breagh. See next note. The name would signify "Red Ox" (or Red Deer).

comprising the baronies of Upper and Lower Kells, in the co. Meath.

<sup>7</sup> Cenannas.—This was the old Irish name of Kells, co. Meath. This clause, which is added in al. man. in A., is not in B. Clar. 49 has "Bellum Sretmai at Kelles by Daniell M'Murchaa." A marg. note in A. has Domnall mac Mupchada uictor fuit.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 742. Death of Affrica, abbess<sup>3</sup> of Kildare. The battle of Dam-Derg,<sup>4</sup> in which Dungal, son of Flann, King of Cul,<sup>5</sup> and Fergus, son of Ostech, were slain. Indrechtach, descendant of Conaing, was victor. Death of Cumene, descendant of Ciaran, abbot of Rechra.<sup>6</sup> The battle of Sered-magh (i.e., at Cenannas,<sup>7</sup> by Domnall, son of Murchad), in which fell Aedh Aldan,<sup>8</sup> son of Fergal, and Cumuscach, son of Conchobar, King of the Airthera,<sup>9</sup> and Moenach, son of Conlaech, King of the Ui-Cremthainn, and Muiredach, son of Fergus Forcraidh,<sup>10</sup> King of the Ui-Tuirtri. [742.]

This is Aedh Aldan's last verse <sup>11</sup>:—

“If my dear God protected me,
On the brink of Loch-Sailcedan;<sup>12</sup>
If I were afterwards given to sin,
My protection would be beyond rule.”

A battle between the Ui-Maine and Ui-Fiachrach of Aidhne. The battle of Lorg,<sup>13</sup> between the Ui-Aillello,<sup>14</sup> and Gailenga.<sup>15</sup> These four battles were fought almost to as “Orientales,” i.e., the eastern parts of the ancient territory of the Oirghialla, is still represented by the baronies of Lower and Upper Orior, in the co. Armagh.

Death of Fergus, son of Colman Cutlach, a wise man.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 744. A terrible and wonderful sign [744.] was seen in the stars at night. Forannan, abbot of Cluain-Iraird, died; and Conghus, anchorite of Cluain-Tibrinne.<sup>14</sup> Cummaene, grandson of Moenach, abbot of Lann-leire,<sup>15</sup> dies. A battle between the Ui-Tuirtri and

<sup>3</sup> Inis-itir-da-Dabul.—The "Island between two Dabals." In Clar. 49 it is stated that the battle was fought "at Inis between the two Davuls." Dabhal was the ancient Irish name of the River Blackwater, which forms the boundary, for a long distance, between the counties of Armagh and Tyrone. A tributary to this river, called the "River Tall," which joins the Blackwater, after a circuitous course, a few miles to the north of Charlemont, in the county of Armagh, may be the second Dabhal.

seems to have quite misunderstood this entry, for he renders Ṗeṡṡur uictur euarrit by "Fergus went away conqueror."

<sup>2</sup> Mucinis Riagail.—"Riagal's Pig-island." The festival day of St. Riagal, who gave name to this island, is set down in the Calendars of Donegal and Aengus at October 16; and it is stated that the place was in Loch-Deirgdeirc, now Lough-Derg, an expansion of the Shannon between Portumna and Killaloe. O'Conor entirely misunderstood the name Riagail, which he renders by "ab alienigenis," as if he thought it represented the words ria gallaib, "by Foreigners."

This name is also written Modimóc, "My little Dimma."

<sup>4</sup> Docmuai.—"Thy Cumai." Also written Mocumai, "My Cumai." O'Conor wrongly prints Dochumai do chuain, and translates "mœrore," thinking that the Annalist intended to represent Dodimóc, referred to in the preceding entry, as having died "of grief"! O'Donovan falls into the same error. (Four Mast., Vol. I., p. 347, note o).

<sup>3</sup> Cruithni.—The Cruithni, or Picts, of Ulad. The Four Masters, who record the death of Cathasach at the year 749, call him "King of Ulad." His name occurs as one of the kings of that province in the list contained in the Book of Leinster (p. 41, col. 3).

<sup>10</sup> Rath-beithech.—O'Donovan considered this place to be Rathbeagh, a townland in the barony of Galmoy, co. Kilkenny. Four Mast., A.D. 749, note w. But he was probably in error. The name is written Rath-betha in the Book of Leinster, p. 41, col. 3.

<sup>11</sup> Cill-mor of Aedan.—The Martyr of Donegal, at Aedan's day (Nov. 2), states that this church was in Ui-Meith-Macha, a district in the co. Monaghan. The name seems to be now represented by Kilmore, a parish in the barony and county of Monaghan.

p. 181. The Ann. Four Mast., at A.D. 732, have some Irish verses attributed to Congus.

<sup>5</sup> Cato. — The MSS. A. and B. have Catohic; but Clar. 49 has "Bellum Cato hic." Catohic may possibly be a mistake for Catonic. See Reeves' Adamnan, p. 385, note m.

Maighe Einir, the "big church of Magh-Einir." Now Kilmore, a few miles to the east of the city of Armagh.

was probably the compiler of the work from which a quotation is given in this Chronicle at the year 628 supra.

<sup>2</sup> In ballenio.—"In vellenio," Tigernach. The meaning is not very clear. Clar. 49 has "Combustio lethairle Cluana Iraird m Ballenio," where 'Ballenio' is taken for a man's name. The record possibly means that half the corn of the establishment was burned in the kiln.

ing of the 'leth-airle'<sup>1</sup> of Cluain-Iraird in 'ballenio.'<sup>2</sup> Death of Echaid of Cill-toma. Death of Cele-Dulassi<sup>3</sup> of Daimh-inis. Kal. Jan. A.D. 751. Death of Cillene 'droctech,'<sup>7</sup> [751] bis. anchorite of Ia. Cathal, son of Forandan, abbot of Cill-dara, and Cummene descendant of Becc, a devout man of Egg,<sup>8</sup> died. Death of Dichuill, son of Menid, abbot of Inis-Muiredhaigh;<sup>9</sup> and death of Conghus 'Caech,' scribe, abbot of Liath-mor of Mochoemoc.<sup>10</sup> Death of Fiachna, descendant of Macniadh, abbot of Clonfert-Brendan. that this year is the 320th year from the commencement of these Annals (431).

Mile-Borris, barony of Eliogarty, co. Tipperary. The obit of its founder, Mochoemhoc, or 'Pulcherius,' is given above at the year 655.

<sup>4</sup> Brecraighe.—This was the name of a tribe situated in Magh-Brecraighe, in the N.W. of the co. of Westmeath, adjoining the county of Longford, in which the Cinel-Coirpri were at this time located. O'Conor blunders most egregiously regarding this entry, in his ed. of these Annals.

name of which would now be written Tullafinneen, or Tullyfinneen, has not been identified.

Now known as Assylin, near Boyle, co. Roscommon.

<sup>14</sup> Bairche. — Dean Reeves has satisfactorily proved that this was the ancient name of the territory now forming the barony of Mourne, co. Down. Eccl. Antiq., p. 205 sq. The Mourne Mountains were known as Benna Bairche, the "Peaks of Bairche." The Four Masters record this prodigy at the year 739. But Fiachna son of Aedh Roin was not then King of Ulad. His obit is given at the year 788 infra; and as the Book of Leinster (p. 41, col. 3) gives the duration of Fiachna's reign as 38 years, he could not have been King of Ulad before A.D. 750. Clar. 49 has no notice of the prodigy.

fies "House of relics," or "Relic-house." It has not been identified.

bishop of Methus-tuirm,<sup>10</sup> and Baethallach, son of Colman

Fergus as the son of Fothadh Red-spear, son of Muiredach. Clar. 49 says "Fergus son of Cella," and does not notice the alteration suggested in A. The Four Mast., at A.D. 751, give the obit of "Fergus, son of Ceallach, King of Connaught." Fergus is also called "son of Cellach" (mac Ceallaigh) in the Book of Leinster, (p. 41, col. 1). He was probably the "Fergus son of Cellach" mentioned at the year 743 supra, in connection with the 'Law' of St. Ciaran, and the 'Law' of St. Brendan.

<sup>9</sup> Cluain-Cormaic.—The "Lawn (or meadow) of Cormac." The Four Mast., at A.D. 751, say that Ailgal was anchorite of Imlech-Fordeorach.
But neither place has been identified.

<sup>10</sup> Methus-tuirm.—So in A. and B.
"Methius-truim," Clar. 49. "Methas-stantially agrees with the addition in

chetna in Ui-Bresail." Ui-Bresail, or Clann-Bresail, was the name of a tribe (and also of their territory) situated in the present barony of Oneilland East, in the county of Armagh.

<sup>4</sup> Foibhran.—At the year 815 infra, (where the name is written Foibrein, (genit. of Foibren), the place is referred to as in the territory of Graicraigi (or Gregraidhi), which anciently comprised the present barony of Coolavin, co. Sligo, and a considerable portion of the N.W. of the co. Roscommon.

<sup>5</sup> Emain-Macha.—Now the Navan fort, about two miles to the west of Armagh. For much useful information as to the way in which several present Irish topographical names, beginning with the letter N, are formed from old names beginning with vowels (as Ailill, grandson of Dunchadh,<sup>3</sup> was victor.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 758. Slogadach, son of Donngal, of [758.] the Cinel-Coirpri; Echaidh, son of Conall Menn, abbot of Foibhran;<sup>4</sup> Fordubhan Liphechaire; Domnall, son of Aedh Lagen; Siadhail, son of Luath, doctor, and Echaidh, son of Fiachra, a wise man, died. The battle of Emain-Macha,<sup>5</sup> in which Dungal Ua Conaing, and Donnbo,<sup>6</sup> wereslain. Fiachna,<sup>7</sup> son of Aedh Roin, was victor.

Navan from Emain), see Joyce's Irish Names of Places, First Series, p. 83.

<sup>6</sup> Donnbo.—Probably the same as the Donnbo, son of Cubreatan, by whom Congal, son of Eigneoh, lord of the Airthera (or Oriors) was slain in A.D. 743, according to the chronology of the Four M. The killing of Congal is entered in these Annals at the year 747; but the name of his slayer is not given. The Frag. of Irish Annals, at A.D. 722 (p. 33, sq.), give a harrowing, and apparently apocryphal, account of the history of another Donnbo.

for nímaíuair ("not well did he go"), a form of expression not yet satisfactorily examined or explained, seems cognate with the forms nímaíuairam, nímaíuairam, nímaí[u] gabramair ("not well have we gained," "—passed," "—taken"). See Chron. Scot., A.D. 827. These stanzas, which are not in B., or in Clar. 49, are written in the lower margin of fol. 31 d in A., with a sign referring to their place in the text.

 establishment in particular, is usually understood as indicating "Daim-

 Nátraić is put for nátraič, to rhyme with catraic, the last word in the stanza. The proper form of the accus. plural of nathir (natrī), however, is nathpacha.

 meant Emain-Macha, or Emania, the ancient seat of royalty in Ulster.*

 name of the valley of the Newry river. See Reeves' Eccl. Antiqq.,

 p. 253.

 molt" (molt being the Irish for a "wether"; comp. Fr. mouton, old Fr.
moulton, or multon). Clar. 49 describes Benn-muilt as "a mountain," but gives no clue as to its situation.

<sup>5</sup> Conflict of Foling.—Clar. 49 has "the Skirmish of Foling"; but O'Connor, in his ed. of these Annals, renders "Imairec Foling" by "Con-flictus cruentus." Foling was, however, the name of a place, which has not been identified. This entry is not given by the Four Masters.

Alas ! for thee, thou hooded little black man ;
 'Tis a shame [thou should'st be] amongst worms !<sup>1</sup>
 Thy face towards thy hateful foes,
 Thy back towards the city.<sup>2</sup>

The killing of Rechtabrat, son of Dunchu, King of Mughdhorna. Dubhðrumman, abbot of Tuilen, dies. A rainy summer. Benn-muilt<sup>4</sup> poured forth a stream with fishes. The killing of Ferdamal, son of Cennfaelad.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 759. Great snow on the fourth of the [759.] <sup>BIS.</sup> Nones of February. The conflict of Foling,<sup>5</sup> in which Dunchad son of Cathal, and Ceithernach son of Dothadh, were slain. Death of Taircelltach, a wise man. Murder of Congalach, son of Conall, King of Diathraibh.<sup>6</sup> Death of Muiredach, grandson of Bran,<sup>7</sup> King of Leinster. Famine, and abundance of acorns. Death of Conchobhar, son of Tadhg Teimin ; and Conait,<sup>8</sup> abbot of Lis-mor, and Gaimdibail, abbot of Ara-Enda,<sup>9</sup> died. A battle between the 'families' of Cluain<sup>10</sup> and Biror,<sup>11</sup> in Moin-Coisse-Blae.<sup>12</sup> Condam of Cluain-Cuifthin<sup>13</sup> dies.

<sup>6</sup> Diathraibh.—The situation of this tribe (or territory) is unknown to the Editor. The entry is not in the Ann. Four Mast. O'Connor blunders, as usual, and for "Diathraibh" prints dia thib, and translates "a latere ejus"!

"Condath" by the Four Mast. (A.D. 755).

noir, A. Cluana m̄ noir, B. Cluana m̄ Nois, Clar. 49. The Irish form of the name of Clonmacnoise is variously written Cluain-mic-U-Nois (the "meadow of the son of Nois's descendant"), and Cluain-mic-Nois (the "meadow of the son of Nois"); and it is difficult to say which is the more correct form, as the etymology of the name, which is sometimes found written Cluain-muc-Nois (the "meadow of Nois's pigs"), is uncertain.

Death of Anfadan, abbot of Linn-Duachail. A darkened sun at the third hour of the day. Death of Flann Garadh, King of Cinel-Mic-Erca. Duceta of Lothra<sup>1</sup> [died]. The slaughter of Cuilnech-mor, where the Connaughtmen were overthrown. A battle between the Ui-Fidgenti, and the Coreumruadh and Corco-Baiscinn. Bruide, King of Fortrenn,<sup>2</sup> dies. Niall Frossach<sup>3</sup> begins to reign.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 763. Great snow for nearly three [763.] BIS. months. Repose of Ronan, abbot of Clonmacnoise.<sup>4</sup> Death of Cormac, son of Ailill, abbot of Manistir-Buiti.<sup>5</sup> The great scarcity and famine.<sup>6</sup> Death of Dubhdeilge the Wise. The battle of Argaman, between the 'family' of Clonmacnoise<sup>4</sup> and [the 'family' of] Dermagh,<sup>7</sup> wherein<sup>8</sup> fell Diarmait Dubh, son of Domnall, and Dighlach, son of Dubhliss, and 200 men of the family of Dermagh.<sup>7</sup> Bresal, son of Murchad, remained victor, with the family of Cluain.<sup>9</sup> Great drought beyond measure. Ailill, grandson of Dunchad,<sup>10</sup> King of Connaught, died. Scannlan of Feimin, son of Aedhgal, dies. The bloody-flux<sup>11</sup> in all Ireland. The killing of Bresal,<sup>12</sup> son of Murchadh. The battle of Dun-bilè,<sup>13</sup> by Donnchad, over the Fera-Tulach.<sup>14</sup> Death

49 has "A runinge flood of blood in whole Ireland." This seems to be the first mention of the prevalence of the bloody flux, or true dysentery, in Ireland.

<sup>13</sup> Dun-bilè.—This place, the name of which signifies the "Fort of the ancient tree," and which was evidently in the present co. Westmeath, has not been identified.

Annalist as signaling Niall's elevation to the throne. In the Book of Leinster (p. 25, col. 2), the three showers are merely stated to have fallen in the reign of Niall (ṛnna ῥlaṛṛ). But at p. 274<sup>a</sup>, the same MS. contains the statement that the "shrines and precious things" of the saints of Ireland were covered with the silver which fell. These showers may really have been only some phenomena, like showers of shooting stars.

of Fiachra, son of Fothad, abbot of Baslec.<sup>1</sup> Murchad, son of Innrechtach, [died]. Three showers<sup>2</sup> were shed in Crich-Muiredaigh in Inis-Eogain, viz. :—a shower of white silver, a shower of wheat, and a shower of honey.

From Heaven for love of Niall [fell] :
A shower of silver, a shower of wheat,
And a shower of honey.

Flaithbertach son of Loingsech, King of Tara, in the

The killing of Suibhne son of Murchadh, with his two sons. The battle of Carn-Fiachach<sup>6</sup> between two sons are not in B., is written in the top margin of fol. 32 <sup>a</sup> in A. with a mark indicating the place in the text where they might be introduced.

<sup>5</sup> Religious state.—The Four Mast., who incorrectly give the obit of Flaithbertach at the year 729 of their reckoning (=734), and enter it again at A.D. 760 (=765), say that he died in Armagh. At the year 729 the F. M., instead of giving the death of Flaithbertach, should have recorded his retirement from the kingship, and entrance into the religious state, in which he continued until his death. See O'Flaherty's Ogygia, p. 433.

<sup>6</sup> Carn-Fiachach.—The "Carn (or monumental heap) of Fiacha." This Fiacha, who was son of Niall Nine-hostager, was ancestor of the tribe called Cinel-Fiachach, whose territory lay in the S. of the present co. of Westmeath. Carn-Fiachach, now called Carn, is situated in the barony of Moycashel in the said county.

<sup>3</sup> Falloman.—The entry of this battle in Ann. Four Mast., at A.D. 760, differs somewhat from the foregoing entry. The F. M. represent Falloman as having been slain by Donnchad, in place of having assisted Donnchad. The death of 'Follamhan' is the second entry under the next year in these Annals.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 765. The 'falling asleep' of Cremthan, [765.] abbot of Cluain-ferta.<sup>6</sup> The killing of Follamhan,<sup>7</sup> son of Cucongalt, king of Meath, treacherously. The battle of Sruthair,<sup>8</sup> between the Ui-Briuin and the Conmaicni, where great numbers of the Conmaicni fell, and Aedh Dubh, son of Toichlech, was slain. Dubhinnrecht,<sup>9</sup> son of Cathal, was the victor. A battle between the men of Meath and the Brega, where Maelumha son of Tothal, and Donngal son of Doreith, were slain. Death of Cernach son of Cathal, and of Cernach son of Flann. Suibhne, abbot of Ia, comes to Ireland.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 766. Conbrann,<sup>10</sup> abbot of Cill-achaidh,<sup>11</sup> [766.] died. The killing of Murchad, son of Flaithbertach, King of Cinel-Conaill. Fidbadach, abbot of Bennchair,<sup>12</sup> rested. Dubhdainbher son of Cormac, abbot of Manistir-Buiti,<sup>13</sup> [died]. The repose of Sleibene<sup>14</sup> of Ia. Mac-ind-sair,<sup>15</sup> abbot of Enach-dubh,<sup>16</sup> [died]. Glaindibur, abbot of Lathrach-Briuin,<sup>17</sup> rests. Cellach, son of Coirpri,

<sup>3</sup> Aedan.—Written Ḳiṡain in A. and B., and "Aoan" in Clar. 49. The Four Mast., at A.D. 763, have Ḳeṡṡan, which seems more correct. The form Ḳiṡain in the text is the genit. of Ḳiṡan, or Ḳeṡṡan.

sruithi," or "religious seniors," as O'Donovan translates). But this is surely wrong. In note g, appended to this entry in the Four Mast. by O'Donovan, he states that Clar. 49 (ad. an. 767) has "Lyne sapiens Cluana-mic-Nois"; whereas this latter authority has really "Hue (for Ua) abbas et sapiens," the name Mianniagh being omitted after Ua.

son of Fogartach, was slain by a robber. Flathgus, son of Fiachra, son of Cathal, was treacherously slain. The 'Law' of Patrick.<sup>1</sup>

Kal. Jan. A.D. 768. A destructive fight<sup>8</sup> among the [768.] Osraighi themselves, where the sons of Cellach, son of Faelchar, were put to flight. Toimsnamha escaped victorious. The battle of Ferna,<sup>9</sup> in which fell Dubhcalgaidh, son of Ladgnen. Cennselach<sup>10</sup> was victor. Repose of Murgal, son of Nindidh, abbot of Rechra.<sup>11</sup> Encorach Ua Dodain, abbot of Glenn-da-locha, died. of the King of Teamhair [Tara].” But Eithne may have been the wife of more than one King of Tara.

<sup>10</sup> Cennselach. — Cennselach (for “Ui-Cennselaigh,” the tribe-name of the people of South Leinster), A., B. Clar. 49 has Cinnselach. The death of Cennselach, son of Bran (the person meant, no doubt, in the foregoing entry) is recorded among the events of the next year.

<sup>15</sup> Slaughter.—corcpaō. Clar. 49 has "one sett," for "onset," and O'Donovan (F. M. 765) translates corcpaō "battle." But corcpaō signifies more than a battle. See O'Donovan's Suppl. to O'Reilly, v. corcpaō. The so-called translator of these Annals, however, in the MS. Clar. 49, renders the word by "skirmish."

<sup>16</sup> Son of Rogellnach.—The F. M. (at 765) have mic Rogallaiḡ, "son of Roghallach," which is probably correct, although the name is written Rogellnaiḡ, in the genit. case (nom. Rogellnac), in these Annals at the year 721 supra.

<sup>17</sup> Son of Ainftech.—mac Ccinḡtiḡ (for mac Ccinḡtiḡ, "son of Ainbhtech," in A). The form in B. would represent mac Ccinḡpitiḡ, "son of Anfritech," which would be incorrect.

<sup>3</sup> Cianachta. — The Four Mast. (A.D. 765) say "Cianachta-Bregh"; a sept descended from Cian (a quo "Cianachta"), son of Oilill Oluim, King of Munster, whose territory seems to have comprised the present town of Duleek, co. Meath, and a large portion of the surrounding country.

across which the Cianachte, in their return home, would probably have had to pass.

<sup>6</sup> Cluain - Dochre. — "Cluain-Tochne," in the Four Mast. (A.D. 765). The Chron. Scot. and Ann. Four Mast. (at A.D. 977) mention a "Cluain-Deochra," which is stated in O'Clery's Irish Calendar, at 11th January, to have been in the co. Longford, although Archdall (Monast. Hib., p. 708) identifies it with Clon-rane, in the bar. of Moycashel, co. Westmeath. It may be the place now called Cloondara, in the parish of Killashee, bar. and county of Longford.

A. is probably correct. The territory (or tribe) of "Coirpri-mor" is mentioned in the Ann. Four Mast. at the years 949, 974, 1029, and 1032.

—This evidently refers to a celebration of national games somewhere, during which the people present thereat were so terrified by excessive thunder and lightning, that they clapped their hands in token of horror and despair. Dr. O'Connor, and the so-called 'translator' of Clar. 49, considered lamcomairt ("clapping of hands") as the name of the place in which the oenach (or "fair") was held. But they were clearly mistaken.
A similar incident is noticed at the year 798, infra.

<sup>2</sup> Fasted.—aenirτ (for aenirτ), A.
B. The so-called "translator" of these Annals in Clar. 49 renders this entry "Irishmen fasted for feare of theire destruction, one meale among them in awe of the fyre." Dr.

O'Connor (Ann. Ult. ad an.) translates aenirτh "consensio spontanea," which is as bad. But the translation given in the Census of Ireland for 1851 (Part V. vol. 1, p. 57), where aenirτ is rendered by "all in one place" (as if the original was aen r̃iτh) is even worse.

The 'clapping of hands'<sup>1</sup> on the festival of St. Michael, of which was said the "fire from Heaven." Death of Suibhne, abbot of Ia. The Goidhil fasted<sup>2</sup> two 'tredans'<sup>3</sup> together, and only one meal between them, through fear of the fire. Repose of Maelaichthin, abbot of Cluain-Eidhnech.<sup>4</sup> The 'Law' of Coman and of Aedan, a second time,<sup>5</sup> over the three divisions of Connaught. Aedh Aithgin, King of the Ui-Maine, and Art son of Flaithniadh, King of Aidhne, were slain. Lergus, son of Dubhcomair, died.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 772. Moenach, son of Colman, abbot of Slane and Cill-Foibrigh, died of the 'bloody flux.' Daniel Ua Foileni, scribe of Letuba,<sup>6</sup> rested. Donncothaidh, King of Connaught, died. An unusual drought and heat of the sun, so that almost all food failed. A great abundance of acorns after it. Martan of Inis-eidnech, Aedan bishop of Magh-Eo,<sup>7</sup> [and] Ceithernach Ua Erumono, abbot of Cluain-ferta-Brenainn, died. Lerthan, abbess<sup>8</sup> of Cill-dara, died. A dark moon on the second of the Nones of December. Aedh son of Coirpri, abbot<sup>9</sup> of Rechru, died. [772.]

Kal. Jan. A.D. 773. Death of Albran, son of Foidmed, abbot of Treoid-mor,<sup>10</sup> on the sixth day between the two [773.]

seems used throughout these Annals to signify the abbot or superior of a monastery.

<sup>10</sup> Treoid-mor; or "Great Treoid." But there is no mention in these Annals, or in any other authority known to the Editor, of a Treoid-beg, or "little Treoid." The place referred to is now known as Trevet, in the parish of the same name, barony of Skreen, and county of Meath. The old name of the place was Duma-dergluachra ("Mound of the red rushy-place"), according to a statement in Lebor-na-hUidri, p. 119a.

thought that this was probably the vale of the river [Clody], near Newtown-Barry, in the county Wexford. (Ann. Four Mast., A.D. 769, note o.) But this is doubtful. O'Conor absurdly translates the name "vallis illustrium heroum."

<sup>11</sup> Linn.—This should evidently be Linn-Duachaill, a place which O'Donovan identifies with Magheralin, in the co. Down; but on no sufficient authority, so far as the Editor can see. The Martyr. of Donegal, at the 23rd of April, has "Suairlech, abbot of Linn-Duachaill, A.D. 774."

<sup>13</sup> Belach-duin.—The "Pass" of the "dun" (or "fort"). This was the old name of Disert-Chairain, or Castlekeeran, in the barony of Upper Kells, and county of Meath.

<sup>14</sup> Achadh-liag.—The "Field of the Stones." Dr. O'Connor (in Ann. Ult. ad. an.) states that this place was Athleague [in the bar. of Athlone, co. Roscommon]. But O'Donovan (Four Mast., A.D. 770, note x) thought that the place referred to was "the place now called Achadh-leaga, situated on the east side of the river Suck," in the same barony.

This would also mean "battle of the dogs," cu (gen. pl. and sg. con.) a "dog," being frequently used in the formation of the names of remarkable Irishmen in ancient times. This entry may have some reference to the 1st and 2nd entries under the next year.

<sup>2</sup> 'Jugulatio.'—This word as used in the Irish Annals always means a death inflicted by violence. The Four Masters, who have the entry of this event at the year 772, say that the one killed the other; in other words, that they fell by each other.

<sup>6</sup> King.—pegir, A. B. Clar. 49 has 'rex.' But the older MSS. are probably correct, and as the forms rili and pegir are used in connection with "Flathruí" (the genit. form of Flathrue, or Flathru), it follows

Domnall; and many of the Munstermen were slain; and the Ui-Neill were victors. Combat of the Cu's.<sup>1</sup>

Kal. Jan. A.D. 776. The 'jugulatio'<sup>2</sup> of Cumuscach's sons, at Odhra,<sup>3</sup>—one lived, another died. A mutual battle between two descendants of Cernach,<sup>4</sup> viz., Niall and Cumuscach, in which fell Echtgus, son of Baeth, and many others, in the fair-green of Caladruim.<sup>5</sup> The hosting of Leinster by Donnchad upon Breg. Winter altogether in the Summer, viz., great rain and great wind. Flathrui, son of Domnall, King<sup>6</sup> of Connaught. Disturbance of the fair,<sup>7</sup> by Donnchad, against the Cianachta. The war between Donnchad and Congalach.<sup>8</sup> Slaughter of the Calraighi by the Ui-Fiachrach. Ban-Bodbhgna,<sup>9</sup> a wise man, died. The 'bloody flux.' Many diseases besides; a mortality almost. The great mortality of cows. [776.]

Kal. Jan. A.D. 777. The same war between Donnchad and Congalach (i.e., son of Conaing<sup>10</sup>); and the battle of Forcalad at the end of it, in which were slain Congalach, son of Conaing, and Cuanu, son of Ecned, and Diarmait, son of Clothgna, and Dunchad, son of Aléne, and Flaithnia, son of Maelduin, and many others. Donnchad was victor. [777.]

that some word like mopry, or obitry, has been omitted before Flathrui. But the death of Flaithruae, King of Connaught (the same name a little altered), is entered under the year 778.

<sup>10</sup> Son of Conaing.—The original of this clause is added by way of gloss in B. It is in the text in Clar. 49. Congalach, son of Conaing, was King of the Brega, in Meath.

<sup>1</sup> Forcalad.—O'Donovan was uncertain whether this should be "Forcalad," or for Calad ("upon Calad"); which ("Calad") he regarded as "probably the . . . Caladh of Calraighe . . . in the present parish of Ballyloughloe [co. Westmeath]. Ann. Four Mast., A.D. 773, note o. This stanza, which is not in B., is added, in the original hand, in the lower margin of fol. 336 in A., with a mark of reference to its place in the text.

<sup>2</sup> Donnachad.—Monarch of Ireland. The enforcement, or promulgation, of the 'Law' (or tribute) of St. Colum-Cille by his father Domnall, also monarch of Ireland, is recorded above at the year 752.

<sup>4</sup> Niall Frosach.—Niall "of the Showers." His accession to the kingship of Ireland is recorded above at the year 762 (=763). In the Book of Leinster (p. 25, col. 2), Niall is stated to have died in Ili (Iona), na ailethri, "in his pilgrimage;" and it is added that three remarkable showers fell in his reign, namely, a shower of "white silver," a shower of honey, and a shower of wheat. See under the years 717 and 763, supra.

By the battle of Forcalad<sup>1</sup> was caused A sorrowful, tearful Sunday.
Many a fond mother was sad
On the Monday following.

Burning of Clonmacnoise on the 6th of the Ides of July. The 'bloody flux.' The great mortality of cows. The 'Law' of Colum-Cille by Donnchad<sup>2</sup> and Bresal. Death of Etirscel, son of Aedh, son of Colgu, King of Ui-Cennselaigh. The 'falling asleep' of Ainfcellach, abbot of Connor, and of Lann-Ela<sup>3</sup>. Niall Frosach,<sup>4</sup> son of Fergal, (in I-Colum-Cille<sup>5</sup>), and Niall son of Conall Grant,<sup>6</sup> King of the South of Bregh, and Tuathal son of Cremthan,<sup>7</sup> King of Cualand, and Flannabra, King of Ui-Mail, and Aedh Finn son of Echaidh, King of Dalriata<sup>8</sup>—all died. Sithmaith, abbess of Cluain-Bairenn,<sup>9</sup> died. Finan, abbot of Cluain-ais,<sup>10</sup> and Constans, a wise man, of Loch-Eirne,<sup>11</sup> rested. A slaughter of the Ui-Mani, in Magh-Dairben,<sup>12</sup> where Artgal<sup>13</sup> was the victor. Eithni, daughter of Cinadhon,<sup>14</sup> died.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 778. Death of Fulartach, bishop of [778.]
Cluain-Iraird. Oengus son of Alene, King of Mughdorne;

the co. Fermanagh. But this is probably a mistake. The Martyr. of Donegal, at Nov. 14, give the festival of "Constans, Priest and Anchorite, of Eo-inis, in Loch-Eirne in Uladh, A.D. 777;" evidently the same person. But according to the Ann. Four Mast., at A.D. 1231, Eo-inis [Eanish, O'Donov. note e ad an.] was in Lough Oughter [co. Cavan; an expansion of the River Erne further south].

the N.W. of the co. Cork. The obit of Breislen of Berre is entered under the year 798 infra, and that of his son Maelbracha, lord of Corca-Loighde (a territory to the south of Berre, in the same county), is given by the Four Masters at A.D. 800 (=805).

<sup>8</sup> Ros-caimm. — Plainly written roir chaimm (in the genit. case) in A. and B., and "Roischaim" in Clar. 49. The Four Mast., at A.D. 774, have πορ Comáin ("of Roscommon"). But the place intended may be Roscam, in the parish of Oranmore, co. Galway. It certainly could not have Conall Ua Osseni, abbot of Letuba;<sup>1</sup> Ainmeri, abbot of Rath-nua; Conna, son of Conan; Moenan, son of Cormac, abbot of Fursa's City<sup>2</sup> in France, [and] Flaithrúa,<sup>3</sup> King of Connaught, died. The mortality of cattle ceased not;<sup>4</sup> and a mortality of men from want. Burning of Cill-dara on the 3rd of the Ides of June. Burning of Cluain-mor-Maethog. Burning of Cill-deilgge. The small-pox throughout all Ireland. A very great wind in the end of Autumn. Muiredach, son of Oengus, King of Ard-Cianachta, was slain. A hosting by Donnchad into the Fochla,<sup>5</sup> so that he brought hostages from Donnall, son of Aedh Muinderg, King of the North. A battle among the Munstermen themselves, in which fell Fergal, son of Eladach, King of Des-Mumha.<sup>6</sup> Breislen of Berre<sup>7</sup> was the victor. Forbasach, son of Maeltola, abbot of Ros-caimm,<sup>8</sup> dies.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 779. Burning of Al-Cluadhe,<sup>9</sup> on the [779.] Kalends of January. Burning of Cluain-Bairenn,<sup>10</sup> and burning of Balne.<sup>11</sup> Death of Murchadh, son of Dubh-datuath. A battle was broken<sup>12</sup> by Colgu, son of Cellach upon the Airthera, where many ignoble persons were slain. Eilpin, King of the Saxons,<sup>13</sup> dies. Mac-Leinne, abbot of Inis-Bairenn, died. The flight of Ruaidhri from Ochtar-Ocha,<sup>14</sup> and of Coirpre, son of Ladhgnen, with the been intended for Ros-Comain (Ros-common).

<sup>13</sup> King of the Saxons.—This seems a mistake, as Elpin was a Pictish King. See Skene's Chron. Picts and Scots, Pref., p. cxxvi. note.

<sup>14</sup> Ochtar-Ocha.—Or Uachtar-Ocha ("upper Ocha"). Some place in Leinster; but not identified. O'Donovan says (Ann. F. M. A.D. 765, note s) that Ocha was the ancient name of a place near the hill of Tara, in Meath. See note <sup>4</sup> under the year 482 supra. Some lines of poetry referring to Ochtar-Ocha are written in the top margin of fol. 34a in A. But they are not worth printing.

from the latter MS. "Sinodorum"). "Synodorum," Clar. 49.

Fergus of Magh-duma dies. Forbflaith, daughter of Connla, abbess of Cluain-Bronaigh, died. Augustin of Bennchair, and Sedrach, son of Sobarthan, and Nadarchu, a wise man, died. A congress of the synods<sup>3</sup> of the Ui-Neill and the Leinstermen, in the town of Tara, where were several anchorites and scribes, over whom Dubhlitter<sup>4</sup> was president.<sup>5</sup> Macnio, son of Cellach, abbot of Dunlethglaisi, rested. The third<sup>6</sup> 'Law' of Coman and Aedan begins.

Wicklow. The Four Masters (at A.D. 776) have "Umhall," now represented by the baronies of Murresk and Burishoole, co. Mayo; which seems wrong.

to the Irish life of St. Patrick in the Leabar Breac (p. 28, col. a) Rath-inbhir was in the country of the Ui-Garchon, which comprised Rathnew, Glenealy, and other places in the present barony of Newcastle, co. Wicklow. It was probably the old name of the present town of Wicklow, which is situated at the mouth (or estuary) of Inbher-Dea, the ancient name of the Vartry river.

wise man, and Fergus, son of Echa, king of Dalriata—all died. The battle of Righe<sup>1</sup> [gained] by the men of Bregh over the Leinstermen, on the day of Allhallows, in which were slain Cucongalt, king of Rath-inbhir,<sup>2</sup> Diarmait son of Conaing, and Conaing son of Dungal—two descendants of Conaing—and Maelduin, son of Fergus, and Fogartach, son of Cumascach—two descendants of Cernach—were victors in the battle of Righe.<sup>1</sup>

The Leinstermen went on Samhain<sup>3</sup>
To the house of a good man they loved not ;
Desire of drink seized them not ;<sup>4</sup>
They remained on the brink of Righe.<sup>1</sup>

least of drink" (Ann. Four Mast., A.D. 776). But this is clearly wrong. The poet meant to convey that the army which remained on the brink of the river Righe could not have suffered from thirst.

<sup>8</sup> Ban[ban]. — Ban, A., B. "Ban-ab," Clar. 49 ; which adds the title "Airchinn," for Airchinnech, "Herenach," or "Erenach." The name is written Banbhan in the Ann. F. M., which is probably the correct form.

<sup>5</sup> Cluain-Conaire-Maelduibh.—The "Cluain-Conaire" ("Conary's meadow") of Maeldubh, a saint whose festival is mentioned in the Martyr. of Donegal, under Dec. 18. Now Cloncurry, in the parish of the same name, barony of East Offaly, co. Kildare; and not Cloncurry, in the barony of Ikeathy and Oughterany, in the same county, which was anciently known as Cluain-Conaire-Tomain. See the Felire of Oengus at Sept. 16, and Book of Leinster, p. 43a.

'bachall' of Artgal,<sup>1</sup> son of Cathal, King of Connaught, and his pilgrimage to the Island of Ia<sup>2</sup> in the following year. The battle of Cuirrech<sup>3</sup> in the vicinity of Kildare, on the 6th of the Kalends of September, the third day of the week, between Ruaidhri son of Faelan, and Bran son of Muiredach, in which Mugron son of Flann, King of Ui-Failghi, and Dubhdacrich son of Ladgnen, were slain in mutual combat.<sup>4</sup> Ruaidhri was the victor. Bran was led away captive.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 782. The slaying of Domnall son of Flaithniadh, King of Ui-Failghi, in Cluain-Conaire-Maelduibh,<sup>5</sup> in 'geislinne.'<sup>6</sup> Oengus, son of Crunnmael, abbot of Daimliacc; Ailill Ua Tipraiti; Suairlech, a celebrated anchorite, of Lis-mor; Bathallach, a wise man, of Senchua; Domnall, son of Ceithernach, King of the Ul-Carrcon, in religion; Rechtlaiten of Fobhar, a wise man; Aaron, a wise man; Faelgus, son of Tnuthgal, a wise man, of Cluain-Iraird; Fergus, bishop of Daimliacc,<sup>7</sup> and Becc, son of Cumascach—all died. Burning of Armagh, and of Magh-eo<sup>8</sup> of the Saxons. Terrible lightning during the entire night of Saturday,<sup>9</sup> and thunder, on the 4th of the Nones of August; and a great and mighty wind destroyed the monastery of Cluain-Bronaigh. The battle of Duma-achadh<sup>10</sup> among the Dalaraidhe them-

A., B. "in Geislinne," Clar. 49, where "Geislinne" seems to be regarded as the name of a place. Dr. O'Connor, in his ed. of these Annals (ad an.), altogether misrepresents both the text and its meaning.

<sup>9</sup> Saturday. — nocte rābbati. Translated "night of Sunday," in the extract from these Annals published in the Table of Cosmical Phenomena, &c., Census of Ireland for the year

1851 (Part V., Vol. I., p. 57). The year 782 of this chronicle corresponds to the year 783 of the common reckoning, the Dominical Letter of which being E., the 3rd of August was Sunday, and the fourth of the Nones (or 2nd) of August was therefore a Saturday.

<sup>10</sup> Duma-achadh.—The "mound of the field." O'Donovan, observing that this name is written "Dunai-achaidh" [the gen. case], in the Annals of Ulster, identifies the place with a fort in the parish of Dunaghy, co. Antrim. Four Mast., A.D. 778, note t. But "Duma-achadh" is the form in A. and B. Clar. 49 has "Duma-acha."

<sup>1</sup> Ferna-mor.—Ferns, co. Wexford. This battle is not noticed in the Ann. Four Mast., the compilers of which generally omitted entries of this kind, apparently from a disinclination to notice events calculated to bring discredit on the church of which they were such devout members.

<sup>2</sup> Son of Flaithniadh.—The corresponding entry in the Ann. Four Masters, at A.D. 776, has Flaithniadh, son of Congal, and not mac Flaithniadh, or "son of Flaithniadh."

<sup>4</sup> Dubhdaleithi — Tipraiti. — The former was Archbishop of Armagh at the time, and the latter King of Connaught. This entry seems to have been quite misunderstood by O'Connor and by the so-called 'translator' of selves, in which fell Focarta Ua Conalta. A battle in Ferna-mor,<sup>1</sup> between the abbot and the steward, viz:—Cathal and Fiannachtach. Moinach Ua Moinaigh, King of Ui-Mac-Uais, [and] the son of Flaithniadh,<sup>2</sup> abbot of Cluain-ferta, died. The 'Scamach.'<sup>3</sup> The promulgation of Patrick's 'Law' in Cruachna, by Dubhdaleithi,<sup>4</sup> and by Tipraiti<sup>4</sup> son of Tadhg.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 783. Rechtnia, abbot of Clonmac-[783.] BIS. noise, died. Maelduin, son of Oengus, King of Cinel-Loeghaire; Innrechtach, son of Dunchad; Ciaran, abbot of Rath-maighe-oenaigh and Tech-Mofinnu; Aedhgal, King of Umhall; Cernach, son of Suibhne, steward of Armagh; Coisenmech Ua Predeni, King of Ui-Echach of Uladh; Maelcaich, son of Cuscrad Menn; Conall, son of Crunnmael, abbot of Lusca, and Cugamhna, son of Noenenach, King of Cinel-Coirpri—all died. Burning of Ath-truim. A battle [gained] by Domnall,<sup>5</sup> son of Aedh Muinderg, over the Cinel-Boghaine. The 'bachall' of Dunchad,<sup>6</sup> son of Dubhdatuath, King of Ui-Maine. Flann, a wise bishop, abbot of Inis-cain-Dego, was put to death by poison.<sup>7</sup> The battle of Carn-Conaill<sup>8</sup> in Aidhne,<sup>9</sup> where Tipraiti<sup>10</sup> was victorious, and the Ui-Fiachrach were defeated. A royal meeting between these Annals whose version is contained in Clar. 49.

<sup>5</sup> And the avenging of him.—7 ultionem eiur. This entry is very loosely given in the MSS.

<sup>6</sup> Donnchad.—Called "Donnchad, son of Murchad," by the Four Mast. (A.D. 781=786). But according to the Book of Leinster (p. 42 col. 1), the Donnchad here referred to was Donnchad (son of Domhnall, son of Murchadh), King of Ireland at the time.

Ui-Fidhgenti; Tipraiti, son of Ferchar, abbot of Cluain-ferta-Brenainn; Cellach, son of Moenach; Tipraiti, son of Tadhg, King of Connaught; Sneidriaghail, abbot of Clonmacnoise, [and] Cellach, son of Cormac, King of Ard-Cianachta, died.<sup>1</sup> A very great storm in January. An inundation in Diarinis.<sup>2</sup> A terrible vision in Clonmacnoise, and great repentance throughout all Ireland. A battle between the Osraighe themselves, in which Faelan, son of Forbasach, was slain. Faebordaith, abbot of Tuilan,<sup>3</sup> was killed;<sup>4</sup> and the avenging of him<sup>5</sup> (i.e., at Tuilan;<sup>3</sup> Donnchad<sup>6</sup> was victor). The battle of Liac-find, between Donnchad<sup>6</sup> and the race of Aedh-Slanè, in which fell Fiachra son of Cathal, and Fogartach, son of Cumuscach, king of Loch-Gabhor,<sup>7</sup> and two descendants of Conaing, viz.:—Conaing and Diarmait. The battle of Cenond,<sup>8</sup> between the Ui-Echach [and] the Conaille, in which Cathrae, King of Mughdorna, and Rimidh son of Cernach, were slain. Death of Forbasach, son of Sechnasach, King of Cinel-Boghaine. The plague which is called 'scamach.'<sup>9</sup>

Kal. Jan. A.D. 786. Colgu, son of Crunnmael, abbot [786.] of Lusca; Clemens, son of Corbben; Lerghus Ua Fidhcain, a wise man of Cill-Maighnenn;<sup>10</sup> Robhartach son of Moenach, steward<sup>11</sup> of Slane, and abbot of Cill-Foibrigh;<sup>12</sup> Muiredach, son of Cathal, abbot of Cill-dara;

signify 'diocese,' the corresponding (loan) form in Irish being parče. But as regards its use in the above context, Dean Reeves observes "in monastic language a parochia was the jurisdiction of a Superior over the detached monasteries of the order." Adamnan, p. 336, note g.

O'Byrne's of the co. of Wicklow were meant. But he was wrong. Ui-Briuin-Cualand was the tribe-name of a powerful sept descended from Brian Lethderg (descended in the fourth generation from Cathair Mor, King of Leinster), whose territory comprised the greater part of the present barony of Rathdown, co. Dublin, and a portion of the northern part of the co. Wicklow. The churches of Killiney, co. Dublin, and Delgany in the co. Wicklow, were included in this territory. <sup>6</sup> Easter night.—In nocte parca A. "At Easter eve," Clar. 49.

<sup>8</sup> Son of Cathal.—In the Ann. Four Mast. (at 787=792), Tomaltach is stated to have been the "son of Innrechtach," which is supported by the entry in the List of the Kings of Ulad in the Book of Leinster, (p. 41, col. 3), where the length of Tomaltach's reign is given as 10 years. This notice seems out of place, if the entry in the Book of Leinster is correct, which represents Tomaltach as reigning 10 years after Fiachna son of Aedh Roen, whose obit is the second entry above given under this year.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 788. Death of Murgal, abbot of Clonmacnoise. [788.] Fiachna, son of Aedh Roen, King of Ulad, died. Fedhach, son of Cormac, abbot of Lughmadh, Slane, and Daimliacc, and Sloighedhach, King of Conailli, died. Gormgal, son of Eladhach, King of Cnodbha,<sup>4</sup> died in religion. Ferfughail, bishop of Cluain-Dolcain,<sup>5</sup> [died]. Burning of Cluain-Iraird, on Easter night.<sup>6</sup> Great snow on the 3rd of the Kalends of May. A quarrel in Ard-Macha, in which a man was killed in the doorway of the stone oratory.<sup>7</sup> A battle among the Ulidians themselves, in which Tomaltach son of Cathal<sup>8</sup> was slain. Echaidh<sup>9</sup> was victor. The destruction<sup>10</sup> of Cluain-ferta-Mongain,<sup>11</sup> by Oengus,<sup>12</sup> son of Mugron, in which Aedh, son of Tomaltach, was slain; and the oratory was burned. A battle among the Picts, where Conall son of Tadhg was vanquished, and escaped,<sup>13</sup> and Constantine was victor. The battle of Cloitech<sup>14</sup> between the Cinel-Eoghain and [Cinel]-Conaill, in which the Cinel-

<sup>9</sup> Echaidh.—The son of the Fiachna referred to in the last note. According to the Book of Leinster list, he succeeded Tomaltach, and reigned 10 years. His obit is given at the year 809 infra.

<sup>14</sup> Cloitech.—The Four Mast. (at A.D. 784=789) have ιομαριπεcc κλαιουige ("battle of Claidech," which place O'Donovan, note d, ad an., identifies with "Clady, a small village on the Tyrone side of the River Finn, about four miles to the south of Lifford." A marginal note in MS. B. has K. Cletis ια ηCceο οipnige (the "battle of Cletech by Aedh Oirdnidhe"). But Cletech was the name of a place on the Boyne, in Meath, whereas the battle in question must have been fought in the north of Ireland.

<sup>8</sup> Bachall-Isu.—"Baculus Iesu," the name of St. Patrick's crozier. For some account of this remarkable relic, see Annals of Loch Ce, at A.D. 1538, and Todd's Obits, &c., of Christ Church, Introd., p. viii., sq.

<sup>10</sup> Rath-airthir.—The "Eastern Rath (or Fort)." Now Oristown [in the barony of Morgallion, co. Meath], according to O'Donovan, Four Masters, A.D. 784, note f.

<sup>13</sup> Three Tribes.—να τρι ρλοινντε; lit. the "three denominations." Probably a variation of the term "Teora Connacht" ("Tripartite Connaught," or "Three Connaughts"), applied to the three aboriginal septs of Connaught, called the "Gamanraide of Irras [Erris]," the "Fir-craibhi," and the "Tuatha-Taidhen." See O'Flaherty's Ogygia, p. 175. Clar. 49 renders να τρι ρλοινντε by "The Three Surnames."

Bresal, son of Flathri, King of Dalaraide; Maelbresail, son of Aedh, son of Crichan, King of Ui-Fiachrach;<sup>3</sup> Donncorci, King of Dalriada; Cathmugh, King of Calraighe, and Ternoc, superior of Corcach-Mor,<sup>4</sup> died.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 792. The 'Law' of Ailbhe over Munster; and the ordaining of Artri, son of Cathal, to the kingship of Munster. The profanation of Faendelach, by Gormghal<sup>13</sup> son of Dinnanach; and the preying and spoiling of Ard-Macha, and the killing of a man there, by the Ui-Cremthainn. Reception of Faendelach again in Ard-Macha. 'Translation' of the relics of Tole.<sup>14</sup>

<sup>13</sup> Gormghal. — In the Book of Leinster, p. 42, col. 4, Gormghal is mentioned as one of the three Airchinnechs (or "Herenachs") who took the office of abbot by force, and who are not commemorated in the Mass. See Todd's St. Patrick, p. 181. The name of Gormghal is not included in Ware's list of the Bishops of Armagh. But under the year 798, infra, he is stated to have imposed the 'Law' of Patrick over Connaught; and in the entry of his obit at the year 805, he is described as abbot of Armagh and Clones.

<sup>1</sup> Ua Faelain; i.e. descendant (or grandson) of Faelan. A later hand writes αἰαρ O φλεῶνḡ ("alias Ua Fleadhaigh"), as in B. Clar. 49 has O Fleai. But the orig. text in A. agrees with the Book of Leinster (p. 42, col. 3), in which Airectach Ua Faeláin is stated to have been of the Ui-Bresail (a sept which furnished many bishops to the See of Armagh), and his rule is limited to one year. The name of Airectach is not in Ware's list of the prelates of Armagh.

<sup>2</sup> Abbess. — banaircinnēḃ. The Four Masters seem to have misunderstood this entry, if they copied it from the original of these Annals, as out of Lerben banaircinnēḃ they make Learbanbhan aip̃c̃inḡ-each ("Learbanbhan, airchinneach," as O'Donovan renders it, F. M. 789). But the office of airchinnech, as O'Don. himself has explained (Suppl. to O'Reilly in voce) was an office filled by one of the male sex, whereas banairchinnech is Latinized "antestita" (for "antistita") in the St. Gall MS. (p. 66 a). Clar. 49 has "Lerben, the abbates of Cluan Bairēnn." Besides, Cluain-Bairēnn (now Cloonburren, in the barony of Moycarn, co. Roscommon) was undoubtedly a nunnery at this time. O'Connor, of course, also misunderstood the entry.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 793. Airectach Ua Faelain,<sup>1</sup> abbot of Ard-Macha, and Affiath, bishop of Ard-Macha, slept in peace on the same night. Thomas, abbot of Benn-chair, [and] Joseph Ua Cerna, abbot of Clonmacnoise, died. Cathnia Ua Guaire, abbot of Tuaim-greine, and Lerben, abbess<sup>2</sup> of Cluain-Bairenn, rested. The killing of Artri, son of Faelan. 'Translation' of the relics of Trian. A hosting by Donnchad, in aid of the Leinstermen against the Munstermen. Devastation of all the islands of Britain by Gentiles.<sup>3</sup> Devastation of Mughdorna-Maghen<sup>4</sup> by Aedh,<sup>5</sup> son of Niall. [793.]

Kal. Jan. A.D. 794. Brann Ardcenn,<sup>6</sup> King of the Leinstermen was slain, and his queen, Eithne, daughter of Domnall of Meath, Finsnechta 'Cethar-derc,'<sup>7</sup> son of Cellach, slew them in Cill-chuile-duma,<sup>8</sup> on the sixth night after the Kalends of May, i.e., the fourth day of the week. The killing of Conn, son of Donnchad, in Crich-Ua-n Olcan,<sup>9</sup> by Flann son of Congalach. The burning of Rechra by Gentiles, and Sci<sup>10</sup> was pillaged and wasted. [794.]

<sup>8</sup> Cill-chuile-duma.—The "Church of Cuil-duma." O'Donovan rashly suggests (Four Mast., A.D. 790, note), that this was probably the place now called Kilcool, in the bar. of Newcastle, co. Wicklow. But in the Book of Leinster list of the Kings of Leinster (p. 39, col. 2), Bran Ardcenn, son of Muredach, and his wife, are stated to have been "burned" in Cill-cule-dumai, in Laignis-chuile, which was a district in the present Queen's County.

<sup>9</sup> Crich-Ua-n Olcan.—The "territory of the Ui-Olcan." O'Donovan states (Ann. F. M., A.D. 790, note m), that this was the name of "a small district in Meath." But he does not give any authority for the statement.

<sup>10</sup> Sci.—The Isle of Skye, in Scotland. The text of this clause in A. and B. has ῥεϣι (with a "punctum delens" under the letter ϣ) ὁϣεϣαὐ ῥαὐ, "Sci (Skye) was pillaged and wasted." For ῥεϣι (Skye) the Four Masters (at A.D. 790), have α ὁϣεϣινη ("its [Rechra's] shrines"), which seems an error. The compiler of these Annals evidently meant to say that Skye was pillaged and wasted.

Foendelach (son of Maenach<sup>1</sup>), abbot of Ard-Macha, died suddenly. Murchadh, son of Feradhach; Tipraiti, son of Ferchar, from Cluain-ferta-Brenainn, and Guaire Ua Tipraiti, abbot of Cluain-fota, died.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 795. Dubhlittir<sup>2</sup> of Finn-glais, and [795.] Colgu Ua Duinechda, Olcobhur, son of Flann, son of Erc, King of Munster,<sup>3</sup> [and] scribes, and bishops, and anchorites, 'fell asleep.' Offa,<sup>4</sup> a good king of the English, died. Echú, son of Cernach, steward of Ard-Macha, died an untimely death. Senchan, abbot of Cill-achaidh of Druim-fota,<sup>5</sup> and of Biror, and Suibhne, abbot of Ath-truim,<sup>6</sup> and Moenach, son of Oengus, vice-abbot of Lusca—all died. Mac Fergg[u]sa, King of Ui-Briuin, [and] Duinechaidh Ua Daire, chief of Ciarraidhe,<sup>7</sup> died. The battle of Ath-fen,<sup>8</sup> where Muirgis got off. Clothcu, bishop and anchorite of Cluain-Iraird, rested in peace.

<sup>4</sup> That are not numbered. — So in Clar. 49. The original of this clause is not in B., which goes to prove that the so-called translator of Clar. 49 did not follow the text of MS. B.

<sup>5</sup> Aedh; i.e., Aedh Oirdnidhe, son of Niall Frasach, King of Ireland.

<sup>6</sup> Aedh: i.e., Aedh Allan (or Aedh Aldan), as a gloss over the name indicates. He was King of Ireland, and was slain (see above under the year 742) by Domnall, son of Murchad, who succeeded him in the sovereignty.

<sup>7</sup> Domnall. — A gloss over the name in A. has mac Mupchada ("son of Murchad"). See last note. These lines (which are not in B.) are written in the lower margin of fol. 35 b in A., with a mark of reference to the place where they should be inserted in the text.

<sup>8</sup> Tech-sruithe. — The 'translator' in Clar. 49 renders this term by "house of the wise." But over the word Oengus, King of Cinel-Loeghaire, and Ailmedhair,<sup>1</sup> steward of Clonmacnoise—all died. The battle of Druim-righ,<sup>2</sup> in which were slain two sons of Domnall, viz.: Finsnechta, and Diarmait Odur,<sup>3</sup> his brother, and Finsnechta, son of Follaman, and many more that are not numbered.<sup>4</sup> Aedh,<sup>5</sup> son of Niall, son of Fergal, was victor.

Condal, daughter of Murchadh, abbess of the Tech-sruithe<sup>8</sup> in Cill-dara, slept. The wasting of Midhe by Aedh,<sup>5</sup> son of Niall Frasach,<sup>9</sup> and the commencement of his reign.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 797. Eudus Ua Dicholla, abbot of [797.] Cill-dara, died. Burning of Inis-Patraicc<sup>10</sup> by Gentiles; and they carried off the preys of the districts; and the shrine of Dochonna was broken by them; and other great devastations<sup>11</sup> [were committed] by them both in Ireland and Alba. Forinnan of Imlech-Fia,<sup>12</sup> and Condmach, son of Muirmidh,<sup>13</sup> descendant of Guaire Aidhne,<sup>14</sup> scribe of Clonmacnoise, died.

"wise," an old hand, probably Ussher's, has written "q. fire"? Tech-sruithe means "house of seniors."

<sup>10</sup> Inis-Patraicc. — "Patrick's Island." O'Donovan thought this was St. Patrick's Island, near Skerries, co. Dublin. Four Mast., A.D. 793, note y. But Dr. Todd understood Peel, in the Isle of Man (which was anciently called Insula Patricii), to have been intended. Cogadh Gaed

<sup>7</sup> Airthera.—A tribe inhabiting a district the name of which has been Latinized "Orientales," and "Regio Orientalium." The territory of this tribe is now represented by the baronies of Lower and Upper Orior, in the "east" of the county Armagh.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 800. The placing of the relics of Ronan,<sup>10</sup> son of Berach, in a shrine of gold and silver. Feidlimid Ua Lugadon,<sup>11</sup> abbot of Cluain-Dolcain,<sup>12</sup> died. A battle between the Ulaid and the Ui-Echach-Cobho,<sup>13</sup> in which fell Echu, son of Ailill, King of Cobho. And [800.]

following the Martyr. Donegal at November 3, and a note in the Feliré of Oengus at the same date, which state that there was a "Doire (or Daire)-Ednech," otherwise called "Daire-na-fflann," in Eoghanacht-Caisil, identifies this place with the townland of Derrynavlan, in the parish of Graystown, barony of Slievardagh, co. Tipperary. (Four Mast, A.D. 795, note h.) But the accuracy of this identification seems questionable.

<sup>10</sup> Ronan.—He was the patron of the church of Druim-Inasclainn, now Dromiskin, in the barony and county of Louth. His death, from the plague called the 'buidhe-conaill,' otherwise called 'cron-conaill' (see note <sup>5</sup>, p. 54, supra) is entered at the year 664 in the Ann. Four Mast.; and in the Chron. Scotorum at A.D. 661-664.

<sup>3</sup> Befail.—This name means "Woman of Fál," (Fál being a bardic name for Ireland). In the Tract on celebrated women in the Book of Lecan (p. 391a), where the name is written "Bebail," this lady is stated to have been the daughter of a "Cathal King of Ulad," and the mother of Aengus (the Oengus whose obit is given at the year 829 infra), and of Maelruanaidh (ob. 842 infra). But the ancient lists of the Kings of Ulad have no king named Cathal.

Cairell, son of Cathal, fell on the other side of the battle; and his army was victorious. Bresal,<sup>1</sup> son of Segeni, abbot of Ia, 'fell asleep' in the 31st year of his government. Ruamnus, abbot of Domnach-Sechnaill,<sup>2</sup> died. Befáil,<sup>3</sup> daughter of Cathal,<sup>4</sup> queen of Donnchad,<sup>5</sup> died. Bresal, son of Gormgal, of the Cinel-Loeghaire, was deceitfully slain by his brothers. Cathrannach, son of Cathal of Maenmagh, and Nindidh, an anchorite, rest. A rainy summer.<sup>6</sup>

Kal. Jan. A.D. 801. Muiredach, son of Donnall, [801.] King of Midhe, died. A hosting by Aedh<sup>7</sup> upon Midhe, when he divided Midhe between two sons of Donnchad, viz., Concobhar and Ailill. Ailill, son of Cormac, abbot of Slane, a wise man, and most excellent judge, died. Fergal, son of Anmchadh, King of the Osraighi, died. Macoigi of Aporcrosan,<sup>8</sup> abbot of Bennchair; Muiredach, son of Olcobhar, abbot of Cluain-ferta-Brendain;<sup>9</sup> Coscrach Ua Froich, abbot of Lughmadh,<sup>10</sup> and Clemens of Tir-da-glas<sup>11</sup>—all ended<sup>12</sup> their lives happily in peace. Artri, son of Ailill, King of Mugdhorna-Magan,<sup>13</sup> died. Euginis,<sup>14</sup> daughter of Donnchad,<sup>15</sup> Queen of the King of

of the name, see the Irish Ecclesiastical Journal, July, 1849, pp. 299, 300.

Mughdorne. Now represented by the barony of Cremorne, co. Monaghan.

<sup>8</sup> Fathadh-na-Canoine.—"Fathadh of the Canon" (or "the Canonist"). This entry, which is written in the marg. of A., in a later hand, forms part of the text in B. The exemption of Irish ecclesiastics from military service, through the alleged decision of Fathadh (or Fothadh) the Canonist, has been the subject of discussion by several writers on Irish History. See O'Donovan's Four M., A.D. 799, note e, and the authorities there quoted; O'Curry's MS. Materials, p. 364, sq.; and Lanigan's Eccl. Hist., III., 244. It is worthy of observation that the compilers of these Annals seem to have attached but slight importance to an event regarded with such interest by many other Irish Historical writers, ancient and modern.

<sup>9</sup> Cenannas.—Kells, co. Meath. This entry, which is part of the text in B., and is added in the margin in A., in al. man., seems to be a quotation from some poem; only that the final words (hoc anno) in A. (not in B.) would spoil the metre.

<sup>16</sup> Obtained his kingdom. —pegnum ruum accept. Finsnechta became King of Leinster, in succession to Bran, son of Muridach, whom he put to death by burning in the year 794, as above recorded under that year. He seems to have afterwards incurred the hostility of the King of Ireland, for under the year 803, supra, the latter is stated to have made an expedition into Leinster, and received the submission of Finsnechta. But he seems to have resigned his kingship, or been deposed in the next year (804 of these Annals), when King Aedh is stated to have divided Leinster between "two Muiredachs." The Four Masters, at A.D. 800 (=804 of these Annals, and 805 of the common reckoning), represent Finsnechta as having entered into religion. In the List of Kings of Leinster, in the Book of Leinster, p. 39, col. 2, Finsnechta is said to have again assumed his kingdom, after twice defeating the two sons of Ruaidhri (one of whom was probably the Muiredach son of Ruaidhri, who was made King of the half of Leinster by King Aedh, as stated at the year 804); which accounts for the use of the word "acceptit" in the text. The death of this turbulent prince, in Kildare, is noticed under the year 807 infra.

Coming from the churches of Ulad.

Maelfothartaigh, son of Fland, abbot of Finnabhar-abha<sup>2</sup> and Cill-Moinni,<sup>3</sup> died. A battle among the Ulaid, between two sons of Fiachna. Cairill was victor. Echaid fled.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 809. Cathina,<sup>4</sup> abbot of Doimliacc;<sup>5</sup> [809.] and Tigernach, founder of Daire-Meilli,<sup>6</sup> abbot of Cill-achaidh; and Maelfothartaigh, son of Aedhgal, abbot of Airecul-Dochiaroc,<sup>7</sup> a scribe; Cathal, son of Fiachra, King of Rath-airthir,<sup>8</sup> and Fera-Cul;<sup>9</sup> and Echaidh, son of Fiachna, King of the Ulaid; and Maelduin, son of Donngal, house-steward<sup>10</sup> of Ard-Macha; and Anlon, son of Conchobar, King of Aidhne; Macoirb son of Neuter, and Cellach Ua Conchodaigh, died. Guaire, abbot of Glenn-da-locha, 'fell asleep.' Tadhg<sup>11</sup> and Flathnia, two sons of Muirgis,<sup>12</sup> were slain by the Luighni.<sup>13</sup> Devastation of the Luighni<sup>13</sup> by Muirgis.<sup>12</sup> A hero of the Luighni of Connaught sang:—

Muirgis slew my son,
Which grieved me very much.
It was I that placed a sword
On Tadhg's neck therefor.<sup>14</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Nuadha . . . . went.—migrauit, A. mori (for mortuus ert), B. The name of Nuadha does not occur in the Book of Leinster list (p. 42) of successors of St. Patrick in the abbacy of Armagh. But at p. 25 b of the same MS., "Nuado" is mentioned among the abbots of Armagh who died during the reign of "Aed Ordride," who began to reign in A.D. 796, and died in 818, according to these Annals. The Chron. Scot. has Nuadha's obit at the year 812. It is entered under the next year in this chronicle.

c in cōnnaçta being wrongly marked with the sign of 'infection.'

Kal. Jan. A.D. 810. Nuadha, abbot of Ard-Macha, [810.] went<sup>1</sup> to Connaught,<sup>2</sup> with the 'Law' of Patrick, and with his shrine. Prevention of the celebration of the fair of Tailtiu,<sup>3</sup> on a Saturday, so that neither horse nor chariot arrived there, with Aedh son of Niall; i.e. the 'family' of Tamlacht<sup>4</sup> that prevented it, because of the violation of the 'Termon'<sup>5</sup> of Tamlacht-Maelruain by the Ui-Neill; and many gifts were afterwards presented to the 'family' of Tamlacht.<sup>4</sup> Admoer, daughter of Aedh Lagen,<sup>6</sup> died at a good old age. Dimman of Aradh,<sup>7</sup> a Munsterman, anchorite, ended his life happily. Tuathgal, a most wise abbot of Cluain,<sup>8</sup> died. A slaughter of Gentiles by the Ulidians. Blathmac Ua Muirdibhuir, abbot of Dermagh<sup>9</sup> [died].

Kal. Jan. A.D. 811. Flann, son of Cellach, abbot of [811] BIS. Finnglais,<sup>10</sup> a scribe, anchorite, and bishop, died suddenly. Echaidh, also a bishop and anchorite, abbot of Tamlacht, rested. Coscrach, son of Niallghus, King of Garbhros,<sup>11</sup> and Cernach, son of Flathnia, King of Mughdhorna-Bregh, died. Nuadha of Loch-Uamha,<sup>12</sup> bishop, anchorite, and abbot of Ard-Macha 'fell asleep.' Flann, son of Congalach, King of Cianachta, died. Oengus, son of Dunlaing, King of Cinel-Artgail, and Flaithbertach, son of Coirpre, abbot of Cill-mor-Enir,<sup>13</sup> died. Aedh Roen, King of Corco-and Chron. Scot. (718), the same Aedh is stated to have been the descendant of Cernach, and one of the chiefs of the Southern Ui-Neill slain in the battle of Almuin, or Hill of Allen, in the present county of Kildare. The lady Admoer would therefore seem to have survived her father about 90 years.

<sup>15</sup> Steward. — moep; translated "Serjeant" in Clar. 49. The office of "steward" or "serjeant" (moep) here referred to, consisted in collecting Patrick's dues, or tribute, in Bregia, by the authority of the archbishop of Armagh.

<sup>1</sup> Trelie-mor; i.e. "great Trelie." The place referred to is now called Trillick, and is in the barony of Omagh, co. Tyrone. Dr. O'Connor turns it into "Magni Tralee," taking Trelie as a form of the name of Tralee in Kerry. But he was wrong.

scribe and doctor of Cluain-Mic-U-Nois, 'fell asleep.' Etirscel, the son of Cellach, bishop of Glenn-dallocha, and Cinaedh son of Cellach, bishop and abbot of Trelic-mor,<sup>1</sup> died. Maelduin, a bishop, 'herenagh' of Echdruim, was slain. Suibhne son of Moenach, steward<sup>2</sup> of Slane, and Gormgal, son of Niall, son of Fergal, died. A hosting by Muirgis<sup>3</sup> and Forchellach<sup>4</sup> upon the Ui-Maine of the South, when many innocent people were slain. Forchellach of Fobhar, abbot of Cluain-mic-Nois, and Orthanach abbot of Cill-Fobric,<sup>5</sup> [and] Ronan Ua Lochdeirc, a bishop—all 'fell asleep.' A battle among the Leinstermen themselves, wherein the Ui-Cennselaigh were overthrown, and the sons of Bran obtained the victory. Cellach, abbot of Ia, the building of the church of Cenannas<sup>6</sup> being finished, resigned the abbacy; and Diarmait,<sup>7</sup> foster-son<sup>8</sup> of Daigre, was ordained in his place. Broen, son of Ruadhri,<sup>9</sup> a satrap of the Leinstermen, died. The 'Law' of Ciaran<sup>10</sup> was proclaimed over Cruachan<sup>11</sup> by Muirgis. Great suffering and heavy diseases.<sup>12</sup> Niall, son of Aedh, King of the Ui-Cormaic, died suddenly. Blathmac, son of Ailgus, abbot of Tir-da-glas,<sup>13</sup> and Blathmac, foster-son of Colgu, abbot of Inis-bo-finne,<sup>14</sup> died.

<sup>5</sup> Of the half.—de media. Not in B. The expression "de media ex maiore parte" occurs more than once in the MS. A. text of this Chronicle. (See at the year 833 infra); but B. does not employ the words de media.

Dr. Todd (Cogadh Gaedhel re Gal-laibh, Introd., p. xxxvii., note 2), would identify it with Little Island in the river Suir, near Waterford. See O'Donovan's Four Masters, Index Locorum, sub voce; and Chron. Scotorum (ed. Hennessy), p. 130, note 4.

<sup>13</sup> Niall.—In the list of the Kings of Uisnech [i.e. of Meath] contained in the Book of Leinster, p. 42, col. 1, Niall is stated to have been the son of Diarmait son of Airmedach, and to have been slain by his successor, Muridach son of Domnall, after a reign of seven years.

<sup>14</sup> MacLoingsigh; "son of Loing-sech".—The Four Mast. (at A.D. 825) give his proper name as "Flannghus." The Chron. Scotorum (at 823) has "Fergus," which is probably incorrect. It is worth remarking that the name "MacLoingsigh" does not appear in the list of the Comarbs (or successors) of Patrick in the Book of Leinster, p. 42, though it is in other ancient lists. See Todd's St. Patrick, pp. 177–182

The destruction of the fair of Tailltiu,<sup>14</sup> against the

the name of Eoghan (whose term of government is set down as eight years) is placed after that of Artri son of Conchobar (see at the year 822), who is stated in the above entry to have assisted in "dishonouring" Eoghan. The account of this event in the Ann. Four Mast. (at A.D. 825), and in the Chron. Scotorum (at 827), is much fuller than that above given. There is much confusion regarding these ecclesiastics. The death of Artri (whose rule as abbot of Armagh lasted only two years, according to the list in the Book of Leinster) is entered at the year 832 infra; and that of Eoghan at the year 833. See Harris's Ware, Vol. I., <sup>13</sup> Lethi-Cam.—In the Ann. F. M. (A.D. 825), and in the Chron. Scotorum (A.D. 827), Lethi-Cam is stated to have been in Magh-Enir, a plain which included Kilmore (Cill-mor-Enir), a place a few miles to the east of the city of Armagh. See note <sup>8</sup>, 236 supra.

Destruction of the Fair of Colman,<sup>2</sup> by Muiredhach,<sup>3</sup> against the South Leinstermen, in which a great many<sup>4</sup> were slain. Moenach son of Crunnmael, vice-abbot of Fera-Ros, died. Abnier, abbot of Cill-achaidh, 'fell asleep.' Destruction of the camp of the Leinstermen by Gentiles, where Conall son of Cuchongalt, King of the Fortuatha, and others innumerable, were slain. A great slaughter of sea-hogs on the coast of Ard-Cianachta,<sup>9</sup> by Foreigners; and the martyrdom of Temhnen, anchorite. The killing of Cinaedh, son of Cumuscach, King of Ard-Cianachta,<sup>9</sup> by Foreigners; and the burning of Lann-leire<sup>10</sup> and Cluain-mor,<sup>7</sup> by Foreigners. A battle was gained by Lethlabhar son of Loingsech, King of Dal-Araidhe, over Gentiles. Another battle was gained over Gentiles by Coirpri, son of Cathal, King of Ui-Cennselaigh, and the 'family' of Tech-Munnu.<sup>11</sup> Slaughter of the Delbhna in treachery.<sup>12</sup> way of representing, in Latin form, the Irish peall ("in treachery"). The ignorant so-called 'translator' of these Annals, whose version is contained in the MS. Clar. 49, in the British Museum, renders this entry thus:—"The slaughter of the Delvinians by murder or in guilefull manner."

<sup>4</sup> Finnabhair.—O'Donovan identifies this place with "Fennor, near Slane, in the county of Meath." (Four Mast, A.D. 827, note s.); but does not give his authority for the identification. There were many places called "Finnabhair."

Kal. Jan. A.D. 829. Oengus, son of Donnchad, King of Telach-Midhe,<sup>9</sup> died. Cormac, son of Suibhne, abbot of Cluain-Iraird, a scribe and bishop, rested in peace. Cellach, son of Cucathraige, abbot of Achadh-Crimthain,<sup>10</sup> died. Burning of Foir,<sup>11</sup> by Fedhlimidh.<sup>12</sup> Follomhan, son of Donnchadh, was slain by the Munstermen. Destruction<sup>13</sup> of the Ui-Briuin of the South,<sup>14</sup> by Fedhlimidh.<sup>15</sup> Joseph, son<sup>16</sup> of Nechtan, abbot of Ros-Comain, rested. Finsnechta,<sup>17</sup> son of Bodhbchadh, King of Cinel-mic-Erca,

<sup>13</sup> Destruction.—Cumbæ. This word, which is of rare occurrence by itself, is often met in composition with the particle aith (or ath), in old and modern Irish texts, in such forms as atcuma ("wounding, laceration;" O'Don. Suppl. to O'Rielly), and aithchumbe (gl. "cauteria et combustiones," Ebel's ed. of Zeuss (p. 881). For Cumbæ (as in A.), MS. B. has Cuimbæ, which O'Connor wrongly translates "Conventio."

<sup>14</sup> Ui-Briuin of the South.—There were several septs in Connaught called "Ui-Briuin," who were descended from Brian, brother of Niall Nine-hostager. The "Ui-Briuin of the South" was, apparently, another name for the "Ui-Briuin-Seola," otherwise called "Muintir-Murchadha," who were seated in the barony of Clare, co. Galway. On the assumption of surnames by the Irish, the principal family of this tribe took the name of O'Flaherty, from an ancestor Flaithbhertach, who flourished circa A.D. 970. See O'Flaherty's Iar Connaught (Hardiman's ed.), p. 368.

<sup>1</sup> Suibhne, son of Forannan. — Suibne mac Fairneiz ("S. son of Fairnech"), in A. Called S. mac Forannan ("S. son of Forannan") in B. The name of this Suibhne does not occur in any of the ancient lists of the "Comarbs," or successors of St. Patrick. The Four Mast. however, in noticing his death under A.D. 829, agree with this Chronicle in stating that Suibhne was abbot of Ard-Macha for the space of two months.

<sup>7</sup> Aighnecha. — The plural form of Aighnech, which was probably the name of a district in the n.e. of the county of Louth, near Carlingford Lough (the ancient Irish name of which was Snamh-aighech.) — See Reeves Eccl. Antiqq., p. 252, note z). According to a statement in Leb. na [died]. Suibhne, son of Forannan,<sup>1</sup> abbot for two months in Ard-Macha, died.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 830. Diarmait<sup>2</sup> came to Ireland, with the reliquaries of Colum-Cille. Muirenn, abbess of Cill-dara, 'fell asleep.' Airmedhach, abbot<sup>3</sup> of Magh-bilè, was drowned. Cernach, son of Dunchu, scribe and wise man, and priest of Ard-Macha, rested. Disturbance of the fair of Tailtiu,<sup>4</sup> at the Forads,<sup>5</sup> about the shrine of MacCuilind<sup>6</sup> and the reliquaries of Patrick, and a great many persons died thereof. The plundering of the Conailli by Gentiles; and their King, Maelbrihte, and his brother Canannan, were taken captive, and carried off in ships. A battle was gained in Aighnecha,<sup>7</sup> by Gentiles, over the 'family' of Ard-Macha, great numbers of whom were taken captive. Death of Dunchad, son of Conaing,<sup>8</sup> King of Cianachta. The dishonouring of Eogan Mainistrech,<sup>9</sup> abbot of Ard-Macha, in foigaillnaig,<sup>10</sup> by Conchobar<sup>11</sup> son of Donnchad, when his 'family' were made prisoners, and his herds were carried off. Fedhlimidh son of Crimthann, with the army of Munster and Leinster, came to Fiambur,<sup>12</sup> to plunder the men of Bregh. The plundering of Liphè by Conchobar.<sup>11</sup>

hUidre (p. 75 b) Fochaird (Faughard in the barony of Lower Dundalk, co. Louth), remarkable as the birth-place of St. Bridget, and the scene of the death of Edward Bruce, in the year 1318, was anciently known by the name of Ard-Aigneach.

<sup>9</sup> Eogan Mainistrech.—"Eogan of the Monastery" (i.e. Manistir-Buti, or Monasterboice, co. Louth). Eogan had been Lector of that Monastery. The entry of this incident in MS. B. is slightly inaccurate. Regarding the circumstances attending the elevation of Eogan from the Lectorship of Monasterboice to the Abbacy of Armagh, see Ann. Four Mast., at A.D. 825, and Chron. Scot. at 827.

<sup>7</sup> Artri.—See note <sup>16</sup>, p. 309 supra. In the list of the comarbs, or successors, of St. Patrick in the abbacy (or episcopacy) of Armagh, contained in the Book of Leinster (p. 42), Artri is stated to have ruled for two years, the term accorded to him in the several lists cited by Dr. Todd (St. Patrick, pp. 174–183). Ware fixes the beginning of his government in A.D. 822 (Harris's ed., vol. 1, p. 43). See Chron. Scotorum, at A.D. 827; and the references to Artri under the years 822 and 826 supra.

Kal. Jan.<sup>1</sup> A.D. 831. The first plundering of Ard-Macha by Gentiles, thrice in one month. Plundering of Mucsnamh,<sup>2</sup> and of Lughmadh, and of Ui-Meith,<sup>3</sup> and of Druim-mic-U-Blae, and of other churches. The plundering of Damliag, and of the territory of Cianachta with its churches, by Gentiles. Capture of Ailill, son of Colgu, by Gentiles. Tuathal, son of Feradhach, was carried off by Gentiles, and the shrine of Adamnan, from Domnach-Maghen.<sup>4</sup> Plundering of Rath-Luraigh<sup>5</sup> and Connere, by Gentiles. Cinaedh son of Echaid, King of the Dal-Araidhe of the North, was killed, through treachery, by his associates. Cinaedh son of Artri, King of Cualann, and Diarmait son of Ruadhri, King of Airther-Lifè, died. Conchobar<sup>6</sup> son of Donnchad, King of Ireland, died.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 832. Artri,<sup>7</sup> son of Conchobar, abbot of Ard-Macha, and Conchobar son of Donnchad, King of Temhair, died in the same month. Ruaidhri, son of Maelfothartaigh, half-King of Ui-Crimhtain,<sup>8</sup> died. Niall Cailli<sup>9</sup> begins to reign. A victory by Niall<sup>10</sup> and Murchadh over the Foreigners, in Daire-Chalgaidh.<sup>11</sup> The plundering of Cluain-Dolcain<sup>12</sup> by Gentiles. A battle was gained over the 'family' of Cill-dara, in their church, by Cellach<sup>13</sup> son of Bran, where many were slain, on St.

Oirghialla'seated in the present baronies of Upper and Lower Slane, in the county of Meath. See O'Donovan's Ann. Four Mast., A.D. 832, note t.

<sup>9</sup> Niall Cailli.—The Four Masters refer the accession of Niall Caille to A.D. 832. But O'Flaherty states that Niall began to reign in 833 (Ogygia, p. 434), which is the true year; thus agreeing with the present Chronicle, the chronology of which is ante-dated by one year at this period. The original of the foregoing entry, which is added in an old hand in the margin in A., forms part of the text in B.

<sup>4</sup> Loch-Bricerna.—So in A and B. But the name should be "Loch-Bricrenn" (the "lake of Bricriu"), as in the Four Mast.; now corrupted to Loughbrickland, near a lake of the same name, in the barony of Upper Iveagh, co. Down. The name of this lake is stated to have been derived from Bricriu, a chieftain who flourished in Ulster in the first century, and who, on account of his talent for sarcasm, is nick-named Bricriu mem-thenga ("Bricriu 'poison-tongue'") in the old Irish stories.

Death of Cobhthach, son of Maelduin, King of West Munster. Burning of Lis-mor-Mochuta,<sup>2</sup> and the slaughter of South Munster. Burning of Druim-Inasclaind<sup>3</sup> by Gentiles. The plundering of Loch-Bricerna<sup>4</sup> against Congalach, son of Echaid, who was afterwards killed [by the Foreigners] at their ships. Rechtabra, abbot of Cill-achaidh,<sup>5</sup> died. Tipraite son of Ruamlus,<sup>6</sup> abbot of Domnach-Sechnaill,<sup>6</sup> died.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 833. Oengus, son of Fergus, King of Fortrenn,<sup>7</sup> died. Eogan Mainistrech,<sup>8</sup> abbot of Ard-Macha and Cluain-Iraird, and Affraic, abbess of Cill-dara, 'fell asleep.' Cellach,<sup>9</sup> son of Bran, King of Leinster, and Cinaedh, son of Conang, King of Tethba,<sup>10</sup> died. Suibhne, son of Artri, King of all the Mughdhorna, was slain by his<sup>11</sup> brothers. Conchobar, son of Ailill, was slain by his<sup>11</sup> brothers. Conghalach, son of Oengus, King of Cinel-Loeghaire, died. Tuatchar, bishop and scribe of Cill-dara, died. A battle [was gained] over the Gentiles by Dunadhach,<sup>12</sup> son of Scannlan, King of the Ui-Fidgenti,<sup>13</sup>

<sup>10</sup> Tethba.—In later times called Teffia, a territory comprising adjoining portions of the present counties of Westmeath and Longford. The Ann. Four Mast. and the Chron. Scotorum state that Cinaedh, son of Conang, was King of Bregh, the ancient name of a district in the present county of Meath. A stanza in Irish regarding Cinaedh, son of Conang, written in the top margin of fol. 39 b in MS. A., has been partially mutilated by the binder.

ritory which included the present barony of Coshma, in the co. Limerick. See the interesting note regarding the territory occupied by this tribe in O Donovan's Annals of the Four Masters (A.D. 1178, note m).

wherein many were slain. The plundering of Glenn-dallocha by Gentiles. The plundering of Slane and Finnabhair-abha,<sup>1</sup> by Gentiles. Burning of the greater part<sup>2</sup> of Cluain-mic-U-Nois. The mortal wounding of Broccan, son of Cendercan, in Aidhne.<sup>3</sup>

Kal. Jan. A.D. 834. A hosting by Niall<sup>4</sup> to the Leinstermen, when he ordained<sup>5</sup> a King over them, to wit, Bran son of Faelan. Cinaedh, son of Niall, son of Aedh, was killed by the Ulidians. The ravaging of Meath by Niall,<sup>4</sup> when it was burned as far as Tech-Maelchonoc.<sup>6</sup> Cumuscach, son of Oengus, Vice-abbot of Clonmacnoise, died. The plundering of Ferna, and of Cluainmor-Moedhoic, by Gentiles. A change of abbots in Ard-Macha, to wit, Forinnan (from Rath-mic-Malais<sup>7</sup>) in the place<sup>8</sup> of Dermot Ua Tighernain.<sup>9</sup> Echaidh, son of Cuchongalt, King of the Ui-Tuirtri; and Caencomrac son of Siadal, steward of Cill-dara, and Bresal son of Cormac, abbot of Cill-duma-glinn<sup>10</sup> and other churches, died, and Muirchertach son of Gormghal—all died. Fergus son of Bodhbchadh, King of Carraig-Brachaidhe,<sup>11</sup> was slain by Munstermen. Death of Dunadach, son of Scannlan, King of Ui-Fidhgenti. Burning of the third part of Cluain-mac-Nois, on the second of the nones of March. Burning of Mungairit, and other churches of

<sup>1</sup> Rath-mic-Malais. — The "fort" (or "rath") of the son of Malas. Added by way of gloss over the name Forindan, in A. and B. Now known as "Rackwallace," a townland in the parish and county of Monaghan, containing an old graveyard. The identification of this place is due to Dean Reeves. O'Connor did his best to prevent the possibility of identification, by printing the name Raithinnmhalaís.

<sup>2</sup> In the place. — 1 n-1nno. 1nno, A.; 1nnon, B.; both of which are corrupt. The Four Mast. write 1 n-1nno, which is more correct.

<sup>9</sup> Ua Tighernain. — Descendant (or grandson) of Tighernan. Regarding these abbots (or bishops) of Armagh, see the lists published by Todd, St. Patrick, pp. 175-187; and Harris's Ware, vol. 1, p. 45. — And see also at the year 851 infra.

<sup>4</sup> Corcach-mor.—The “great corcach (or marsh).” Cork, in Munster. The Four Masters (A.D. 835), in noticing the obit of Dunlaing, style him comarba (or successor) of Bara, the first bishop of Cork. But Ware has no reference to him in his list of bishops of that See.

<sup>7</sup> Dermait.—The Dermot Ua Tigheirnain mentioned under last year as having been displaced from the abbacy of Armagh, in favour of Forinnan (or “Forannan,” as the name is written in the Book of Leinster, p. 42, col. 4).

Ormond, by Gentiles. The plundering of Druim hIng<sup>1</sup> by Foreigners.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 835. Suibhne son of Joseph, abbot of [835.] <sup>BIS</sup> Glenn-da-locha; Soergus Ua Cuinneda, abbot of Dermagh;<sup>2</sup> Forbasach, bishop and anchorite of Lusca—all ended life happily.<sup>3</sup> Dunlaing, son of Cathasach, abbot of Corcach-mor,<sup>4</sup> died without communion, in Cashel of the Kings. The taking of the oratory in Cill-dara against Forindan,<sup>5</sup> abbot of Ard-Macha, with Patrick's congregation besides, by Fedhlimidh,<sup>6</sup> by battle and arms; and they were taken prisoners, with great disobedience towards them. Dermait<sup>7</sup> went to Connaught, with the 'Law' and 'ensigns' of Patrick. Cill-dara was plundered by Gentiles from Inbher-Dea;<sup>8</sup> and half the church was burned. Coirpri, son of Maelduin, King of Loch-Gabhor,<sup>9</sup> was killed<sup>10</sup> by Maelcerna, and Maelcerna was killed<sup>10</sup> by Coirpri at the same moment; and they both died in the one night. The first prey taken by Gentiles from the South of Bregb, i.e., from Telcha-Droman, and from Dermagh of the Britons; and they carried off<sup>11</sup> several captives, and killed a great many, and carried away a great many captives. Great produce, between nut-crop and acorn-crop, which closed up streams, so that they ceased to flow. The battle of Drung between the Connaughtmen themselves, in which were slain Cellach, son of Forbasach, abbot of Ros-cam,<sup>12</sup> and Adomnan, son of <sup>10</sup> Killed.—By iuḡulatur eḡt, the compiler probably meant to convey that Coirpri and Maelcerna were mortally wounded in mutual conflict.

<sup>2</sup> Northern Deisi. — A branch of the great tribe of the Deisi (which has given name to the two baronies of Decies, in the co. Waterford), whose territory embraced a large district lying about Clonmel, in the present co. Tipperary. See O'Flaherty's Ogygia, part iii., chap. 69, and Joyce's Irish Names of Places (2nd ser., 1875, pp. 425-7).

Aldailedh ; and Connmhach Mor<sup>1</sup> was victor. Most cruel devastation, by Gentiles, of all the territories of Connaught. A battle-slaughter upon the Northern Deisi,<sup>2</sup> by Gentiles.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 836. Flaithroa, abbot of Manister-Buti, bishop and anchorite, [and] Martan, bishop of Cluain-cain, rested.<sup>3</sup> Maelduin son of Sechnasach, King of Fir-Cul ; Tuathal son of Fianghalach, King of Cinel-Ardgail ; [and] Riacan son of Finsnechta, half-King of Leinster, died. A fleet of three score ships of the Norsemen upon the Boyne. Another fleet of three score ships on the Abhainn-Liphè.<sup>4</sup> These two fleets afterwards plundered Magh-Liphè<sup>5</sup> and Magh-Bregh,<sup>6</sup> between churches, and forts, and houses. A victory<sup>7</sup> by the men of Bregh, over the Foreigners, at Deoninne<sup>8</sup> in Mughdorna-Bregh, when six score of them were slain. A battle [was gained] by Foreigners, at Inbher-nambarc, over the Ui-Neill from the Sinainn<sup>9</sup> to the sea, where a slaughter was made that has not been reckoned ; but the chief Kings escaped. Burning of Inis-Celtra by Gentiles. All the churches of Loch-Erne, together with Cluain-Eois and Daimhinis, were destroyed by Gentiles. The plundering of the race of Coirpri Crom<sup>10</sup> by Fedh-ilmidh. A victory over the Munstermen by Cathal,<sup>11</sup> son of Muirghes. The killing of Saxolbh,<sup>12</sup> chief of the Foreigners, by the Cianachta.<sup>13</sup> [836.]

polating the letters ppao. But poimurō occurs often in A. and B., and the suggested correction has not therefore been followed.

<sup>8</sup> Deoninne.—This place has not been identified. The territory of Mughdorna-Bregh, in which it is stated to have been situated, was in Bregh (or Bregia) in East Meath.

for the people of Ui-Maine, or the Hy-Many, in the co. Roscommon.

<sup>3</sup> Druim-urchaille.—O'Donovan suggests (Ann. F. M., A.D. 837, note q.), that this may have been the old name of a place called Spancel Hill, in the barony of Bunratty, co. Clare. But Shearman thought, and probably with good reason, that the name Druim-urchaille is now represented by that of Dunmurraghill, in the parish of the same name, in the north of the county of Kildare. See Loca Patriciana, p. 112.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 837. Cormac, bishop and scribe of [837.] Cill-Foilbrigh; Brann of Finnglais,<sup>1</sup> bishop and scribe, [and] Tigernach son of Aedh, abbot of Finnabhair-aba<sup>2</sup> and other churches, 'fell asleep.' Domnall son of Aedh, abbot of Druim-urchaille,<sup>3</sup> died. Cellach son of Coscragh, abbot of the Airicul-Dosenchiarog,<sup>4</sup> Cellach son of Coirpre, abbot of Ath-truim, died. Congalach son of Moenach, King of Ui-Mac-Uais of Breg, died suddenly. Maelcron, King of Loch-Lein, viz., the son of Cobhtach, died. A great royal meeting in Cluain-Conaire-Tommain,<sup>5</sup> between Feidhlimidh<sup>6</sup> and Niall.<sup>7</sup> Dochutu, a holy bishop and anchorite of Slane, ended a long life happily. Ferdalach, steward of Ard-Macha, died. A battle by Gentiles over the Connaughtmen, in which Maelduin son of Muirghes, and many others, were slain. Bran,<sup>8</sup> son of Faellan, King of Leinster, died.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 838. Maelgaimridh, an excellent scribe [838.] and anchorite, abbot of Bennchair, rested. Colman son of Robhartach, abbot of Slane; Aedhan, abbot of Roscre,<sup>9</sup> Cormac, son of Conall, abbot of Treoit,<sup>10</sup> [and] Maelruanaidh, son of Cathasach, vice-abbot of Lusca, died. Cumuscach, son of Conghalach, King of Cianachta,<sup>11</sup> died. Muiredach, son of Echaidh, King of Coiced-Conchobair,<sup>12</sup> was slain by his brothers, viz., Aedh and Oengus,

<sup>8</sup> Bran. — See above, under the year 834, where Bran is stated to have been ordained King of the Leinstermen, by Niall Caille, Monarch of Ireland. In the list of the Kings of Leinster contained in the Book of Leinster, p. 39, the period of Bran's reign is given as four years.

<sup>9</sup> Ros-cre.—Written ρορ cρae in B. But like ρορ cρea in A. Now Roscrea, in the county of Tipperary.

πορ, "three sods"), see the Prophecy of Art son of Conn, Lebor na hUidre, p. 119, Lithograph copy, publ. by the R. I. Acad.

<sup>12</sup> Coiced Conchobhair.—The "Fifth" (or "Province") of Conchobar Mac Nessa; a bardic name for Ulidia. In the list of the kings of Ulidia contained in the Book of Leinster, p. 41, the name of "Muridach" appears, the duration of his reign being given as 17 years.

<sup>2</sup> Maelsechnaill. — The name is otherwise (and more usually) written Maelsechlainn. He was King of Uisnech (or Meath) for ten years, and his accession to the monarchy of Ireland is recorded at the year 846 infra. As Maelsechlainn (or Malachy) I., he occupies a conspicuous place in Irish history because of his sturdy resistance to the Norse and Danish invaders.

year 834 supra, where Dermait is stated to have been removed from the abbacy of Armagh in favour of Forannan, he is called O'Thighernan.

<sup>9</sup> Floriacus. — For this name we should read "Ludovicus Pius," King of the Franks (who died on the 12th and by several others. Cenneitigh, son of Conghalach, King of Ui-Mac-Uais of Bregh, was treacherously slain by his brother, i.e., Ceile. A change of abbots in Ard-Macha, viz., Dermait (Ua Tighernaigh<sup>4</sup>) in the place<sup>5</sup> of Forindan (from Rath-mic-Malais<sup>6</sup>). A battle by Gentiles over the men of Fortrenn,<sup>7</sup> in which fell Euganan son of Oengus, and Bran son of Oengus, and Aedh son of Boant; and almost countless others were slain. The burning of Ferna, and of Corcach-mor<sup>8</sup>, by Gentiles.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 839. The plundering of Lughmadh [839.] DIE. from Loch-Echach,<sup>8</sup> by Gentiles, who led captive bishops, and presbyters, and wise men, and put others to death. Floriacus,<sup>9</sup> Emperor of the Franks, died. Burning of Ard-Macha, with its oratories and cathedral.<sup>10</sup> Fedilmidh, King of Munster, ravaged Midhe and Bregh, and rested in Temhair;<sup>11</sup> and the plundering of [Fera]-Cell<sup>12</sup> and [Delbhna]-Bethri,<sup>13</sup> on that occasion, by Niall,<sup>14</sup> son of Aedh.

<sup>12</sup> Fera-Cell.—"This name was long preserved in Fircal, a barony in the King's County, now known as Eglish; but there is ample evidence to prove that Fera-ceall comprised not only the present barony of Eglish, but also the baronies of Ballycowan and Ballyboy, in the same county." O'Donovan's ed. of O'Dubhagain, App., p. vi., note 24.

of fol. 40b in A., with a mark indicating the place where they might be introduced into the text.

represented by the barony of Brawny, co. Westmeath.

cluain auir in the text. Clones, in the co. Monaghan. After this entry, the following note is added in a later hand in MS. B.:—Ἀnnḡa m-ḃlía(scil. 840) the Lochlannachs came first to Ireland, according to the senchus ("history").

<sup>5</sup> Victory.—The word in the text is cumrunduð, which is decidedly corrupt. In the corresponding entry in the Ann. Four Masters (at the same year) the word employed is pḡaoíneacḃ, which means a "breaking," "rout," or "defeat."

nech (or Meath); and father of Maelsechnaill (or Malachy I.), who became King of Ireland in A.D. 847.
See at the year 846 infra, and the note on Maelsechnaill under the year 838 supra.

<sup>7</sup> Linn-Duachaill.—The "Linn (or 'Pool') of Duachall." The name of some harbour on the coast of the co. Louth; most probably Dundalk harbour. But see Todd's Cogadh Gaedhel re Gallaibh, Introd., p. lxii., note <sup>1</sup>. This fortress, or encampment, was of course formed by the Foreigners. It was a long way from it, however, to Tethba, a district comprising parts of the present counties of Westmeath and Longford. See
p. 316 ante, note <sup>9</sup>.

Death of Murchadh, son of Aedh, King<sup>1</sup> of Connaught. The mortal wounding of Cinaedh, son of Coscrach, King of Breghmaine,<sup>2</sup> in Tethba.<sup>3</sup> Joseph of Ros-mor, a bishop and excellent scribe, and anchorite, abbot of Cluain-Eois<sup>4</sup> and other churches, 'fell asleep.'

Kal. Jan. A.D. 840. Gentiles on Loch-Echach still. [840.] A victory<sup>5</sup> over Maelruanaidh<sup>6</sup> son of Donnchad, by Diarmait son of Conchobar; and Diarmait was afterwards slain by Maelsechnaill the same day; and Maelruanaigh remained alive. Aedh, son of Dunchad, was treacherously slain by the companions of Conaing, son of Fland, in his presence. A fortress at Linn-Duachail,<sup>7</sup> from which the territories and churches of Tethba<sup>8</sup> were plundered. A fortress at Dubhlinn,<sup>9</sup> from which Leinster and the Ui-Neill were plundered, both territories and churches, as far as Sliabh-Bladhma.<sup>10</sup> A hosting by Feidhlimidh as far as Carman.<sup>11</sup> A hosting by Niall to meet him, as far as Magh-ochtar.<sup>11</sup>

The crozier<sup>12</sup> of vigil-keeping Fedhlimidh,
Which was left on the thorn-trees,
Niall bore off, with usual power,
By right of the battle of swords.

<sup>9</sup> Dubhlinn. — Literally, "Black-pool," from which the name "Dublin" is derived. This fortress was also formed by the Foreigners, and is supposed to have been erected on the site of the present Castle of Dublin.

<sup>11</sup> Carman—Magh-ochtar. — The names of two places in the present county of Kildare; the first (Carman) in the south, and the second in the north of the county. O'Donovan was wrong in taking "Carman" to be the same as "Loch-Garman," the old name of Wexford. See his ed. of the Ann. Four Mast., A.D. 840, note h. It is strange that such an acute topographer and scholar, as O'Donovan undoubtedly was, should have considered it likely that King Fedhlimidh, marching from Cashel to meet the King of Ireland somewhere in Kildare, should go round by Wexford, where the Ui-Ceinnsealaigh would probably have given him very short shrift. But the correction of the error (which unfortunately has been repeated over and over again in works of seeming authority) would occupy more space than could be devoted to it here.

lines (not in B.) is written in the top margin of fol. 40b in A., with a mark of reference to the proper place in the text. They were meant to be severe against Fedhlimidh, King of Cashel, who was a sort of ecclesiastic.

<sup>7</sup> Comman.—Called Caemhan in the Ann. Four Mast., and Chron. Scotorum, in both of which authorities he is stated to have been put to death by Foreigners alone. But the Translator of the Annals of Clonmacnoise (at the year 839) states that "Kewan (abbot of Lyndwachill), was both killed and burnt by the Danes, and some of the Irishmen."

Kal. Jan. A.D. 841. Muiredach son of Cernach, [841.] steward of Ard-Macha, died. Gentiles on Dubhlinn<sup>1</sup> still. Finsnechta son of Bresal, abbot of Cill-Duma-glinn; Cumsudh son of Ruamlus, abbot of Domnach-Sechnaill—all died. Feidhlimidh of Cill-mor-Enir, a bishop, rested. Maelduin son of Conall, King of Calatruim, was taken prisoner by Gentiles. The plundering of Cluain-mic-Nois by Gentiles from Linn-Duachail.<sup>2</sup> The plundering of Biror and Saighir by Gentiles from Dubhlinn.<sup>3</sup> A fleet of Norsemen on the Boyne, at Linn-Rois.<sup>4</sup> Another fleet of Norsemen at Linn-sailech in Ulster. Moran, son of Indrechtach, abbot of Clochar-mac-n-Daimeni<sup>5</sup> was taken prisoner by the Foreigners of Linn,<sup>6</sup> and afterwards died with them. Comman,<sup>7</sup> abbot of Linn-Duachail,<sup>8</sup> was wounded and burned by Gentiles and Goidhel. The plundering of Disert-Diarmata,<sup>9</sup> by Gentiles from Cael-uisce.<sup>10</sup> Cellach son of Cathgen, abbot of Druim-mor<sup>11</sup> in Ui-Echach, 'fell asleep.' Dungal, son of Fergal, King of Osraighe, died.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 842. Death of Maelruanaidh son of [842.] Donnchadh, (King of Midhe, and father of Maelsechlainn<sup>12</sup>). Death of Cathal, son of Conchobar. Artagan, son of Domnall, was treacherously slain by Ruarc<sup>13</sup> son of Bran.

<sup>9</sup> Disert-Diarmata. — "Diarmait's Desert" (or "hermitage"). The old Irish name of Castledermot, a place of importance anciently, in the south of the County of Kildare, and about four miles to the eastward of the River Barrow, along which the "Gentiles" from Cael-uisce probably made their way into that part of Kildare.

<sup>8</sup> Cluain-comarda.—Written clœn comarðai in A. and B. According to Dean Reeves this place, the name of which signifies the "Lawn (or paddock) of the sign, or token," now known as "Colman's Well," a village in the barony of Upper Connello, in the southern border of the co. Limerick. See Todd's Dano-Irish Wars, Introd., p. civ., note <sup>3</sup>.

Cinaedh, son of Curoi, King of Cinel-Loeghaire, was slain by the Delbhna. Cumsudh son of Derero, and Moinach son of Sotchadach, two bishops and two<sup>1</sup> anchorites, died in the one night<sup>2</sup> in Disert-Diarmata.<sup>3</sup> Fergus, son of Fothach, King of Connaught, died. Donnacan son of Maeltuile, scribe and anchorite, 'rested' in Italy. Suibhne son of Forannan, abbot of Imlech-fia,<sup>4</sup> died. Colgu son of Fedach, an anchorite, rested.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 843. Maelmithigh, son of Cinaedh, [843.] was slain by Gentiles.<sup>5</sup> Ronan, abbot of Cluain-mic-Nois, 'fell asleep.' Bricceni, abbot of Lothra,<sup>6</sup> died. Burning of Cluain-ferta-Brendain, by Gentiles from Loch-Rí.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 844. Forindan,<sup>7</sup> abbot of Ard-Macha, [844.] was taken prisoner by Gentiles in Cluain-comarda,<sup>8</sup> with his reliquaries and his 'family,' and carried off by the ships of Luimnech.<sup>9</sup> The plundering of Dun-Masc<sup>10</sup> by Gentiles, wherein was slain Aedh son of Dubhdacrich, abbot of Tir-da-glas<sup>11</sup> and Cluain-Eidhnigh,<sup>12</sup> and wherein were slain Ceithernach son of Cudinaisc, vice-abbot of Cill-dara, and several others. A host<sup>13</sup> of the Foreigners (i.e. with Turges<sup>14</sup>) on Loch-Rí, so that they destroyed the barony of Maryborough West, Queen's County.

<sup>13</sup> Host.—The word in the text is ουναο, which signifies 'fortress,' 'encampment,' 'army,' or multitude. In the Chron. Scotorum, at A.D. 845, the word used is ούν, which means a 'fastness,' or 'fortress.' In the Cogadh Gaedhel re Gallaibh, the corresponding term is longep, a fleet (from long, a ship). Todd's ed., p. 12. The Four Mast. have ῥούιζεο, a hosting, or expedition.

<sup>14</sup> With Turges.—The original of this parenthetic clause, which is not in B., has been added in al. man. in A. The identity of this Turges (or Turgesius, as his name has been Latinized), who seems to have made himself very odious to the Irish by his oppression and cruelty, has for centuries been a subject of idle conjecture. Giraldus Cambrensis, Top. Hib. Dist. iii, c. 38, identifies Turgesius with the Gormund of Geoffrey of Monmouth's Chronicle (lib. xi. c. viii.) But Father Shearman tries to prove that this so-called African King Gormundus was a chieftain of the Leinster sept of MacGormans. Loca Patriciana, p. 215. See O'Donovan's ed. of Ann. Four Mast., A.D. 843, notes d.—g, and Todd's War of the Gaedhil with the Gaill, Introd., p. lii.

<sup>6</sup> Drowning of Turges.—In none of the Irish Chronicles is it absolutely stated that Turgesius was drowned by Maelsechnaill (or Malachy I.); the statement being that Turgesius was drowned after his capture. But Mageoghegan, in his translation of the Annals of Clonmacnoise, at A.D. 842, says, "Turgesius was taken by Moyleseaghlyn mac Moyleronie, and he afterwards drowned him in the poole of Loughware adjoining to Molyngare." In the Book of Leinster also (p. 25, col. b.) it is positively asserted that Turgesius was drowned by Maelsechlainn. The silly story given by Giraldus (Topog. Hib., dist. III., c. 40) alleging that Turgesius was assassinated by 15 young Irishmen, disguised as females, is without any foundation whatever.

<sup>9</sup> Cluana-andobair.—Cluana an-tobair, B. This place has not been identified. The Four Masters, in the corresponding entry in their Annals (A.D. 843), add that the "fold of Cill-achaidh" (Killeigh, barony of Geashill, King's County,) was burned;

Connaught and Midhe, and burned Cluain-mic-Nois, with its oratories, and Cluain-ferta-Brendainn, and Tir-daglas,<sup>1</sup> and Lothra,<sup>2</sup> and other establishments. Fiachna son of Maelbresail, abbot of Finnabhair-abha,<sup>3</sup> died. Gormghal son of Muiredach, bishop and anchorite of Lann-leire,<sup>4</sup> rested. A battle was gained over the Gentiles, by Niall<sup>5</sup> son of Aedh, in Magh-Itha. The plundering of Donnchadh son of Fallomhan, and of Flann son of Maelruanidh, by Maelsechnaill, son of Maelruanaidh. Turges was taken prisoner by Maelsechnaill; and the drowning of Turges<sup>6</sup> subsequently in Loch-Uair.<sup>7</sup> Labraidh son of Ailill, abbot of Slane, died. Robhartach son of Bresal, abbot of Achadh-bo-Cainnigh,<sup>8</sup> dies. Robhartach son of Flann, abbot of Domnach-mor, died. An encampment of the Foreigners of Ath-cliath at Cluana-andobair.<sup>9</sup>

Kal. Jan. A.D. 845. Cathal son of Ailill, King of [845.]
 Ui-Maine; Ferdornach, a wise man, and excellent scribe, of Ard-Macha, [and] Connmhach Mór,<sup>10</sup> son of Coscrach, King of Ui-Briuin, 'fell asleep.' The plundering of Baislic<sup>11</sup> by Gentiles. Niall<sup>12</sup> son of Aedh, King of Temhair, died by drowning (i.e., at Linne-Neill on the Calland<sup>13</sup>).

from which it would appear that Cluana-andobair was in the neighbourhood of Killeigh.

<sup>12</sup> Niall.—Niall Caille, monarch of Ireland. The name "Niall," with the epithet "Caille," is added in the margin in A., and interlined in B. Niall Caille has been regarded by Irish writers generally as one of the legitimate kings of Ireland. But it is strange that his name does not appear in the list contained in the Book of Leinster (pp. 24-26). This may be an accidental omission. The beginning of Niall's reign is noticed at the year 832 (=833), supra.

<sup>13</sup> Calland.—Represented by lct. in A. and B., in each of which the original of the clause is interlined. Supposed to be the River Callan, which flows by Armagh city, and joins the Blackwater a little to the north of Charlemont. O'Donovan thought that the "water" (or river) meant was the Callan (otherwise called King's River), in the co. Kilkenny. (Four Mast. A.D. 844, note c.) But this seems unlikely.

 in B.

I love not the hateful water,
Which flows by the side of my house ;
O, Calland, though thou may'st boast of it,
Thou hast drowned the son of a beloved mother.

Maelduin, son of Conall, King of Calatruim, was slain by Leinstermen. Niall son of Cennfaeladh, King of Ui-Fidgenti,<sup>1</sup> died. A battle won over the Connaughtmen, by Foreigners, in which Rigan son of Fergus, and Moghron son of Diarmait, and Aedh son of Cathrannach, and a great many others, were slain. A victory by Tigernach over Malsechnaill,<sup>2</sup> and over Ruarc,<sup>3</sup> in which many were killed. Muiredach son of Flann, abbot of Manistir-Buti, died. Forindan,<sup>4</sup> abbot of Ard-Macha, came from the lands of Munster, with the reliquaries of Patrick. Coirpre, son of Colman, abbot of Ath-truim,<sup>5</sup> died. Conaing, son of Ferdomnach, abbot of Domnach-Patraic,<sup>6</sup> died.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 846. Fedlimidh (i.e. son of Crimthan<sup>7</sup>), [846.] King of Munster, the best of the Scoti,<sup>8</sup> a scribe and anchorite, rested. Malsechnaill, son of Maelruanaidh begins to reign.<sup>9</sup> The demolition of the island of Loch-Muinremar<sup>10</sup> by Malsechnaill, against a great band of 'sons of death'<sup>11</sup> of the Luighne<sup>12</sup> and Gailenga,<sup>13</sup> who were plundering the districts after the manner of the Gentiles. A great victory by Cerbhall<sup>14</sup> son of Dungal

<sup>14</sup> Cerbhall.—King of Ossory (during 40 years, according to the Book of Leinster, p. 40, col. 5). For much interesting information regarding the history of this remarkable man, who is stated to have been King of the Danish settlement in Dublin, and some of whose descendants are alleged to have become great persons in Iceland (both statements resting, apparently, on insufficient authority). See the references in Todd's Cogadh Gaedhil re Gallaibh, indicated in the Index under Cearbhall, s. of Dungall, and Shearman's Loca Patriciana, pp. 353, 356. The Irish Chronicles make no mention of Cerbhall's kingship of Dublin, or of the alleged connexion of his descendants with Iceland.

<sup>1</sup> Agonn. — agon, in A. and B., which O'Conor renders by "de prædonibus." The Chron. Scotorum (A.D. 847) has agonð. See that Chronicle, ed. Hennessy, p. 148, note 1. The Four Mast., in the corresponding entry (A.D. 845) write for gallaidh æta cliath ("over the Foreigners of Ath-cliaith ('Dublin'), which may be correct").

over Agonn,<sup>1</sup> in which twelve hundred were slain. Maelgoan, son of Echaid, King of Cinel-Boghaine,<sup>2</sup> died. Cellach, son of Maelpatraic, vice-abbot<sup>3</sup> of Fera-Rois, south of the River,<sup>4</sup> died. Connmach, son of Cernach, half-king of Ciaraidhe<sup>5</sup> of Connaught, died. Artuir, son of Muiredach, King of Iarthar-Lifi,<sup>6</sup> died. Cathal, son of Coscrach, King of Fotharta, was slain by the Ui-Neill.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 847. Great snow on the Kalends of [847] MIS. February. Finsnechta of Luibnech,<sup>7</sup> an anchorite, and previously King of Connaught, died. Tuathchar, son of Cobthach, King of Luighne, died. A battle [gained] by Malsechnaill over Foreigners, in Forach,<sup>8</sup> wherein seven hundred were slain. A battle [gained] by Olchobar, King of Munster, and by Lorcan, son of Cellach, with the Leinstermen, over the Foreigners, at Sciath-Nechtain,<sup>9</sup> in which Tomrair Erell,<sup>10</sup> tanist of the King of Lochlann, and twelve hundred along with him, were slain. A victory by Tigernach<sup>11</sup> over the Gentiles in Daire-Disirt-Dochonna,<sup>12</sup> in which twelve hundred<sup>13</sup> were slain. A victory by the Eoghanacht-Caisil over the Gentiles, at Dun-Maeletuille, in which five hundred were slain. A

<sup>7</sup> Finsnechta of Luibnech.—Regarding this Finsnechta (or Finnachta), see the Chron. Scotorum (ed. Hennessy), p. 148, note 3. O'Donovan erred greatly regarding the situation of Luibnech, now Limerick, in the parish of Kilcavan, co. Wexford. See Ann. Four Mast., A.D. 846, note w.

<sup>11</sup> Tigernach.—In the Ann. Four Mast. (846), and the Chron. Scotorum (848), Tigernach is called King of Loch-Gabhar, a district the name of which is now preserved in that of Lagore, in the barony of Ratoath, co. Meath.

<sup>12</sup> Daire - Disirt-Dochonna.—The "oak-wood of Dochonna's desert." This place has not been identified. Todd states (War of the Gaedhil, &c., Introd., p. lxviii., note) that it was in Ulster. But this is unlikely, as the victor was King, or prince, of a district in the south of the co. Meath.

<sup>2</sup> Cill-Can.—So in A. and B. But the Four Mast. write the name Cill-Caisi, now known as Kilcash, in the parish of Kilcash, barony of Iffa and Offa East, co. Tipperary.

change of abbots<sup>1</sup> in Ard-Macha, to wit, Diarmait in the place of Forindán. Diarmait of Cill-Can<sup>2</sup> 'fell asleep.'

Kal. Jan. A.D. 848. Conaing, son of Fland, King of Bregh, died. Coirpri, son of Cinaedh, King of Ui-Mail,<sup>3</sup> died. Finsnechta son of Diarmait, abbot of Daimliag; Maelfuataigh, abbot of Ard-Breacain, [and] Onchu, bishop and anchorite of Slane, died. Ailill, son of Cumuscach, King of Loch-Caí,<sup>4</sup> died. Flaithbertach, son of Celechar, was killed by his brothers. A naval expedition of seven score ships of the people of the King of the Foreigners came to exercise power over the Foreigners who were before them, so that they disturbed all Ireland afterwards. Indrechtach, abbot of Ia, came to Ireland, with the reliquaries<sup>5</sup> of Colum-Cille. Robartach son of Colgu, abbot of Slane, lived in exile.<sup>6</sup> Flannacan,<sup>7</sup> son of Echaid, King of Dal-Araide of the North, was slain by the Cinel-Eoghain. Maelbresail, son of Cernach, King of Mughdorna, was slain by Gentiles, after his conversion to religion.<sup>8</sup> Airendan, abbot of Bennchair, 'fell asleep.' Encampment of Maelsechnaill in Crupait.<sup>9</sup> [848.]

Kal. Jan. A.D. 849. Cetadhach, abbot of Cluain-mic-U-Nois; and Tuathal son of Feradhach, abbot of Rechra<sup>10</sup> and Dermagh,<sup>11</sup> and Ferchar son of Muiredhach, abbot of Lann-léri,<sup>12</sup> died. Oengus, son of Suibhne, King of Mugh- [849.]

Four Masters give his obit under the year 847=849.

<sup>8</sup> Conversion to religion.—poit conuersionem ruam ad clericor. This means that Maelbresail had embraced a religious life. See the Ann. Four Mast. (847), and Chron. Scotorum (849).

<sup>9</sup> Crupait.—The name is "Cru-fait" in the Ann. Four Mast. (847), which is also the form in Lebor na

h-Uidre, p. 127a, where the ancient name of the place is stated to have been Rae ban, "white plain" (or "field"). It has not been identified. O'Donovan suggests (F. M., A.D. 847, note n) that it may be the place now known as Croboy, in the barony of Upper Moyfenrath, co. Meath.

<sup>3</sup> To the sea; i.e. from the Shannon eastwards to the sea. The words co muir ("to the sea") are erroneously represented in A. and B. by comm. The liberty has been taken of amending the text, on the authority of the Ann. Four Mast. (848), and the Chron. Scotorum (850). It appeared plain, besides, that the compiler of this Chronicle intended to use the same form of expression, o ðinaino co muir, employed under the year 836 supra, where the extent of the territory of the (southern) Ui-Neill was thus indicated.

dorna, was killed by Garfidh,<sup>1</sup> son of Maelbrigte. Cinaedh, son of Conaing, King of Cianachta, turned against Mael-sechnaill,<sup>2</sup> through the assistance of the Foreigners, so that he wasted the Ui-Neill, both churches and districts, from the Sinainn to the sea,<sup>3</sup> and treacherously destroyed the island of Loch Gabhar so that it was level with the surface;<sup>4</sup> and the oratory of Treoit was burned<sup>5</sup> by him, and 260 men in it. Braen son of Ruadhri, King of Ui-Cremthain, and his two brothers, viz., Fogartach and Bruatar, were slain by their brethren.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 850. Colgu son of Cellach, abbot of Cill-Toma;<sup>6</sup> Scannal son of Tibraite, abbot of Domnach-Sechnaill, [and] Olchobar, i.e., the son of Cinaedh, King of Caisel, died. Cinaedh<sup>7</sup> son of Conaing, king of Cianachta, was drowned in a pool,<sup>8</sup> a cruel death, by Maelsechnaill and Tigernach,<sup>9</sup> with the approval of the good men of Ireland, and of the successor of Patrick especially. [850.]

Alas,<sup>10</sup> O good people,
His days of play were better!
Great grief that Cinaedh, son of Conaing, [Should be taken] in ropes to a pool.

The coming of Black Foreigners to Ath-cliath, who made a great slaughter of the White Foreigners; and they plundered<sup>11</sup> the fortress, between people and property. A depredation by the Black Foreigners at Linn-Duachail, and a great slaughter of them [the White Foreigners].<sup>12</sup>

<sup>8</sup> Drowned in a pool.—in lacu. According to the Ann. Four Mast. (849), Cinaedh was drowned in the Ainge (written Angi in the Chron. Scotorum) (851), now called the River Nanny, which divides the baronies of Upper and Lower Duleek, in the county of Meath.

<sup>9</sup> Tigernach.—King, or lord, of Loch-Gabhar, in Meath. See under the year 847.

Ann. Four Mast. (849), and Chron. Scotorum (851).

<sup>4</sup> Province of Conchobar.—A bardic name for Ulster, over which Conchobar Mac Nessa ruled in the first century of the Christian Era. But Matodhan was only King of Ulidia, or that portion of Ulster comprising the present county of Down, with part of Antrim.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 851. Two heirs<sup>9</sup> of Patrick, viz., [851.] BIS. Forindan, scribe, and bishop, and anchorite, and Diarmait, the wisest of all the doctors of Europe, rested. Devastation of Ard-Macha by the Foreigners of Linn<sup>10</sup> on the day of Sam-chasc.<sup>11</sup> A fleet of eight score ships of White Gentiles came to fight against the Black Gentiles, to Snamh-aighech. They were three days and three nights<sup>12</sup> fighting; but the Black Gentiles were successful, that the others left their ships with them. Stain<sup>13</sup> escaped by flight, and Iercne<sup>14</sup> was beheaded. Moenghal, abbot of Ard-sratha, and Cennfaeladh son of Ultan, wise man of Both-Conais,<sup>15</sup> and Lergal abbot of Othan,<sup>16</sup> 'fell asleep. Fogartach son of Maelbresail, King of the Airghialla, being the number of years elapsed since the beginning of the Chronicle (431).

<sup>11</sup> Sam-chasc.—"Summer Easter." The Four Mast. (850) write an uorinnac iap ccaire ("the Sunday after Easter," rendered by "the Sunday before Easter" in O'Donovan's translation). But according to other authorities, Sam-chasc was a name for the fifth Sunday after Trinity Sunday. See Chron. Scotorum (ed. Hennessy), p. 152, note 1.

<sup>1</sup> Ui-Duach of Argatros. — The name of the tribe and territory of Ui-Duach is still preserved in that of the parish of Odogh, in the north of the present co. of Kilkenny. But the territory was anciently much more extensive than the present parish of Odogh.

<sup>5</sup> Amhlaim. — Over the last m of the name in A. and B. it is suggested that the name should be "Amhlaip."

died. Cathal son of Dubhan, King of Ui-Duach of Argatros,<sup>1</sup> died. Forbasach son of Maeluidhir, abbot of Cill-mor-Cinneich, died. A slaughter of the Foreigners at the islands<sup>2</sup> of the east of Bregha; and another slaughter at Rath-Aldain<sup>3</sup> in Cianachta, in the same month.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 852. Ailill son of Robartach, abbot of Lusca; and Flann son of Rechtabhra, abbot of Liath-Manchain;<sup>4</sup> and Ailgenan son of Donngal, King of Caisel, died. Amhlaim<sup>5</sup> son of the King of Lochlaind,<sup>6</sup> came to Ireland, when the Foreigners of Ireland submitted to him, and a tribute [was given] to him by the Gaidhel. Echtigern<sup>7</sup> son of Guaire, King of South-Leinster, was treacherously slain by Bruatar son of Aedh,<sup>8</sup> and by Cerbhall<sup>9</sup> son of Dungal; and Bruatar son of Aedh<sup>8</sup> was treacherously killed by his confederates on the 8th day after the slaying of Echtigern. Flaithnia, abbot of Biror,<sup>10</sup> a bishop, died. Cernach son of Maelbresail, King of Cobha,<sup>11</sup> died. Cathmal son of Tomaltach, half-king of Ulidia, was slain by the Norsemen.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 853. Tuathal son of Maelbrighte, king of Ui-Dunlaing,<sup>12</sup> was deceitfully killed by his brothers.

of Ui-Cendselaigh, (or South Leinster), in the Book of Leinster, p. 40, col. 1, where the duration of his rule is set down as nine years. His slayer is described as Bruatar, son of Dubgilla, King of the Ui-Drona, (a tribe occupying a territory now represented by the barony of Idrone, co. Carlow).

<sup>11</sup> Cobha.—The short form of a name otherwise written "Ui-Echach-Cobha, and "Ui-Echach-Ulad." A powerful sept, whose territory is now represented by the baronies of Upper and Lower Iveagh, in the County of Down. See Reeves' Antiqq. of Down and Connor, pp. 348–52.

<sup>12</sup> Ui-Dunlaing.—This was the tribe name of a powerful family in Leinster, descended from Dunlang, who was King of that Province in the third century. See Shearman's Loca Patriciana, Geneal. Table, No. 7. The name of Tuathal occurs in the list of the kings of Leinster in the Book of Leinster, p. 39, col. 2.

<sup>1</sup> Indeoin-na-nDesi.—The “Anvil of the Desi.” This name is still partially preserved in that of Mullagh-noney (the “summit,” mullach, of the inneoin, or “anvil”), a townland in the parish of Newchapel, barony of Iffa and Offa East, co. Tipperary. See Joyce's Irish Names of Places, 2nd Series, pp. 197–8.

<sup>6</sup> Achadh-bo.—Or Achadh-bo-Cainnigh. The “field of St. Canice's cows” Now Aghaboe, in the barony of Clarmallagh, Queen's County. The name is written acῖḡ boo in A.; but Maelsechnaill, king of Temhair, went to the men of Munster as far as Indeoín-na-nDesi,<sup>1</sup> and brought their pledges. The successor<sup>2</sup> of Colum-Cille, the best sage, was martyred by Saxons on the 4th of the Ides of March. The plundering of Domnach-mor, between Tigernach and Fland son of Conaing; but it is by Fland it was won.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 854. Cathan, abess of Cill-dara, died. [854.
Snow up to the shoulders<sup>3</sup> of men, on the 9th of the Kalends of May. A preying expedition by Aedh son of Niall to the Ulaid, when he lost Connecan son of Colman, and Flaithbertach son of Niall, and many more besides. Finsnechta was slain by treachery, viz., the son of Maelbrihte. Ruidhgus, son of Macniadh, abbot of Manister-Buti,<sup>4</sup> was drowned.<sup>5</sup> Ailill, abbot of Achadh-bo;<sup>6</sup> Robartach, abbot of Inis-cain-Degha,<sup>7</sup> a scribe, and Muiredhach, King of Ard-Cianachta,<sup>8</sup> died.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 855. Great ice and frost,<sup>9</sup> so that the [855.

<sup>2</sup> Ui-Niallain.—A powerful tribe, the name of whose territory is still preserved in the baronies of O'Neil-land East, and West, in the co. Armagh, and which furnished several bishops to the See of Armagh.

<sup>3</sup> Airthera. — Otherwise written Oirthera; and meaning "Easterns," or "Easterlings." The tribe occupying this territory were so called because they were seated in the east of the country of Oirghialla (or, as it was in later times called, Oriel). The Irish name, which has been Latinized

"Orientales," and "Regio Orientalium," is now represented by the baronies of Orior, in the east of the county of Armagh.

<sup>4</sup> Murecan.—He was King of Leinster for one year, according to the Book of Leinster (p. 39), and father of Cerbhall Mac Muirecan, also King of Leinster, whose obit is given at the year 908 (=909) infra.

son of Conall Guthbhin, son of Suibhne, son of Colman the Great, son of Diarmaid Derg, son of Fergus Cerrbeoil), King of all Ireland, died on the 2nd of the Kalends of December, on a Tuesday, in the 16th year of his reign. Ruarc,<sup>1</sup> son of Bran, King of the Ui-Dunlaing, was slain. Maelodhar Ua Tindridh, the most learned physician of the Gaedhil, died.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 862. Aedh, son of Cumuscach, King of Ui-Niallain,<sup>2</sup> died. Muiredhach, son of Maelduin, vice-abbot of Ard-Macha, and King of the Airthera,<sup>3</sup> was slain by Domnall, son of Aedh, son of Niall. Murecan,<sup>4</sup> son of Diarmait, King of Nas,<sup>5</sup> and of Airther-Liphè, was slain by Norsemen. The cave of Achadh-Aldai,<sup>6</sup> and [the cave] of Cnodhba,<sup>7</sup> and the cave of Fert-Boadan over Dubadh,<sup>8</sup> and the cave of the smith's wife,<sup>9</sup> were searched by the Foreigners, which had not been done before, viz., on the occasion when three Kings of the Foreigners plundered the land of Flann son of Conaing, to wit, Amhlaim, and Imhar, and Ausle; and Lorcan son of Cathal, King of Meath, was with them thereat.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 863. Lorcan son of Cathal, King of Meath, was blinded<sup>10</sup> by Aedh son of Niall, King of Temhair. Conchobar son of Donnchadh, half-King of Meath, was killed<sup>11</sup> in a water at Cluain-Iraird,<sup>12</sup> by Amlaiph,

ment for his participation in the plundering of Meath in the previous year.

<sup>12</sup> Cluain-Iraird.—Clonard, in the parish of Clonard, barony of Upper Moyfenrath, co. Meath. The "water" in which Lorcan was drowned was evidently the River Boyne, which flows by Clonard.

<sup>8</sup> Maen-Conain.—Otherwise written "Moin-Conain," and "Mona." The old Irish name of the Island of Anglesey. See Todd's Irish Nennius, p. 190, note x. Rowland, (Mona Antiqua, p. 20), prints some absurd conjecture regarding the etymology of the name Mona, not being aware of the form in which it is written in

King of the Foreigners. A great victory by Aedh<sup>1</sup> son of Niall, and Flann son of Conaing, over Anfidh<sup>2</sup> son of Aedh, with the Ulidians, in the territory of Conailli-Cerd. Muiredach son of Niall, abbot of Lughmagh<sup>3</sup> and other churches, died. Aedgen Britt, bishop of Cill-dara, and a scribe and anchorite, and an old man of nearly 116 years, rested.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 864. An eclipse of the sun on the [864.] Kalends of January, and an eclipse of the moon<sup>4</sup> in the same month. Cellach,<sup>5</sup> son of Ailill, abbot of Cill-dara, and abbot of Ia, 'fell asleep' in the country of the Picts. Tigernach son of Focarta, King of Loch-gabhor, and half-King of Breg, died. The Britons<sup>6</sup> were expelled from their country by Saxons,<sup>7</sup> so that they were held in subjection in Maen-Conain.<sup>8</sup> Tadhg son of Diarmait, King of Ui-Cennselaigh, was treacherously killed by his brothers and his people. Conmal, steward<sup>9</sup> of Tamlacht, and Tuathal son of Artgus, chief bishop of Fortrenn,<sup>10</sup> and abbot of Dun-Caillenn,<sup>11</sup> 'fell asleep.'

Kal. Jan. A.D. 865. Amlaiph and Auisle<sup>1</sup> went into [865.] Fortrenn,<sup>10</sup> with the Foreigners of Ireland and Alba, when they plundered all Pictland, and brought away their pledges. Colgu and Aedh, two abbots of Manister-Buti, died in the same year. Cernachan son of Cumuscach, King of Rath-airthir,<sup>13</sup> was treacherously slain by Moracan<sup>14</sup> son of Aedhacan. Aedh, son of Niall, plundered all

Irish texts; "Moin-Conain," or "Maen-Conain," probably representing Mania Conani, the "stronghold of Conan."

the fortresses of the Foreigners (i.e. on the coast of the Fochla<sup>1</sup>), between Cinel-Eogain and Dal-Araide, so that he carried off their spoils,<sup>2</sup> and their flocks and herds, to his camp, after a battle. A victory was gained over them<sup>3</sup> at Loch-Febhail,<sup>4</sup> from which twelve score heads were brought. Loch-Leibhinn<sup>5</sup> was turned into blood, which became lumps of gore like 'lights'<sup>6</sup> round its border.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 866. Maelduin son of Aedh,<sup>7</sup> King of Ailech, after lengthened suffering, died in religion. Robh-artach of Finnglais,<sup>8</sup> bishop and scribe; and Conall of Cill-Sciré,<sup>9</sup> a bishop; and Coscrach of Tech-Taille,<sup>10</sup> a scribe and anchorite; and Ogedchar, abbot of Condere<sup>11</sup> (and Lann-Ela),<sup>12</sup> and Cormac Ua Liathain, scribe, bishop, and anchorite—all fell asleep in Christ. Maeltuile, abbot of Ara-irthir,<sup>13</sup> rested. Guaire, son of Dubhdabhairn, died. Aban,<sup>14</sup> son of Cinaedh, 'righdamna' of Connaught, was destroyed with fire by Sochlachan, son of Diarmait. Ausle, third King of the Foreigners, was killed by his brethren in guile and parricide. A battle [was gained] over the Northern Saxons, in Caer-Ebroc,<sup>15</sup> by the Black Foreigners, in which Alli,<sup>16</sup> King of the Northern Saxons, was slain. Burning of Dun-Amhlaim at Cluain-Dolcain,<sup>17</sup> by the son of Gaithin,<sup>18</sup> and by Maelciarain son of Ronan;

The parenthetic clause, which is interlined in the orig. hand in A., is part of the text in B.

See Anglo-Saxon Chron., A.D. 867 (868).

<sup>17</sup> Cluain - Dolcain. — Clondalkin, near Dublin. Dun-Amhlaim, the fortress of Amlaimh, or Amlaff, must have a Danish fortress in the place.

<sup>18</sup> Son of Gaithin. — His name was Cenneidigh. He was lord (or King) of Laighis, or Leix, a district included in the present Queen's County, and a most formidable opponent of the Norse and Danish invaders. See Fragments of Irish Annals, pp. 157, 159; and the other references under the name Cennedigh in the Index thereto.

<sup>6</sup> Cill-Ua nDaighri.—This name would be pronounced Killoneery. The place has not been identified, which is somewhat strange, considering the important character of the battle. The late Rev. John F. Shearman was of opinion that Cill-Ua-

nDaighri was the same as the place called "Killineer," situated about a mile to the north of Drogheda, which is by no means improbable.

<sup>9</sup> Tadg son of Cian.—Cian was son of Oilill Oluim, King of Munster in the 3rd century, and the progenitor of several septs distinguished by the title of Cianachta (or descendants of Cian). The Cianachta-Bregh (or Kal. Jan. A.D. 867. Cellach, son of Cumuscach, abbot [867.] <sup>BIS.</sup> of Fobhar, a learned and most ingenious young man, died. Condmach, abbot of Clonmacnoise, 'fell asleep' on the night of the Kalends of January. Daniel, abbot of Glenn-da-lacha<sup>2</sup> and Tamlacht,<sup>3</sup> [and] Coemhan son of Dalach, abbot of Doimliacc,<sup>4</sup> [died]. A battle [was gained] by Aedh<sup>5</sup> son of Niall, at Cill-Ua-nDaighri,<sup>6</sup> over the Ui-Neill of Bregh, and over the Leinstermen, and over a great host of Foreigners—viz., three hundred<sup>7</sup> or more; in which fell Flann son of Conaing, King of all Bregh, and Diarmait son of Etirscel, King of Loch-gabhor; and in this battle a great number of Foreigners were slaughtered, and Fachtna son of Maelduin,<sup>8</sup> royal heir of the North, and many others, fell in the mutual wounding of the battle.

Cormac, son of Eladach, abbot of Saighir,<sup>4</sup> a bishop and scribe, ended an old age. Flann, son of Ferchar, steward of Ard-Macha, and superior of Lannleire,<sup>5</sup> alas! ended a short life. Maelciarain son of Ronan, champion<sup>6</sup> of the east of Ireland, a hero-plunderer of the Foreigners, was slain. may be now represented by "Inan," in the parish of Killyon, barony of Upper Moyfeurath, co. Meath, not far from the site of the ancient monastery of Clonard (or Cluain-Iraird), of which Suairlech was abbot.

and anchorite, and abbot of Cluain-Iraird, the best doctor of religion of all Ireland, rested. The plundering of the Leinstermen by Aedh<sup>1</sup> son of Niall, from Athcliath to Gabran.<sup>2</sup> Cerbhall son of Dungal,<sup>3</sup> with the whole of his adherents, plundered them as far as Dunbolc.<sup>4</sup> The Leinstermen attacked the camp of Cerbhall, and slew the son of Gaithin<sup>5</sup> and others, and returned in flight with their King, i.e., Muiredhach son of Bran; and some of them were butchered. Dalach, son of Muircertach, chief of the Cinel-Conaill, was killed by his own people. Diarmait, son of Diarmait, killed a man in Ard-Macha, before the door of the house of Aedh, King of Temhair. Dubhdathuile, abbot of Liath-mor of Moch-oemhoc;<sup>6</sup> and Maelodhor, anchorite, abbot of Daimhinis; and the abbot of Disert-Ciarain<sup>7</sup> of Belach-duin (i.e. Cumscuth), a scribe and bishop; Comgan Fota, anchorite of Tamlacht, foster-son of Maelruain,<sup>8</sup> [and] Condla, anchorite of Druim-Cara<sup>9</sup> of Ard-Cianachta — all ended life in Christ. Siege of Ail-Cluath<sup>10</sup> by Norsemen; viz., Amhlaiph and Imhar, two Kings of the Norsemen besieged it, and at the end of four months destroyed<sup>11</sup> and plundered the fortress. Malsechnaill, son of Niall, half-king of the South of Bregb, was deceitfully slain by Ulf,<sup>12</sup> a 'Dubhgall.'<sup>13</sup> Cobthach son of Muiredach, abbot of Cill-dara, 'fell asleep.'

Kal. Jan. A.D. 870. Cathalan son of Indrechtach, [870.] half-king of Ulad, was deceitfully slain, through the counsel of Aedh.<sup>14</sup> Amhlaiph and Imhar came again to founder and abbot of Tamlacht (Tallaght, in the co. Dublin), whose obit is entered at the year 791 supra.

<sup>5</sup> Dun-Sobhairce.—Dunseverick, in the parish of Billy, barony of Cary, and county of Antrim. A place very famous in ancient Irish history. See Reeves' Down and Connor, p. 286, and O'Donovan's Four Mast., at A. M., 3501, note o.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 871. Gnía,<sup>12</sup> abbot of Daimhliacc, an [871.] BIS. anchorite<sup>13</sup> and bishop, and eminent scribe, [died]. Maelruanaidh, son of Maelchuararda, chief of the Ui-Mac-Uais<sup>14</sup> of the Fochla, died. Cennfaeladh Ua Mochtigern, King of Cashel, after prolonged suffering, rested in peace. Ferdomnach, abbot of Cluain-mac-U-Nois, 'fell asleep.' Artgha, King of the Britons of Srath-Cluade,<sup>15</sup> was killed by the advice of Constantine son of Cinaedh.<sup>16</sup> Maeltuile,

<sup>14</sup> Ui-Mac-Uais.—The descendants of the sons of Colla Uais, who were seated in the North of Ireland (here called the Fochla). The situation of this tribe has not yet been satisfactorily made out. But in the Chron. Scotorum (ed. Hennessy, p. 5), a plain called Lecmagh [Magh-Lí in Book of Leinster, p. 5, col. 1] in Ui-Mac-

Uais is described as in Ui-Mac-Uais, between Bir (the old name of the Moyola River, co. Londonderry) and Camus (on the Bann, to the south of Coleraine). See Reeves' Adamnan, p. 52, note d.

len. Now Dulane, in the parish of the same name, barony of Upper Kells, co. Meath.

now Killashee, near Naas, in the county of Kildare.

This territory comprised the present baronies of Corcomroe and Burren, in the county of Clare, with the Arran Islands in Galway Bay, the people inhabiting which were called "Eogh-anacht-Ninias" (or descendants of Eoghan [son of Oíllill Oluim] of Ninas.) See Labor na h Uidre, p. 22a, the situation of this tribe, see the Map prefixed to O'Donovan's Tribes and Customs of Hy-Many.

<sup>5</sup> The Province.—in coicrič, lit. "of the fifth;" i.e. of the Province of Ulidia, which in these Annals is always referred to as the Fifth. The Provinces of Ireland, even when they were reduced to the present number of four, were each called coicrič, or "fifth" by the Irish writers, in consequence of the quinquartite division made of the country by the five

a bishop, abbot of Tulian,<sup>1</sup> fell asleep in Christ. Loingsech, son of Foillen, abbot of Cill-Ausili,<sup>2</sup> died. Robhartach of Dermhagh, an eminent scribe, rested. Mughron, son of Maelcothaidh, half-king of Connaught, died.

Kal. Jan., m. 27. A.D. 872. Flaithbertach, son of Dubhrop, King of Corcundruadh-Ninis;<sup>3</sup> Uathmaran son of Brocan, King of the Ui-Fiachrach of Aidhne;<sup>4</sup> and Dunadhach son of Rogallnach, King of Cinel-Coirpri-mor, died. Lethlabhar son of Loingsech, King of the Province,<sup>5</sup> ended an aged life. Imhar, King of the Norsemen of all Ireland and Britain, ended life.<sup>6</sup> Dungal son of Moenach, abbot of Inis-cain-Degha,<sup>7</sup> rested in peace. Donnucan, son of Flannacan, was slain through treachery by Conaing, son of Fland. The Fair of Tailtiu<sup>8</sup> not celebrated, without just and sufficient cause, which we have not heard to have occurred<sup>9</sup> from ancient times. Colman, a bishop and scribe, abbot of Nendrum,<sup>10</sup> rested. Flaithbertach son of Muirchertach, abbot of Dun-Cailden,<sup>11</sup> died. [872.]

Kal. Jan., m. 9. A.D. 873. Aedh, son of Fiangus, abbot of Ros-Comain, a bishop and eminent scribe; Maelmordha son of Diarmait, a bishop and scribe; and Tor- [873.]

sons of Dela son of Loch (who were of the Firbolg race). See O'Flaherty's Ogygia, pars III., c. viii. The tradition of this division seems to have been fresh in the time of Giraldus Cambrensis. Topogr. Hib., Dist. I., cap. viii., and Dist. III., cap. iv. In the list of the Kings of Ulidia contained in the Book of Leinster (p. 41, col. 4), Lethlobor (as the name is there written) is stated to have died "of an internal injury," de guin meoim.

paidh, abbot of Tamhlacht, a bishop and excellent scribe, 'fell asleep' in Christ. Bishop Fethgna, heir of Patrick, and the head of religion<sup>2</sup> of all Ireland, rested in peace on the day before the Nones<sup>3</sup> of October. A hosting by Aedh son of Niall to the Leinstermen, when Cill-Ausili<sup>4</sup> was profaned, and other churches, with their oratories, were burned. Cill-mor of Magh-Ainir<sup>5</sup> was plundered by Foreigners.<sup>6</sup>

Kal. Jan., m. 20. A.D. 874. Moengal, 'tanist'<sup>7</sup> of [874.] Clonmacnoise; and Robhartach 'mac-na-cerda,'<sup>8</sup> bishop of Cill-dara, and an excellent scribe, and<sup>9</sup> superior of Cill-achaidh,<sup>10</sup> and Lachtnan<sup>11</sup> son of Mochtigern, bishop of Cill-dara, and superior of Ferna, [died]. Muiredach son of Bran, with an army of Leinstermen, wasted as far as Sliabh-Monduirnn,<sup>12</sup> and returned to his own country before evening. An encounter of the Picts with the Black Foreigners, and a great slaughter of the Picts was committed. Oistin, son of Amlaibh, King of the Norsemen, was deceitfully slain by Alband.<sup>13</sup> Maccoigi, superior of Tamlacht,<sup>14</sup> and Bennachta, bishop of Lusca,<sup>15</sup> slept in peace. Fechnach, abbot of Glenn-da-locha died.

Kal. Jan., m. 1. A.D. 875. Custantin<sup>15</sup> son of Cin- [875.] BIS.

<sup>12</sup> Sliabh-Monduirnn.—Not identified. Sliabh - Modhairn was the ancient name of a range of hills near Ballybay, in the barony of Cremorne, co. Monaghan (according to O'Donovan, Four Masters, A. M., 3579, note g). But it could hardly have been the place here intended, being much more than a day's march from Muiredach's home in Kildare.

<sup>13</sup> Alband.—Todd took this as meaning the "men of Alba" (or of Scotland), War of the Gaedhil, &c., Introd., lxxv., note 4; and Skene (Chron. Picts and Scots, p. 362), quoting from these Annals, represents the ab albanu of the text by "ab Albanensibus." But if the chronicler intended to say that Oistin was slain by the Albans (or Scotch) he would have used the expression ab Oclban-charb. The truth seems to be that Oistin was slain by Alband, King of the "Black Gentiles;" whose death is recorded under the year 876.

Kenneth Mac Alpin. Though his simple obit is here recorded, he is stated in other authorities to have been slain in battle by the Norsemen. See Todd's War of the Gaedhil, &c., Introd., p. lxxv., note <sup>4</sup>, and Skene's Chron. Picts and Scots, Introd., cxxxv., and the references given in the Index to that work, regarding Constantine son of Kenneth.

<sup>3</sup> Fair of Tailtiu.—The National games celebrated annually at Teltown, in the county Meath. See a similar entry at the year 872, where it is stated that the non-celebration of the Fair of Teltown had not been known to have occurred from the most ancient times. The non-celebration is also noticed at 877. But under the year 915 (916) infra, the celebration is said to have been renewed by Niall [Glundubh], on his accession to the kingship of Ireland.

aedh, King of the Picts; Cinaedh, abbot of Achadh-bo-Cainnigh; Congalach, son of Finsnechta, King of the Airgialla, [and] Fedach, abbot of Disert-Diarmata,<sup>1</sup> died. Coirpri,<sup>2</sup> son of Diarmait, King of Ui-Cennselaigh, was slain by his brothers. The Fair of Tailtiu<sup>3</sup> not celebrated, without just and sufficient cause. Domhnall, bishop of Corcach,<sup>4</sup> an eminent scribe, died suddenly.

Kal. Jan., m. 12. A.D. 876. Euan and Maeltuile Ua [876.] Cuanach, two abbots of Clonmacnoise, slept in peace. Donnchad, son of Aedhacan, son of Conchobar, was slain through treachery, by Flann,<sup>5</sup> son of Malsechnaill. Ruaidhri,<sup>6</sup> son of Muirmenn, King of the Britons, came to Ireland, fleeing before the Black Foreigners. Mael-brighte, bishop of Slane, slept in peace. A battle at Loch-Cuan,<sup>7</sup> between Fair Gentiles and Black Gentiles, in which Albann,<sup>8</sup> King of the Black Gentiles, was slain. Sochartach, son of Brocan, King of the Ui-Cormaic, died. A change of abbots<sup>9</sup> in Ard-Macha, viz., Ainmirè in the place of Maelcobha. Cathalan, son of Cernach, King of Fera-Cul,<sup>10</sup> died.

recorded at the year 915 (alias 916) infra. The Four Masters have his accession at the year 877; but O'Flaherty refers it to 879, (Ogygia, p. 434.)

<sup>6</sup> Ruaidhri.—Or Rodhri the Great, son of Mervyn Vrycho. The record of his death, by the 'Saxons,' is entered under the next year. The Annales Cambriæ and Brut y Tywysogion have it also at A.D. 877. See Williams' Eminent Welshmen, p. 438, and Chron. Scotorum (ed. Hennessy), p. 154, notes 4, 5.

<sup>10</sup> Fera-Cul.—Otherwise called Fera-Cul-Bregh. A district which seems to have included a large part of the present baronies of Upper and Lower Kell, in the county of Meath. According to the Martyr of Donegal, at 5th April and 26th November, Imlech-Fiarch and Magh-Bolcc (now represented by the parishes of Emlagh and Moybolgue, in the barony of Lower Kells) were in the territory of Fera-Cul-Bregh.

top margin of fol. 44 a in A., with a mark of reference to the place where they might be introduced in the text.

Kal. Jan., 23rd of the Moon. A.D. 877. Ruaidhri,<sup>1</sup> son [877.] of Muirmenn, King of the Britons, was killed by Saxons. Aedh, son of Cinad,<sup>2</sup> King of the Picts, was killed by his confederates. Garfith, son of Maelbrihte, King of Conaille, was beheaded by the Ui-Echach.

Ruaidhri of Manann,<sup>3</sup> gem of delight ;
 Aedh from the lands of Cenn-tirè<sup>4</sup> ;
 Donnchad, fair heir of a prince ;
 Garbsith,<sup>5</sup> ornament of smooth Macha.

It cuts my heart's limits,
 When I call to mind
 The cold flags over princes !

Cumuscach, son of Muiredach, King of Ui-Cremthainn, was slain by Ulidians. Maelpatraic, son of Cellach, abbot of Mainistir-Buiti,<sup>7</sup> died suddenly. Great wind and lightning. A shower of blood fell, which was found in lumps of gore and blood on the plains.<sup>8</sup> The "Fair" of Tailtiu<sup>9</sup> not celebrated, without just and sufficient cause. An eclipse of the moon on the Ides of October, the 14th of the moon,<sup>10</sup> about the third vigil, on a Wednesday ; and an eclipse of the sun, on the 4th of the Kalends of November, the 28th of the moon, about the 7th hour of the day, on a Wednesday, 15 solar days intervening.

<sup>8</sup> On the plains.—In a corresponding entry in the Chron. Scotorum (878) these plains are mentioned as in Cianachta, at Dumha na nDeisi, some place in the barony of Upper or Lower Deece, co. Meath ; though O'Donovan would identify it with Duma-nDresa, a place situated to the north of the well-known hill of Knockgraffon, in the barony of Middlethird, co. Tipperary. See under the year 897 infra.

<sup>10</sup> Fourteenth of the moon.—The 4th of the moon, according to the MS. B. The whole of this entry, not fully given in B., is added in the lower margin of fol. 44 a in MS. A., with a sign of reference to the place where it should be introduced in the text.

<sup>5</sup> Twelfth.—These stanzas are written in the top margin of fol. of 44 b in MS. A., with a mark of reference to the place in which they should be introduced in the text. They are not in B. See the Ann. Four Mast., at the year 876.

<sup>8</sup> In secrecy.—The so-called translator of these Annals, whose version is preserved in the MS. Clar. 49, British Museum, considered the expression in-duinetaičiu, (which means killing a person, and hiding the body), as signifying the name of a place. O'Connor renders it by "in depredatione."

The shrine of Colum-Cille, and all his minna,<sup>1</sup> arrived in Ireland, to escape the Foreigners.

On the twelfth<sup>5</sup> of the musical Kalends
Of December, fierce its tempests,
Died the noblest of princes, Aedh of Ailech, chief King of the Gaedhil.

A steady, manly man [was he],
Of whom territorial Temair<sup>3</sup> was full ;
A shield against hidden dangers,
Of the stout stock of Milidh's sons.

Flann<sup>6</sup> son of Maelsechnaill begins to reign. Tigernach son of Muiredhach, a bishop, abbot of Druim-Inasclaind,<sup>4</sup> 'rested' after a protracted illness. Fergil son of Cum-sad, abbot of Domnach-Sechnaill,<sup>7</sup> was murdered in secrecy.<sup>8</sup> Oengus, son of Cina[e]dh, chief of the men of Ard-Cianachta,<sup>9</sup> died. Maelcobho<sup>10</sup> son of Crunnmael, abbot of Ard-Macha, was taken prisoner by Foreigners ;

<sup>10</sup> Maelcobho.—His name is in the list of the comarbs (or successors) of St. Patrick contained in the Book of Leinster (p. 42, col. 4), where he is represented as having ruled only two years, (Todd wrongly prints v. years, St. Patrick, p. 182), and as having been of the 'family' of Cill-mor, or Cill-mor-Ua-Niallain, now Kilmore in the barony of O'Neilland West, in the county of Armagh. See at the year 876 supra, where it is stated that there was a change of abbots in Armagh, and that Ainméri, whose obit is noted under this year in this chronicle, was appointed in the place of Maelcobho, who was displaced. There is a good deal of confusion regarding the succession to the abbacy or bishoprick of Armagh at this time, as appears from the lists published by Todd (St. Patrick, pp. 174–182). The oldest list, that in the Book of Leinster, which gives the order of succession as Ainmère, Maelcobho, and Cathassach, is probably the most correct. See Harris's Ware, Vol. I., p. 46.

Ualgarg son of Flaithbertach, royal-heir of the North, died. Finsnechta son of Maelcoreraí, King of the Luighne of Connaught,<sup>2</sup> died. Ainmeri, abbot of Ard-Macha during nine months, 'fell asleep.' Dungal, abbot of Leith-glenn,<sup>3</sup> died.

Kal. Jan., m. 15. A.D. 879. Feradhach<sup>4</sup> son of Cormac, abbot of Ia,<sup>5</sup> rested. Maelciarain son of Conaing, King of Tethba,<sup>6</sup> ended an old age in a religious state. Dubhlitir,<sup>7</sup> abbot of Cluain-Eois<sup>8</sup> and Tech-Airenain,<sup>9</sup> died. [879.]

There tasted not death<sup>10</sup> quickly,
There went not usually to the dead,
The fruitful land was not closed over

Muirecan son of Cormac, abbot of Sentrebh,<sup>11</sup> died. Maelmithich,<sup>12</sup> son of Dubhindrecht, was slain.

Kal. Jan., the 5th of the moon. A.D. 880. Ferchair, abbot of Bennchair,<sup>13</sup> died. Crunnmael of Cluain-cain,<sup>14</sup> a bishop and anchorite, 'fell asleep.' The oratory of Cíanan<sup>15</sup> was plundered by Foreigners, and its full of people taken out of it; and Barith, a great tyrant of the [880.]

some stanzas written on the top margin of fol. 45a in MS. A., the beginning of the verses having been mutilated by the binder.

<sup>12</sup> Maelmithich.—The Four Masters (at A.D. 877) write the name Mael-mithidh, and state that he was slain by the Airthera, a powerful tribe whose territory is now represented by the baronies of Orior, in the east of the present co. Armagh.

<sup>1</sup> Killed by Cianan.—The Four Masters (at A.D. 878) state that Barith was “killed and burned” in Ath-cliaith [Dublin] “through the miracles of God and Cianan.” The Barith here mentioned was of course a different person from the “Barid son of Ottir” referred to at the year 913 infra. See Todd's War of the Gaedhil, &c., Introd., pp. lxxiv., lxxxiv., and pp. 273–4.

Norsemen, was afterwards killed by Cíanan.<sup>1</sup> Mael-sinchill,<sup>2</sup> son of Mughron, King of the Ui-Failghi, died. Oenghus, son of Maelcaurarda, abbot of Ard-sratha;<sup>3</sup> Oenacan, son of Ruaidhri, abbot of Lusca, [and] Flaithe-man, son of Cellach, King of Ui-Briuin-Cualann, died. Suibhne, bishop of Cill-dara, rested. Ruidhgel, a bishop, abbot of Imlech-Ibhair,<sup>4</sup> rested. Maelfabhaill, son of Loingsech, King of Carraig-Brachaide,<sup>5</sup> died.

Kal. Jan., the 7th of the moon. A.D. 881. A hosting [881.] by Flann son of Maelsechlainn, with Foreigners and Irish, into the North, when they halted at Magh-itir-daglas,<sup>6</sup> and Ard-Macha was plundered by him. Muirchertach son of Niall, abbot of Daire-Calcaigh<sup>7</sup> and other monasteries, rested. Lorcan son of Coscrach, King of the Ui-Niallain,<sup>8</sup> and Donnacan son of Fogartach, King of Fernmhagh,<sup>9</sup> fell by each other.<sup>10</sup> A battle between the Conaille-Muirthemhne and the Ulidians, in which Anfith<sup>11</sup> son of Aedh, King of Ulidia, and Conallan son of Maelduin, King of Cobho,<sup>12</sup> and other nobles were slain. The Conaille were victors. Scannlan, abbot of Dunlethglaisi, was slain by Ulidians. Cormac son of Cíaran, vice-abbot of Cluain-ferta-Brenainn, and abbot of Tuaim- tribe name, Ui-Niallain, is still preserved in the names of the baronies of O'Neilland East and West, in the county of Armagh.

<sup>10</sup> Fell by each other.—The literal translation of the original, imroctam i n-ri Loncan . . . 7 Donnacan, would be “a mutual falling between Lorcan . . . and Donnacan,” which means that the two fell in mutual conflict.

the Ulaid contained in the Book of Leinster, p. 41, col. 3, where he is stated to have reigned ten years, and to have been slain in the country of the “Airthera” (or “Oriors”), at Dabull [a river in the county of Armagh, now known by the name of “the Tall river.”] See Reeves' Colton's Visitation, p. 126.

lower margin of fol. 44b in A., with a sign of reference to the place where they might be introduced into the text.

Kal. Jan., the 18th of the moon. A.D. 882. Maelruain, [882.] bishop of Lusca, slept in peace. Cumuscach son of Domnall, King of Cinel-Loegaire, died. Braen, son of Tigernach, was slain by Anfith son of Gairbhith.

Braen,<sup>4</sup> son of Tigernach, without guile ;
Whose renown was great throughout the world.
Oengus<sup>5</sup> was killed, like Braen.<sup>6</sup>
He was not one of God's enemies.

Death of the son of Ausli, by the son of Iergni<sup>7</sup> and the daughter<sup>8</sup> of Maelsechnaill. Anfith, son of Mughran, chief of Mughdhorna-Bregh, was slain. Eochocan, son of Aedh, half-king<sup>9</sup> of Ulidia, was slain by the sons of Anfith,<sup>10</sup> son of Aedh. Cathasach,<sup>11</sup> son of Robartach, abbot of Ard-Macha, rested in peace. Oenghus, son of Maelduin, royal heir of the North, was beheaded by the Dal-Araidhe.

Kal. Jan., the 29th of the moon. A.D. 883. Ailbrenn, [883.] BISH. son of Maichtech, abbot of Cluain-Iraird, died after a long illness. Suairlech, abbot of Ard-Brecain, ended a long life. Domnall, son of Muirecan, King of the Leinstermen, was slain by his associates.

A., at the year 851 (=852) supra, and Eirne in the corresponding entry in B. See Todd's War of the Gaedhil, etc., Introd., p. lxiii. The Chron. Scotorum, at A.D. 883, gives the name of the son of Iergni (or Eirgni), as "Otir."

Kings of Ulidia in the Book of Leinster, p. 41, col. 3, Eochocan is set down as full king of that province, the duration of his government being limited to one year.

Kal. Jan., the 10th of the moon. A.D. 884. Tuile-flaith, abbess of Cill-dara, 'fell asleep'; and Scannal, bishop of Cill-dara, died. Domnall son of Cinaedh, King of Cinel-Loegaire, died in religion. Maeltuile son of Fechnach, abbot of Glais-noide,<sup>6</sup> died. Maelpatraic son of Maelcaurarda, King of the Airghialla, was slain by his associates. An eclipse of the sun; and the stars were seen in the heavens. Elduin son of Oengus, King of Coille-Follamhain,<sup>7</sup> died. Cormac, abbot of Cluain-Iraird, and bishop of Daimliac, rested after prolonged suffering. A boy<sup>8</sup> spoke at Croebh-Laisre,<sup>9</sup> two months after his birth, a thing that had not been heard from ancient times. Muiredhach son of Bran, King of the Leinstermen, and abbot of Cill-dara, 'fell asleep.' A secret murder<sup>10</sup> was committed in Cill-dara. Mughron son of Cennfaeladh, abbot of Cluain-ferta-Brendain, died. [884.]

<sup>9</sup> Croebh-Laisre.—The "tree of St. Lasair." The name of a monastery near Clonmacnoise, in the King's county. See Todd's Irish Nennius, p. 208, note x.

<sup>10</sup> Secret murder. — conuata. A term used to express an aggravated kind of murder, where the body was concealed afterwards. See O'Donovan's Four Masters, A.D. 1349, note h.

Kal. Jan., m. 21. A.D. 885. Eiremhon<sup>1</sup> son of [885.]
Aedh, half-King of Ulidia, was slain by Eloir son of
Cluain-Iraird, and Robhartach son of Colcu, abbot of Cill-Toma,<sup>4</sup> 'fell asleep.' Fiachna son of Anfith, King of Ulidia, was slain by his associates. Scannal son of Fergal, abbot of Domnach-Sechnaill, was killed by his brethren.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 886. Murchadh son of Maelduin, [886.]
royal heir of the Fochla,<sup>5</sup> was killed by Flannacan son of Fogartach, King of Fernmhagh.<sup>6</sup> Tigernach son of Tolarg, royal heir of the South of Bregh, was killed by his associates. An epistle came with the pilgrim to Ireland, with the 'Cain Domnaigh,'<sup>7</sup> and other good instructions. Echaidh of Lann,<sup>8</sup> son of Comgan, a bishop, ended a long life. Maelmura,<sup>9</sup> King-poet of Ireland, died.

There trod not<sup>10</sup> the choice earth, there flourished not at Temair the high,

The great Erin produced not a man, like the mild-bright Maelmura.

There sipped not death without sorrow, there went not usually to the dead,

The habitable earth was not closed over, a historian more excellent.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 887. Maelcobha<sup>11</sup> son of Crunnmael, [887.] mts.
abbot of Ard-Macha, ended a long life. Maeltuile, son of Cilen, abbot of Cluain-ferta-Brenaind, rested. Mael-

"Lann-Eala" (now Lynally, in the barony of Ballycowan, King's county).

<sup>6</sup> Tailtiu. — Now Teltown, in the barony of Upper Kells, co. Meath. The celebration, or non-celebration, of the fairs (or games) of Teltown seemed to be regarded as matters of great importance, judging from the patraic, a most excellent scribe and sage, abbot of Treoit,<sup>1</sup> and steward of Patrick's 'people' to the south of the mountain,<sup>2</sup> rested. Dunchad son of Dubhdabhairenn, King of Cashel, died. A victory gained over Flann,<sup>3</sup> son of Melsechnaill, by Foreigners, in which fell Aedh, son of Concobhar, King of Connaught, and Lergus son of Cruinnen, bishop of Cill-dara, and Donnchadh son of Maelduin, abbot of Cill-delga and other religious establishments. Cerbhall son of Dungal, King of Osraighi, died suddenly. Cu-cen-mathair,<sup>4</sup> abbot of Imlech-Ibhair,<sup>5</sup> rested. Tolarg son of Cellach, half-king of the South of Bregh, finished an old age. Sicfrith son of Imar, King of the Norsemen, was deceitfully slain by his brother. It happened that the Fair of Tailtiu<sup>6</sup> was not celebrated.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 888. A hosting by Domnall, son of Aedh, [888.] with the men of the North of Ireland, and with Foreigners, to the Ui-Neill of the South. Maelmartain, successor of Cainnech, died. Moenach, abbot of Cill-Achaidh-dromafota, died. The Fair of Tailtiu<sup>6</sup> not celebrated.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 889. The sky seemed to be on fire on [889.] the night<sup>7</sup> of the Kalends of January. Maelpatraic son of Niall, abbot of Slane, 'fell asleep' happily. Eugean son Cennfaeladh, abbot of Imlech-Ibhair,<sup>8</sup> was slain. Giblechan son of Maelbrihte, King of Conailli-Muirtheimhne, died. Flann daughter of Dungal, Queen of the King of Temhair,<sup>9</sup> 'fell asleep' in penitence. Airmedach, abbot of Magh-Bile, 'fell asleep.'

frequent allusions made to them in this and other chronicles. See under the next year, and note 8, p. 387 supra.

Masters (at A.D. 886) explain that this King was Melsechnaill son of Maelruanaldh (or Malachy I.), and that Flann Sinna, King of Ireland for nearly 30 years, and whose obit is given at the year 915 (alias 916) infra, was the son of Queen Flann.

Flannacan as having been slain in Cluain-fota, in the church, when all the writings (γρ̃νε̃ρ̃τα) of Finnian were burnt with him, and Finnian's reliquaries profaned about him.

<sup>2</sup> Tanist-abbot. — Tanist is the Anglicised form of the Irish taniri (or tanairi), which means "second," or next in the order of succession.

<sup>3</sup> Druim-Inasclainn. — This form has been corrupted to Dromiskin, the name of a townland and parish in the barony and county of Louth.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 890 (alias 891). Flann son of Maelduin, abbot of Ia, rested in peace. Conchobar son of Flannacan, King of Ui-Failghi, was put to death by fire in Cluain-fota.<sup>1</sup> The 'family' of Fini were profaned in the church, and the reliquaries of Finnia were profaned and burned there. Maelmordha son of Gairbhith, i.e., King of Conailli-Muirtheimhne, was beheaded by Cellach son of Flannacan. Cormac, abbot of Fobhar, and tanistabbot<sup>2</sup> of Cluain-mic-Nois, died. Cormac son of Fianamail, abbot of Druim-Inasclainn,<sup>3</sup> 'fell asleep.' Sechna-sach, bishop of Lusca, 'fell asleep.' Fothuth, abbot of Mainistir-Buite,<sup>4</sup> died. Suibhne<sup>5</sup> son of Maelumai, anchorite, and excellent scribe, of Cluain-mac-U-Nois, 'fell asleep.' A woman<sup>6</sup> was cast ashore by the sea, in Alba, whose length was 195 feet. The length of her hair was 17 feet; the length of a finger of her hand was 7 feet;
the length of her nose 7 feet. She was altogether whiter than a swan. Maelfabhuill, son of Cleirech, King of Aidhne,<sup>7</sup> died. [890.]

Kal. Jan. A.D. 891 (alias 892). Maelbrihte, abbot [891.] BIS. of Cluain-mac-Nois, slept in peace. A great storm on the feast of St. Martin, which created great destruction of trees in the forests, and carried away the oratories and other houses from their sites. Maelcorgis, abbot of man, and is believed to be the person mentioned by Ussher as "doctor Scotorum [i.e. of the Irish Scoti] peritissimus," Index Chronol., ad an. 891. His name appears printed as "Swifneh," in the Anglo-Sax. Chron. and in Flor, Wigorn, at 892, and in the Annales Cambriae at 889. See Lanigan's Eccl. Hist., vol. 3, p. 330. There is at Clonmacnoise a tombstone inscribed to Suibhne. See Petrie's Round Towers, p. 323; and Chron. Scotorum, ed. Hennessy, p. 172, note <sup>2</sup>.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 892 (alias 893). Mochta,<sup>2</sup> foster son of Fethgna, bishop, anchorite, and eminent scribe of Ard-Macha, rested in peace. A disturbance at Whitsuntide in Ard-Macha, between the Cinel-Eogain and Ulidians, where many were slain. A battle gained over Black Foreigners by Saxons, in which countless numbers were slain. Great confusion among the Foreigners of Athcliath,<sup>3</sup> so that they became divided—one division of them [joining] with the son of Imhar; the other division with Earl Sichfrith. Congalach son of Flannagan, royal-heir of Bregh, rested in peace. [892.]

Kal. Jan. A.D. 893 (alias 894). Maelodhar<sup>4</sup> son of Forbusach, steward of Patrick's 'family' from the mountain<sup>5</sup> southwards, rested. Lachtnan, son of Maelchiarain, King of Tethba, died. Fergus son of Maelmithil, house-steward of Clonmacnoise, 'fell asleep.' The son of Imar [comes] again to Ireland. [893.]

Kal. Jan. A.D. 894 (alias 895). Dubhlachtna, son of Maelghuala, King of Cashel, died. Maelpetair, a bishop, abbot of Tir-da-ghlas, died. Cellach, son of Flannacan, royal-heir of all Bregh, was deceitfully slain by Fogartach son of Tolarg. [894.]

"There is no son<sup>6</sup> of a King that rules over lords,
Like the mighty pure Ceallach;
A household like the man's household
Is not under heaven of brilliant rays."

(mæp) of the "family" (muinntir), or "people," of St. Patrick beyond "the mountain" southwards. The jurisdiction of this mæp (steward, or "serjeant," as it is rendered by the old translator of these annals in the Clar. 49 MS., Brit. Museum) was evidently the same as that of the Maelpatraic whose "quievit" is noticed above at the year 887.

<sup>5</sup> The mountain.—The name of the mountain (or ṛlāb) is unfortunately not given. It was probably Sliabh-Fuaid (the Few Mountains, on the southern border of the county of Armagh). See last note.

been created regarding the genealogy of these Norse and Danish families who settled in Ireland, by the inaccuracy with which the names of the chief men are written, not only in the Irish Annals, but in other contemporary Chronicles. See Todd's War of the Gaedhel, &c., p. 271.

<sup>7</sup> Half-king of Ulidia.—The Four Mast. (A.D. 891) say that Maelmocherghi was lord of Leath-Cathail (Lecale, in the county of Down). His name does not appear in the Book of Leinster list (p. 41) of the kings of Ulidia.

Muiredach son of Eochacan, half-king of the Ulaid, was slain by Aided, son of Laigne. Great snow and great scarcity. Ard-Macha was plundered by Foreigners from Ath-cliath, i.e., by Glun-iarainn, when they carried away seven hundred and ten persons into captivity.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 895 (alias 896). Blamac,<sup>2</sup> abbot of [895.] MS.
Cluain-mic-Nois, Moran Ua Buide,<sup>3</sup> abbot of Birra, ended a long life. Cinaedh,<sup>4</sup> son of Flannacan, Royal-heir of Bregh, died. Sitriucc,<sup>5</sup> son of Imhar, was slain by other<sup>6</sup> Norsemen. Maelmocherghi, son of Indrechtach, half-king of Ulidia,<sup>7</sup> was slain by his associates. Cumuscach, son of Muiredach, King of Fera-Arda-Cianachta,<sup>8</sup> was slain by the Ulidians. A slaughter of the Eoghanachta by the Osraighi. A slaughter of the Foreigners by the Conailli, and by the son of Laighne,<sup>9</sup> in which fell Amlaim, grandson of Imhar. Maelachidh, ‘tanist’<sup>10</sup> of Cluain-mic-Nois, and abbot of Daimhinish, underwent martyrdom by the Delbhna. Flannacan, son of Cellach, King of Bregh, was slain by Norsemen. Flann,<sup>11</sup> son of Lonan Ua Guaire,<sup>12</sup> was slain by Deisi of Munster.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 896 (alias 897). Cathusach, son of [896.]

p. 324 supra.

Aidith (or Aideid), King of Ulidia, whose death is recorded at the year 897 infra, but by the Four Masters at the year 897 (=901), and in the Chron. Scotorum at 898. See the entry in the latter Chronicle regarding the battle above referred to (at the year 896), where “Aiteid,” son of Laighne, is named as one of the victors.

<sup>10</sup> ‘Tanist.’—This title is represented in the Ann. Four Mast. by ṛeacnabb

.i. ppuoir (“Vice-abbot,” i.e. Prior), at the year 891, where an explanation is given as to the cause of the martyrdom of Maelachidh. See the record of the event in the Chron. Scotorum, at A.D. 896.

<sup>11</sup> Flann.—A famous poet. In the Chron. Scotorum (at A.D. 896) Flann is called Ṽirgil (“Virgil”) of the Gaedhil. See O’Reilly’s Irish Writers, pp. 58–60, and O’Curry’s Manners and Customs, vol. 2, pp. 98–104.

<sup>1</sup> Mac-Etigh.—The obit of this person, whose name appears in the list of the Kings of Dal-Araide contained in the Book of Leinster (p. 41, col. 5), is given in these Annals at the year 899, where his son Muiredhach (or Muridach, as the name is written) is mentioned as his successor. Mac-Etigh, Muiredhach's father, may have resigned the government before his death. But in the Book of Leinster, (loc. cit.), Mac-Etigh is stated to have been slain by Mael-finnia, in the battle of Rath-cro, which was the name of the place where the battle above mentioned was fought, according to the Ann. Four Mast. (A.D. 892).

Fergus, tanist-abbot of Ard-Macha, a religious young man, rested. A battle-rout by Maelfinnia, son of Flannacan, over the Ulidians and the Dal-Araidhe, where a great many were slain, including the King of Dal-Araidhe, viz., Muiredhach son of Mac-Etigh,<sup>1</sup> and including the son<sup>2</sup> of Maelmocheirghe, son of Indrechtach, King of Leth-Cathail. Aideit<sup>3</sup> son of Laighne, escaped wounded. Uathmaran son of Conchobar, King of Ui-Failgi, was treacherously slain by his associates.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 898 (alias 899). Mescell, abbot of Imlech-Ibhair;<sup>7</sup> Artagan, abbot of Corcach, and Bresal, lector of Ard-Macha, died. [898.]

Kal. Jan. A.D. 899 (alias 900). A rainy year. Mac-Etigh,<sup>8</sup> son of Lethlabhar, King of Dal-Araidhe, died. Great scarcity<sup>9</sup> [of food] for cattle. Maenach, son of Caeman, abbot of Daimliacc, died. Tadhg,<sup>10</sup> son of Conchobar, King of the three divisions of Connaught, rested after long suffering. Domnall,<sup>11</sup> son of Custantine, King of Alba, died. [899.]

Kal. Jan. A.D. 900 (alias 901). Maelruanaidh, son of Flann, son of Melsechnaill, royal-heir of Ireland, was [900.]

<sup>10</sup> Tadhg.—His name appears also in the Ann. Four Mast. (895), and the Chron. Scotorum (900), as King of the three Connaughts (or three divisions of Connaught); but it is not found in the list of the Kings of Connaught in the Book of Leinster (p. 41). Hence it may be assumed that the "three divisions of Connaught" (τρεῖς Connaught, or "three Connaughts," as it is called in old authorities), did not comprise the entire province. See O'Flaherty's Ogygia, pp. 175, 269.

hosting by Flann<sup>1</sup> son of Maelsechnaill, to Osraighe. Lachtnan, abbot of Ferna, died. A challenge of battle between two sons of Aedh,<sup>2</sup> viz., Domnall and Niall; but it was prevented through the intercession of the Cinel-Eoghain.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 905 (alias 906). Flann son of Domnall, [905.] royal-heir of the North, died. Eienechan son of Dalach, King of the Cinel-Conaill, died. A hosting by Flann,<sup>1</sup> son of Maelsechlainn, to the men of Munster, when [the country] from Gabhran<sup>3</sup> to Luimnech<sup>4</sup> was devastated by him. Ciarmac,<sup>5</sup> King of the Ui-Fidhgenti,<sup>6</sup> [died]. Indrechtach, abbot of Bennchair, died.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 906 (alias 907). Colman, a scribe, [906.] bishop of Doimliacc and Lusca, rested in peace. Fergil, bishop of Finnabhair-abha, and abbot of Indeidenen, ended an old age in Christ. A year of mortality. Dubhsinna son of Eilge, King of Magh-Itha,<sup>7</sup> died.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 907 (alias 908). A hosting by the [907.] HIS Cinel-Eoghain, i.e., by Domnall<sup>8</sup> son of Aedh, and by Niall<sup>8</sup> son of Aedh, when Tlachtgha<sup>9</sup> was burned by them. Maelmartain, abbot of Lughmadh, rested—(in Magh-Ailbhe, on the festival of Dagan of [Inbher]-Daile,<sup>10</sup> i.e., the Ides of September, on a Tuesday, the 13th). A battle between the men of Munster and the Leth-Chuinn<sup>11</sup> and Leinstermen, in which Cormac Mac Cuilennain, King of Caisel, was slain, together with other famous Kings, viz., Fogartach son of Suibne, King of Ciarraidhe;<sup>12</sup> mentioned above at the year 904, as about to engage in battle with each other.

<sup>9</sup> Tlachtgha.—This was the old name of the hill now known as the "Hill of Ward," near the town of Athboy, co. Meath.

<sup>10</sup> Inbher-Daile.—This is now represented by Ennereilly, in a parish of the same name, barony of Arklow, and county of Wicklow. This clause, which county of Kildare. A curious account of this battle has been published in Fragm. of Irish Annals, pp. 201–225. See also O'Donovan's F.M., at A.D. 903, under which year the battle is there entered; the correct date being 908.

tium, corrected to Laginenrium, A.
Laiḡi B.

Ceallach son of Cerbhall, King of the Osraighi; Ailill son of Eogan, abbot of Trian-Corcaighe; Colman, abbot of Cenn-Etigh,<sup>1</sup> and others. Flann<sup>2</sup> son of Maelsechlainn, King of Temhair; Cerbhall son of Muirecan, King of Leinster, [and] Cathal son of Conchobar, King of Con-naught, were victors. The battle of Belagh-Mughna.<sup>3</sup> Diarmait, abbot of Daire-Calgaigh, rested in peace. Cormac, an anchorite, abbot of Druim-mor, died. Maeloghra son of Conghalach, King of Loch-gabhor, was treacherously slain by Fogartach son of Tolarg.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 908 (alias 909). Cerbhall son of [908.] Muirecan, a most excellent King of the Leinstermen,<sup>4</sup> died of anguish. Mughron son of Sochlachan, King of Ui-Maine, [died]. Bec, grandson of Lethlabhar, King of Dal-Araidhe, died. A mortality of cattle. Amalgaidh son of Congalach, royal-heir of Bregh, and Indeirghi son of Maelteimin, a religious<sup>5</sup> layman, were beheaded by the Conailli-Muirteimni. Cumuscach son of Ailill, house-steward<sup>6</sup> of Ard-Macha, rested.<sup>7</sup>

Kal. Jan. A.D. 909 (alias 910). A battle-rout by [909.] Flann<sup>8</sup> son of Maelsechnaill, with his sons, over the men of Breifni, in which Flann<sup>9</sup> son of Tigernan fell, and a great many other eminent persons were slain. Aedh son of Maelpatraic, King of Ui-Fiachrach, was slain by Niall son of Aedh.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 910 (alias 911). Fogartach son of [910.] Cele, King of Ui-mac-Cuais,<sup>10</sup> died. Eithigen son of Fingin, abbot of Treoit, ended an aged life. Two suns ran together on the same day, viz., the day before the through treachery and malice, by the Ui-Dungalaigh. A great and frequent increase of Gentiles coming still to Loch-dachaech; and the territories and churches of Munster were plundered by them.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 915 (alias 916). Flann, son of Mael- [915.] BIS. sechlainn (son<sup>1</sup> of Maelruanaidh, son of Donnchad), King of Temhair, who reigned<sup>2</sup> 36 years, 6 months, and 5 days, died in the 68th year of his age, on the 8th of the Kalends of June,<sup>3</sup> the 7th day of the week, about the 7th hour of the day. Fogartach son of Tolarg, King of the South of Bregh, died. Annle son of Cathan, King of Uaithne-Cliach,<sup>4</sup> was put to death by the Foreigners of Loch-dacaech. Aedh son of Ailill, abbot of Cluain-ferta-Brendain; Conligan son of Draignen, chieftain of Ui-Lomain-Gaela;<sup>5</sup> [and] Martain abbot of Ros-Comain, died. Niall,<sup>6</sup> son of Aedh, in the kingship of Temhair; and the fair of Tailtiu was celebrated by him, which had been omitted for many years. The Foreigners of Loch-dacaech still plundering Munster and Leinster. Mael-barrfind, a priest of Clonmacnoise, died. Ard-Macha was burned by lightning on the 5th of the Kalends of May, viz., the southern half, with the 'Toi'<sup>7</sup> and the 'Saball,'<sup>7</sup> and the kitchen, and the abbot's house all. Coblaith, daughter of Dubhduin, successor of Brigit, rested.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 916 (alias 917). Great snow and cold, [916.] and unprecedented frost, in this year, so that the chief lakes and rivers of Ireland were passable, which brought great havoc upon cattle, birds, and fishes. Horrid signs besides. The heavens seemed to glow with comets. A mass of fire was observed, with thunder, passing over Ireland from the west, which went over the sea eastwards.

Sitriuc, grandson of Imar, came with his fleet to Cennfuait<sup>1</sup> on the border of Leinster. Ragnall, grandson of Imar, went with his other fleet to the Foreigners of Loch-Dachaeach. A slaughter of the Foreigners at Neimlid<sup>2</sup> in Munster. Another slaughter by the Eoganacht and the Ciarraidhe. A hosting of the Ui-Neill of the South, and of the North, by Niall son of Aedh, to the men of Munster, to wage war against the Gentiles. He encamped on the 22nd of the month of August at Tobar-Glethrach<sup>3</sup> in Magh-Femhin.<sup>4</sup> The Gentiles went into the territory on the same day. The Irish attacked them between tierce<sup>5</sup> and mid-day, and they fought till vesper-time, so that about<sup>6</sup> 100 men fell between them, but most fell on the part of the Foreigners. Reinforcements came from the camp of the Gentiles, to the aid of their people. The Irish returned back to their encampment before [the arrival of] the last reinforcement, i.e. before Ragnall, King of the Dubh-Gaill [arrived], accompanied by an army of Foreigners. Niall, son of Aedh, went with a small force against the Gentiles, so that God prevented their slaughter through him. Niall after this stayed twenty nights encamped against the Gentiles. He sent word to the Leinstermen to beseige the camp from a distance. The battle of Cennfuait<sup>7</sup> was gained over them by Sitriuc grandson of Imar, in which fell Augaire son of Ailill, King of Leinster; and Maelmordha son of Muirecan, King of Airther-Liphè; Maelmoedhoc, son of Diarmait, a wise man, and bishop of Leinster; Augran son of Cennetigh, King of Laighis, and other captains and nobles. Sitriuc, grandson of Imar, came into Athcliath. Eithne,<sup>8</sup> daughter of Aehh, died in true penitence, on the feast of St. Martin.

<sup>5</sup> North Saxonland.—Northumbria or Northumberland. The meaning of the expression la raxanu tuaircirt, which signifies literally "apud Saxones sinistralēs," has been misconceived by some writers on Scotch history. There can be no doubt that the foregoing statement, co comairnečtar pōr bīu Tine la Saxanu tuaircirt, means that they (i.e. the Dubhgall [or Black Foreigners] and the men of Alba, or Scotland) met on the banks of the Tyne, in Northumbria. Skene, misunderstanding the expression, states that the men of Alba prepared to meet the invaders "with the assistance of the northern Saxons." (Chron. Picts and Scots, p. 363). Dr. Todd fell into the same mistake, (War of the Gaedhil, &c., Introd., p. lxxxvi).

Kal. Jan. A.D. 917 (alias 918). Maeleoin, abbot and [917.] bishop of Ros-cre; Eicnech, abbot of Ara-airther,<sup>1</sup> [and] Daniel of Cluain-coirpthe, an eminent historian, 'fell asleep<sup>2</sup> in peace.' Muirenn, daughter of Suart, abbess of Cill-dara, rested. The Foreigners of Loch-Dachaeach left Ireland, viz., Ragnall King of the Dubhgall, and the two Earls, to wit Ottir and Graggaba. And they went<sup>3</sup> afterwards against the men of Alba. The men of Alba, however, were prepared for them; so that they met on the banks of the Tine,<sup>4</sup> in North Saxonland.<sup>5</sup> The Gentiles divided themselves into four battalions, viz., a battalion with Gothfrith grandson of Imar; a battalion with the two Earls; a battalion with the young lords. There was another battalion under Ragnall, in ambush, which the men of Alba did not see. The men of Alba gained a victory over the three battalions they saw, and made a great slaughter of the Gentiles, including Ottir and Graggaba.<sup>6</sup> Ragnall, however, afterwards attacked the rear of the army of the men of Alba, and made a slaughter of them, but no King or 'Mor-maer'<sup>7</sup> of them perished. Night interrupted the battle. Eithilfleith,<sup>8</sup> most famous queen of the Saxons,<sup>9</sup> died. War between Niall, son of Aedh, King of Temhair, and Sitriuc, grandson of Imar. Maelmithidh son of Flannacan, King of Cnoghbbha,<sup>10</sup> went to the Gentiles, with a view to defending the North of Bregh by the aid of the Gentiles; which availed him nothing.

of the Kalends of May, and Little Easter<sup>1</sup> on the 2nd day of Summer. Aedh, grandson of Maelsechnaill, was blinded by his brother, Donnchad King of Midhe. A battle gained by Gentiles at Dubhlinn, over Gaedhil, in which fell<sup>2</sup> Niall (i.e. Glundubh)<sup>3</sup> son of Aedh, King of Ireland, in the 3rd year of his reign, on the 17th<sup>4</sup> of the Kalends of December, the 4th day of the week ; and in which fell Aedh son of Eochacan, King of the Province of Conchobar;<sup>5</sup> and Maelmithidh son of Flannacan, King of Bregh; and Conchobar Ua Maelsechnaill, royal heir of Temhair; and Flaithbertach son of Domnall, royal heir of the Fochla; and the son of Dubhsinach, i.e. Maelcraibhi, King of the Airghialla, and many other nobles.

Sorrowful<sup>6</sup> to-day is noble Ireland,
Without a valiant chief of hostage reign;
[It is seeing the heavens without a sun,
To see Magh-Neill without Niall].

There is no joy in man's goodness;
There is no peace nor gladness among hosts;
No fair can be celebrated,
Since the cause of sorrow died.

[A pity] this, O beloved Magh-Bregh, Beautiful, desirable country.
Thou hast parted with thy lordly king;
Niall the wounding hero has left thee!

[Where is the chief of the western world?
Where is the hero] of every clash of arms?
Is it the brave Niall of Cnucha
That has been lost, O great cantred!

Cett son of Flaithbertach, King of Corc-Modruagh, [and] Tigernach Ua Cleirigh, King of Ui-Fiachrach-Aidhne, died.

Ruman, bishop of Cluain-Iraid; Ferdalach, bishop of Cluain-mic-Nois; Loingsech son of Oenacan, house-steward of Doimliac; Colgu son of Maelsempuil, abbot of Slane—all ‘fell asleep.’ The fleet of Luimnech,<sup>1</sup> i.e. of the son of Ailche,<sup>2</sup> on Loch-Ri, so that they destroyed Cluain-mic-Nois, and all the islands of the lake, and carried off a great spoil, between gold and silver, and other treasures.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 922 (alias 923). Maelpatraic son of Morand, abbot of Druim-cliaabh and Ard-sratha, died. [922.] Spelan son of Congalach, king of Conaille,<sup>3</sup> was treacherously slain. Plundering of Fera-Arda,<sup>4</sup> and Lann-leire,<sup>5</sup> and Fera-Roiss, in the same month. Plundering of Cill-sleibhe<sup>6</sup> by Gentiles from Snamh-aignech,<sup>7</sup> and Dubhlitir, priest of Ard-Macha, suffered martyrdom by them. Cucongalt, priest of Lann-leire,<sup>5</sup> the tetra<sup>8</sup> of Ireland for voice, and figure, and knowledge, rested in peace. Maelcluiche son of Conchobar, royal-heir of Connaught, was slain through treachery. Ligach, daughter of the son<sup>9</sup> of Maelsechlainn, the King of Bregh’s queen, died. Finn son of Maelmordha, royal heir of Leinster, was killed by his brother. Maelcallainn, abbot of Disert-Diarmata,<sup>10</sup> rested.

<sup>8</sup> Tetra.—This word, which appears to be used here in the sense of “paragon,” or “most eminent,” is explained in the Ann. Four M., A.D. 921, as signifying “chantor, or orator,” (cantaire no opator), a meaning which does not seem consistent with the context. The Translator in Clar. 49 makes Cucongalt. “chiefe of Ireland in all virtues.” But Dr. O’Conor understands tetra and cruth as signifying respectively “Tympanista,” and “cithara”!

Rudhraighe was the old name of the inner Bay of Dundrum, co. Down; and Fertās-Rudhraighe was probably the name of the passage between the inner and outer Bays; the word Fertās signifying a ford, crossing, or passage.

Maelmordha son of Conghal, abbot of Daiminis, rested.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 924 (alias 925). Dubhgall son of Aedh, King of Ulidia, was slain by his own people. Lorcan son of Dunchad, King of Bregb, died in a senile state. Cathal son of Conchobar, King of Connaught, died in penitence. Domnall, son of Cathal, was treacherously killed by his brother, i.e., Tadhg, and other nobles of the Connaughtmen [were also slain]. Kal. Jan. A.D. 925 (alias 926). Destruction of Dun-Sobhairche<sup>7</sup> by the Foreigners of Loch-Cuan,<sup>8</sup> in which a great many men were killed and captured. A victory by Muirchertach Mac Neill over Foreigners at Snamh-Aigneche,<sup>9</sup> where 200 were beheaded. Colman, abbot of Cluain-Iraird and Cluain-mic-Nois, and a scribe and bishop, rested in Christ. Fergus son of Duligen, King of Lurg,<sup>10</sup> was slain by the men of Breifne. Linn-Uachaill,<sup>1</sup> viz., Alpthann son of Gothfrith, the day before the Nones of September. A victory gained by Muirchertach Mac Neill, at the bridge of Cluain-na-Cruimther, on Thursday, the 5th of the Kalends of January, where Alpthann son of Gothfrith was killed, with a great slaughter of his army. Half of them were besieged for a week at Ath-Cruithne, until Gothfrith, King of the Foreigners, came from Ath-cliath to their aid.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 926 (alias 927). Maelbrigte son of Tornan, 'comarb' of Patrick and Colum-Cille,<sup>2</sup> rested at a happy old age. Sitriuc, grandson of Imar, King of Dubh-Gaill and Finn-Gaill, died at an unripe age. The fleet of Linn<sup>3</sup> retired, and Gothfrith retired from Ath-cliath; and Gothfrith returned again before the end of six months. <sup>1</sup> Son of Ailche.—See the note regarding this person, under A.D. 921 supra.

son of Ailche<sup>1</sup> upon Loch-Echach, with a fleet of Foreigners, when he plundered the islands of the lake and its borders. Diarmait son of Cerbhall, King of the Osraighi, died. Ceile,<sup>2</sup> comarb of Comgall, and Apostolic doctor of all Ireland, went into pilgrimage.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 928 (alias 929). Tuathal son of Oenacan, [928.]
a scribe,<sup>4</sup> and bishop of Doimliacc and Lusca, and steward of Patrick's 'family' to the south of the mountain,<sup>5</sup> rested, alas! at an immature age. A fleet upon Loch-Orbsen<sup>6</sup> in Connaught. Ceile,<sup>7</sup> comarb of Comgall, a scribe and anchorite, and Apostolic doctor of all Ireland, rested happily at Rome, on his pilgrimage, on the 18th of the Kalends of October, the 59th year of his age. A hosting by Donnchad to Liath-druim,<sup>8</sup> against the son of Niall.

Let some one say to Donnchad the brown,
To the bulwark of plundering clans,
That though Liath-druim<sup>8</sup> is before him,
There is an angry fellow there.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 929 (alias 930). Gothfrith, grandson [929.]
of Imar, with the Foreigners of Ath-cliath, demolished Derc-Ferna,<sup>9</sup> a thing that had not been heard of from ancient times. Flann of Fobhar, a bishop and anchorite, defined except at the year 921 supra. See also under the years 813, 887, and 893.

<sup>8</sup> Liath-druim.—It is impossible to say which of the numerous places in Ulster called Liath-druim ("Gray-ridge," Anglicised Leitrim) is here referred to. The original of the stanza here printed, which is not in B., is added in the lower margin of fol. 49a, in A.

ing to this name has been identified in Ossory.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 930 (alias 931). Tipraiti son of [930.] Annsene, comarb of Ciaran, died after a long illness. Cennfaeladh son of Lorcan, abbot of Cluain-auis and Clochar-mac-nDaimeni, and tanist-abbot of Ard-Macha, rested. Maeleoin, bishop and anchorite of Ath-truim, rested happily. Derbfail, daughter of Maelfinnia son of Flannacan, queen of Temhair, died. Cernachan son of Tigernan, King of Breifne, died.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 931 (alias 932). Ferdomnach son of [931.] Flannacan, abbot of Cluain-Iraird, a most excellent scribe, rested. Earl Torulb was killed by the son of Niall.<sup>4</sup> Maelgiricc, 'comarb' of Feichen of Fobhar, 'fell asleep.' Loingsech Ua Lethlobair, King of Dal-Araidhe, died. Airmedach, abbot of Cul-rathin,<sup>5</sup> was killed by Gentiles.<sup>6</sup> Cinaedh son of Caindelbhan, chief of Cinel-Loeghaire, was slain. A fleet upon Loch-Ri.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 932 (alias 933). A victory by Fergal,<sup>7</sup> [932.] son of Domnall, son of Aedh, and by Sichfridh son of Uathmaran, i.e. the son of Domnall's daughter, over Muirchertach son of Niall, and over Conaing,<sup>8</sup> in Magh-Uatha,<sup>9</sup> where were slain Maelgarbh, King of Derlas,<sup>10</sup> and Conmal, King of Tuaith-achaidh, and 200 [others]. Cuilen son of Cellach, King of the Osraighe, an eminent layman, died. A victory by Conaing<sup>8</sup> son of Niall, over the Ulidians at

<sup>7</sup> Fergal.—He was heir to the sovereignty of Ailech, (or, in other words, of Tirconnell), and son of Domnall (son of Aedh Finnliath, King of Ireland), who previously was Prince, or King, of Ailech, and whose obit is given above at the year 914.

<sup>8</sup> Conaing.—He was son of Niall

Glundubh, monarch of Ireland, and therefore brother of Muirchertach "of the Leather Cloaks."

<sup>9</sup> Magh-Uatha.—O'Donovan suggests that this was "a plain in the east of Meath" (Four Mast., A.D. 931, note s). But this is doubtful.

Matudhan<sup>2</sup> son of Aedh, with the Province of Ireland,<sup>3</sup> and with the Foreigners, when they plundered as far as Sliabh-Betha westwards, and southwards to Mucnamh;<sup>4</sup> but Muirchertach son of Niall met them, and defeated them; and they left 240 heads, and their spoils. Celican, son of Gairbhith, King of the Airthera, died.<sup>5</sup>

Kal. Jan. A.D. 933 (alias 934). Gothfrith, grandson [933.] of Imar, a most cruel king of the Norsemen, died of anguish.<sup>6</sup> Dubhgilla son of Robucan, chief of the Ui-Cormaic, was deceitfully slain.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 934 (alias 935). Cormac, foster-son of [934.] Moenach, abbot of Achadh-bó, died. Maelbrigte, abbot of Mainistir,<sup>7</sup> rested. Muiredach son of Maelbrigte, abbot of Doimliacc, died immaturity. The Island of Loch-gabhar<sup>8</sup> was destroyed by Amlaibh grandson of Imar. The cave of Cnoghbha<sup>9</sup> was plundered by him in the same week. Great produce of acorns. Cinaedh son of Coirpre, chief of the Ui-Ceinnsealaigh, was slain, with a great many others, by Norsemen. Conchobar,<sup>10</sup> son of Domnall, royal-heir of Ailech, died, and was buried in the 'cemetery of the kings' in Ard-Macha.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 935 (alias 936). Joseph,<sup>11</sup> abbot of [935.] BIS. Ard-Macha, a bishop, wise man and anchorite, died in a good old age. Cluain-mic-Nois was plundered by the <sup>7</sup> Mainistir. — Mainistir-Buite, or Monasterboice, co. Louth. This and the rest of the entries for this year are added in a different hand in B.

<sup>8</sup> Loch-gabhar. — Now represented by the name of Lagore, in the parish and barony of Ratoath, co. Meath. But the loch (or lake) is now dried up.

mound of Knowth, in the parish of Monknewtown, barony of Upper Slane, and county of Meath.

<sup>10</sup> Conchobar. — concuḃar, B. The original of this entry is added in the margin in A., by the orig. hand, but in smaller writing.

in the parish and barony of Kilcullen, and county of Kildare; a place of great importance anciently, where there are still the remains of a round tower, and strong fortifications.

<sup>3</sup> Battle. — This was the famous battle of Brunanburh, a graphic account of which is given in the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, at the year 937, which is the correct year.

<sup>4</sup> Amlaibh. — Amlaibh (or Olaf) Cuaran. For some interesting particulars regarding his history, see Todd's War of the Gaedhil, &c., pp.
280, sq., and the other places indicated in the Index to that work under the name "Olaf Cuaran."

Foreigners of Ath-cliath; and they stayed two nights in it, a thing that had not been heard<sup>1</sup> of from ancient times. Maelpatraic son of Maeltuile, superior of Ard-Macha, rested in old age.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 936 (alias 937). Diarmait, son of [936.] Ailill, abbot of Cill-Cuilinn,<sup>2</sup> rested in old age. Bruatar son of Dubhgilla, King of the Ui-Cennselaigh, was slain. Garbhith son of Maeleitigh, King of Fera-Rois, was killed by his brothers. Crongilla son of Cuilennan, King of Conaille-Muirthemhne, died of grief. Conaing son of Niall, royal-heir of Ireland, died. A great, lamentable, and horrible battle<sup>3</sup> was stubbornly fought between the Saxons and Norsemen, in which many thousands of Norsemen, beyond counting, were slain. But the King, i.e. Amlaibh,<sup>4</sup> escaped with a few. On the other side, however, a great multitude of Saxons fell. But Athelstan King of the Saxons was enriched with a great victory. MacEtigh son of Anseman, King of Mughdorna-Magen,<sup>5</sup> died. Fedhach, abbot of Slane, died.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 937 (alias 938). Dubhtach, comarb<sup>6</sup> [937.] of Colum-Cille and Adamnan, rested in peace. Macl-cairnigh son of Conall, abbot of Tuilain,<sup>7</sup> died. Fergal<sup>8</sup> son of Domnall, King of Ailech, died. A challenge of battle between Donnchad son of Flann, and Muirchertach son of Niall, until God pacified them. Amlaibh,<sup>9</sup> son of Gothfrith, again in Ath-cliath. Cill-Cuilind<sup>10</sup> was

septs known by the tribe name of Ui-Fiachrach. But the sept here referred to was the Ui-Fiachrach of Ard-sratha (or Ardstraw), descended from Colla Uais (one of the three Collas, founders of the principal families of the Oirghialla), and which inhabited anciently the district adjacent to Ardstraw in the county of Tyrone. See O'Flaherty's Ogygia, part 3, chap. 76.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 938. (alias 939). Plundering of Cill-Cuilind<sup>2</sup> by the Foreigners of Ath-cliath, a thing not often done.<sup>3</sup> Crichan son of Maelmuire, King of Ui-Fiachrach,<sup>4</sup> died. Demolition of Ailech against Muirchertach son of Niall, who was carried off to the fleet; but he was afterwards redeemed. A hosting by Donnchad<sup>5</sup> into Bregb, when Finnabhair-abha<sup>6</sup> was plundered, and the priest slain on the floor of the church, and others besides. A victory by Congalach, son of Maelmithidh, over the Gailenga-mora<sup>7</sup> (and [Gailenga]-becca),<sup>8</sup> at Ath-da-loarc, where a great many were slain. Athelstan, King of the Saxons, the pillar of dignity of the western world, died a quiet death. Finnechta, son of Cellach, 'comarb' of Daire,<sup>9</sup> rested in Christ. [938.]

Kal. Jan., m. 18. A.D. 939 (alias 940).<sup>10</sup> A hosting [939] BIS. by Donnchad and Muirchertach to the Leinstermen and Munstermen, whose pledges respectively they brought. Suibhne, son of Cubretan, was killed by Foreigners. Niall, son of Fergal, was wounded and drowned, i.e. [by]<sup>11</sup>

A tribe whose territory is now represented by the barony of Morgallion, co. Meath.

<sup>8</sup> Gailenga-becca; or Little Gailenga. O'Donovan (following O'Dugan) states that this was the name of a territory to the north of the River Liffey, comprising Glasnevin, and that the family name was O'hAonghusa, now anglicised Hennessy. (O'Dugan's Topogr. Poem, note 57). The name of Hennessy seems to have been shortened to the form "Ennis," in the counties of Dublin, Meath, and Kildare.

<sup>4</sup> Hosting.—A marginal note in A., in the original hand, designates this hosting, or expedition, as rluaḡad na h-uḡri, i.e. "the hosting of the frost," in allusion to the time of the year (mid-winter) in which the expedition was undertaken. See the curious account of this expedition written by Cormacan Eiges in the year 942, and edited by O'Donovan for the Ir. Archæol. Soc. (1841), under the title of Circuit of Ireland by Muircheartach Mac Neill. From having provided cloaks made of cow-

Muirchertach son of Niall. Flann, daughter of Donnchad, queen of Ailech, died. A depredation by Donnchad in Bregb, when he destroyed Lann-lerc.<sup>1</sup> Repose of Muiredach, comarb of Comgall.

Kal. Jan., m. 29. A.D. 940 (alias 941). Great frost, so that lakes and rivers were passable.<sup>2</sup> Birth of Brian<sup>3</sup> son of Cennedigh. A hosting<sup>4</sup> by Muirchertach, when he ravaged Midhe and Ui-Failghi, and went into Osraighi, and obtained his demand from them; and he ravaged the Deisi, and brought with him Cellachan, King of Caisel, in subjection<sup>5</sup> to Donnchad. Maelruanaigh, son of Flann, (i.e. royal-heir<sup>6</sup> of Ailech), was killed by the Cinel-Conaill. Eochu, son of Scannal 'herenagh' of Imlech-Ibhair, died. Oenacan, priest of Dun-leth-glaise, died. [940.]

Kal. Jan., m. 10. A.D. 941 (alias 942.) Dunchad son of Suthainen, bishop of Cluain-mic-Nois, [died]. Foelan son of Muiredach, King of Leinster, died. A victory by the Ui-Failghi over the Foreigners of Ath-cliaith; but this was gained in the preceding year. Dun-leth-glaise was plundered by Foreigners. God and Patrick avenged it on them; brought Foreigners across the sea, who seized their islands against them; and the King escaped; but the Irish killed him on shore. Two sons of Lorcan<sup>7</sup> son of Dunchad were slain by Conghalach son of Maelmithidh. Maelmochta, 'herenagh' of Cluain-Iraird, rested. Cluain-mic-Nois and Cill-dara were plundered by the Gentiles of Ath-cliaith. [941.]

Kal. Jan., m. 21. A.D. 942 (alias 943). A victory over [942.]

hides for his army on this expedition, Muirchertach acquired the sobriquet of Muirchertach na g-cochall g-croicenn ("M. of the leather cloaks"). His death is noticed at the year 942 (=943).

<sup>5</sup> In subjection.—ṛṛṇ nṛṇ. This clause is not very clearly expressed in the original. But the meaning is that Muirchertach brought Cellachan with a view to making him do homage to Donnchad the monarch of Ireland.

of fol. 50a in A., with a sign of reference to the proper place in the text.

<sup>8</sup> Lorcan.—In the list of Kings of Leinster contained in the Book of Leinster (p. 39, col. 3), Lorcan is stated to have ruled only one year. It is further stated that he was slain by the Foreigners of Dublin (Athcliath) after having defeated them in the early part of the day (iar n-oi roirpo i tury lai).

the Foreigners of Loch-Cuan<sup>1</sup> by the people of Leth-Cathail,<sup>2</sup> in which they were nearly all destroyed. Muircertach<sup>3</sup> son of Niall (i.e. Muircertach, "of the Leather Cloaks"), King of Ailech, and the Hector of the West of the World, was killed by Gentiles, on a Sunday, the 4th of the kalends of March (i.e. by Blacair<sup>4</sup> son of Gofraidh, King of the Dubh-Gaill, at Glas-liathain,<sup>5</sup> by the side of Cluáin-cain<sup>6</sup> of Fera-Rois).

Vengeance and ruin have fallen

On the Race of Clann-Cuinn<sup>7</sup> for ever.

As Muircertach does not live, alas !

The country of the Gaedhil will ever be an orphan.

Ard-Macha was plundered on the morrow, the third of the kalends, by the same Foreigners. Lorcan<sup>8</sup> son of Faellan, King of Leinster, was killed by Foreigners. Cellach son of Bec, King of Dal-Araidhe, was killed by his people, through malice.<sup>9</sup>

Kal. Jan. A.D. 943. (alias 944.) Flaithbhertach son [943.] BIS. of Inmhainen, head,<sup>10</sup> rested in peace. Coirpre son of Maelpatraic, King of Ui-Liathain,<sup>11</sup> Finn son of Mutan, King of Corco-Laighdhi,<sup>12</sup> were slain by the Fera-Maighe-Féine.<sup>13</sup> Congalach son of Maelmithidh, and Braen son of sion to the kingship (in 913, according to Frag. of Annals), he had been abbot of Inis-Cathaigh, or Scatterry Island, in the Shannon.

<sup>11</sup> Ui-Liathain.—This was the name of a territory nearly co-extensive with the present barony of Barrymore, co. Cork, anciently occupied by the descendants of Eochaidh Liathanach, son of Daire-Cerba, who was the ancestor of the powerful sept of Ui-Fidhgeinte. The Irish name of Castlelyons, in the barony of Barrymore, is Caisten Ua Liathain.

<sup>12</sup> Corco-Laighdhi.—The name of a territory anciently comprising the south-west part of the county of Cork

(namely, the present baronies of Carbery, Beare, and Bantry). But after the Anglo-Norman invasion the territory of the Corco-Luighdhi (or descendants of Lughaidh son of Ith) was reduced to narrower limits; and in the 16th century the head of the O'Driscolls (who were the inhabitants of the country) had but a scanty estate round the town of Baltimore. See O'Donovan's Geneal. of Corca Laidhe; Miscellany of the Celtic Soc., Dublin, 1849.

Maelmordha, King of Leinster, plundered Ath-cliath, when they carried off jewels, and treasures, and a great spoil. Donnchad, son of Flann (son of Maelsechlaind,<sup>1</sup> son of Maelruanaidh, son of Donnchad), King of Temhair, having spent 25 years in the sovereignty, died. Mael-fecheni, comarb of Finnia, [and] Dungal, son of Cathan, 'fell asleep'<sup>2</sup> in Christ. The battle of Gort-Rottachain<sup>3</sup> [gained] by Cellachan over Tuath-Mumha,<sup>4</sup> in which a great many were slain.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 944 (alias<sup>5</sup> 945). Great, unusual, frost; [944.] so that the lakes and rivers were passable. The Foreigners of Loch-Echach were killed by Domnall, son of Muirchertach, and his brother, i.e., Flaithbheartach; and their fleet was destroyed. Maeltuile, son of Dunan, comarb of Tigernach and Cairnech, died a quiet death. Aurchath son of Murchadh, King of the West of Connaught, [and] Maelduin son of Gairbhith, vice-abbot of Ard-Macha, [died]. Blacair abandoned Ath-cliath, and Amlaibh [remained] in his place. A number of Ua Canannan's people were killed by Conghalach and Amlaibh Cuaran, in Conailli.<sup>6</sup>

Kal. Jan. A.D. 945 (alias<sup>7</sup> 946). Cluain-mic-Nois was [945.] plundered by the Foreigners of Ath-cliath, and the churches of Fer-Midhe also. Maelbethach, 'herenagh' of Daiminis, died.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 946 (alias 947). A hosting by [946.] Ruaidhri Ua Canannain to Slane, where the Foreigners and Gaedhil, viz., Congalach<sup>8</sup> son of Maelmithidh, and Amlaibh Cuaran,<sup>9</sup> encountered him, when the Foreigners of Ath-cliath were routed, and a great many were slain and drowned. The full of Patrick's 'Finnfaidhech'<sup>10</sup> of white silver [was given] by the Cinel-Eoghain to Patrick.<sup>11</sup>

ing." The name of one of St. Patrick's bells. See Reeves's Bell of St. Patrick, in Transac. R.I.A., vol. xxvii.

 of Niall Glundubh, King of Ireland, whose death in the battle of Ath-cliath (or Kilmashoge, near Dublin) is recorded above at the year 918 (=919); having been previously married to Cormac Mac Cuilennain

Scolaighe Ua h-Aedhacain, King of Dartraigi,<sup>1</sup> and Gairbhith son of Muiredhach, royal-heir of the Ui-Cremthainn, and Aedh Ua Ruairc, son of Tighernan, [slain] in the heat battle.<sup>2</sup> Braen son of Maelmordha, King of Leinster, was killed on a predatory expedition in Osraighi. Cathasach, son of Ailce, bishop of Cinel-Eoghain, died.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 947 (alias<sup>3</sup> 948). Blacair son of Goth- [947.] BIS. frith, King of the Foreigners, was slain by Congalach son of Maelmithidh, besides sixteen hundred killed or captured. Anmere Ua Adlai, 'comarb' of Ciaran-mac-int-sair,<sup>4</sup> [died]. Colman son of Maelpatraic, abbot of Slane, was taken prisoner [by the Foreigners], and died among them. Gormlaidh,<sup>5</sup> daughter of Flann son of Maelsechlainn, died in penitence. Birth of Maelsechlainn<sup>6</sup> son of Domnall.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 948 (alias 949). A hosting by [948.] Matudhan son of Aedh, and Niall Ua h-Eruilb, when they plundered Conailli, and Druim-Inasclainn, and Iniscain-Degha. A preying expedition by Ua Canannain, when he plundered the Fera-Lí, and killed Flaithbhertach Ua Neill. Aedhan of Tuaim-da-ghualann<sup>7</sup> rested in Christ. Foghartach son of Donnacan, King of Oirghialla, died in penitence. A hosting by Congalach son of Maelmithidh, when he plundered Ui-Meith and Fern-mhagh.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 949 (alias 950). Donnchad son of [949.] Domnall, King of Midhe, was killed by his brothers. Oel,<sup>8</sup> King of the Britons, died. Scothine, 'herenagh' of Dairmagh; Maelfindan, bishop of Cill-dara, [and] Cleirchen son of Conallan, 'herenagh' of Daire-Calgaigh,

<sup>5</sup> Aedh.—According to the Ann. Four Mast. (949), and Chron. Scotorum (950), Aedh was rigdamna ("materies regis," or royal-heir) of Temhair, and was slain by Domhnall son of Donnchad, whose obit is entered under the next year.

rested in peace. Matudhan, son of Aedh, was killed by the Ui-Echach, viz., by the sons of Broen; but God avenged him in a short time, in their death. Ruaidhri Ua Canannan was killed by Foreigners, i.e. the royal-heir of Ireland, after a siege of six months against Midhe and Bregha, and after committing a slaughter of the Foreigners, viz., two thousand,<sup>1</sup> or more. Niall Ua Canannan, and a few others, [fell] in the heat of battle. Unusually great 'mast.' The belfry of Slane was burned by the Foreigners of Ath-cliath. The crozier of the patron saint,<sup>2</sup> and a bell that was the best of bells, [and] Caenechair the lector, [and] a multitude along with him, were burned.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 950 (alias<sup>3</sup> 951). MacEtigh son of [950.] Cuilennan, King of Conailli, [slain]; Guaire Ua Forannain, 'herenagh' of Ard-sratha, died. Gothfrith son of Sitriuc, with the Foreigners of Ath-cliath, plundered Cenannas,<sup>4</sup> and Domnach-Patraic, and Ard-Brecain, and Tuilean, and Cill-Scire, and other churches besides; from Cenannas<sup>4</sup> they were all plundered; on which occasion three thousand men, or more, were captured, together with a great booty of cows and horses, of gold and silver. Aedh<sup>5</sup> son of Maelruanaidh, Becc son of Donnucan, King of Tethba, [died]. Cennetigh<sup>6</sup> son of Lorcan, King of Tuadh-Mumha; Garbhith son of Lorcan, King of Fir-Lemhna, [died]. Niall Mothlach<sup>7</sup> was killed by the Coirpri, through treachery. A mortality of bees. A great leprosy upon the Foreigners of Ath-cliath, and a bloody-flux.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 951 (alias<sup>8</sup> 952). Scannal, 'herenagh' [951.] bis. of Domnach-Sechnaill; Flann, 'herenagh' of Druim-but the Chronicler evidently intended to record the obit of Cennetigh. See Todd's War of the Gaedhil, &c., Intro., p. xcvi.

<sup>7</sup> Niall-Mothlach.—He was of the family of Ua Canannain, a powerful family in the territory now forming the county of Donegal.

<sup>8</sup> Alias.—The alias reading is not in B. The number 520 appears in the margin in A., in the accurate handwriting of the Canon M'Uidhir (or M'Guire), to indicate that this was the 520th year since the commencement of the Chronicle.

<sup>3</sup> Dubh.—The River Duff, which flows into the bay of Donegal, after forming the boundary for some distance between the counties of Leitrim and Sligo. Dr. O'Connor, not knowing that Dubh was the name of a river, has blundered greatly in his version of this entry. Rer. Hib. Script., vol. iv., p. 274.

took hostages. Carlus, son of Conn,<sup>1</sup> son of Donnchad, was killed in Ath-cliath. A victory over Camman,<sup>2</sup> son of Amlaimh, son of Gothfrith, at Dubh.<sup>3</sup> Muiredhach,<sup>4</sup> son of Fergus, made a full visitation of Connaught Cathmogh, 'herenagh' of Lis-mor, rested.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 960 (alias 961). An arrow of fire [960.] came along Leinster, from the south-west, which killed a hundred thousand of men and flocks, as far as Ath-cliath.<sup>5</sup> The son<sup>6</sup> of Erchadh, King of Ui-Briuin-Seola, died. Ualgarg, King of Dartraighi,<sup>7</sup> was slain by his own people. Fergraidh,<sup>8</sup> King of Caisel, was slain by his own people. Conaing Ua Domnallain, 'herenagh' of Clochar-mac-Daimeni, rested.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 961 (alias 962). A predatory ex- [961.] pedition by Flaithbertach son of Conchobar, King of Ailech, to Dal-Araidhe, when he plundered Condere; but the Ulidians overtook him, and he was there slain, with his two brothers, viz., Tadhg and Conn, and a great many others. Eogan son of Muiredhach, champion of Ireland, was killed by the Ui-Failgi. Oengus Ua Mael-doraidh<sup>9</sup> was slain by his own people.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 962 (alias 963). Ships<sup>10</sup> [were brought] [962.] by Domnall Ua Neill from the Dabhall,<sup>11</sup> across Sliabhchad, in the Ann. Four Mast., at A.D. 959.

<sup>9</sup> Ua Maeldoraidh, or O'Muldory. The family name of a powerful tribe which held the chief sway in Tir-Conaill from the middle of the 9th to the end of the 12th century, when the O'Donnells asserted their supremacy. The Oengus here referred to was the son of Maelbresail (son of Maeldoraidh), whose obit is given in the Ann. Four Mast., at the year 896.

<sup>10</sup> Ships. — Longa. These vessels were probably light cots, or boats, capable of being transported on mens' shoulders.

<sup>2</sup> Had not been done.—See above at the year 954, where Domnall son of Muirchertach (the Domnall Ua Neill of the present entry) is stated to have transported ships from Tuagh-Inbhir (the mouth of the River Bann) across Lough Neagh, along the Dabhall, and over Airghialla (or Oriel) to Loch-Erne.

<sup>3</sup> Book of Dubhdalethe.—This Book, which seems to have been a chronicle of Irish affairs, has been referred to before in these Annals. It is mentioned for the last time at the year 1021 infra. The compiler of the work is generally supposed to have been Dubhdalethe, successor of St. Patrick (i.e. abbot or bishop of Armagh), whose death is entered within at the year 1064 (=1965), and who is represented in the List of the 'comarbs' of Patrick in the Book of Leinster, p. 42, col. 4, as having ruled for 33 years. See Harris's Ware, Vol. I., p. 50; and Vol. II. (Irish Writers), p. 65; and under A.D. 964 infra.

<sup>7</sup> Of the 'just completion.'—in o lantao čoir. The so-called Translator of these Annals, whose version is preserved in the MS. Clar. 49, renders this clause by "of the full

Fuait, to Loch-Aininn,<sup>1</sup> which had not been done<sup>2</sup> from most ancient times. Thus in the Book of Dubhdalethe.<sup>3</sup> Eicnech son of Dalach, King of the Airghialla, and his son Dubhdara, were slain by his brother, Murchad son of Dalach. This Murchad was also killed soon after, in the same month. Maelmuire<sup>4</sup> son of Eochaid, 'comarb' of Patrick, was born. The son<sup>5</sup> of Cellachan, King of Caisel, died. Gofraidh son of Amlaimh died. The 'comarb' of Tigernach<sup>6</sup> died, i.e. Caencomrac. Ualgarg Ua Mailtrea was killed by the Mughdorna-Maighen.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 963 (alias 964). This is the last year [963.] MS. of the 'just completion'<sup>7</sup> [of the full period] since Patrick came into Ireland. Maelruanaidh, son of Flann, son of Eicnechan,<sup>8</sup> and his son, were slain by the Clann-Fianghusa. Dubhscuile son of Cinaedh, 'comarb' of Colum-Cille,<sup>9</sup> rested. Furudhran son of Becc, King of Derlas,<sup>10</sup> was killed by the Cinel-Eoghain, through malice and treachery. Muirchertach, son of Congalach,<sup>11</sup> son of Maelmithidh, royal-heir of Temhair, was killed by profit," which seems wrong. O'Connor translates Lantadhchoir (as he prints it), by "plenaria numeratio Poetica," and adds "nempe quia numerando a Patricii adventu, anno 432, quingenti anni perfecte intercessere usque ad annum 963, secundum numerationem Poetarum Hiberniae." Rer. Hibernicarum, vol. 4, p. 276. The learned Doctor here made a serious slip in his calculation. But it is obvious that neither O'Connor nor the author of the version of these Annals in Clar. 49 perceived that by the words lantadhchoir, ("just [or full] completion"), was meant the Paschal Cycle, or Cycle of 532 years, framed by Victorius (or Victorinus) of Aquitaine. See note <sup>1</sup>, p. 14, and note <sup>1</sup>, p. 16, supra. This entry is very valuable, not only as strengthening the evidence referring the arrival of St. Patrick in Ireland to the year 431 (=432), but also as evincing the watchfulness of the old Irish Annalists in matters connected with chronological data.

<sup>1</sup> Ua Taidhg; i.e. "grandson (or descendant) of Tadhg." This patronymic is now represented by O'Teige, and also by the form Tighe; names borne by many persons in the counties of Mayo, Roscommon, and Sligo.

<sup>2</sup> Mathgamain. — Now generally anglicised Mahon. He was the eldest brother of Brian Borumha. His murder by Maelmuaidh son of Bran (ancestor of the O'Mahonys of South Munster) is recorded at the year 975 (= 976) infra. Regarding the career of this Mathgamain, see Todd's War of the Gaedhil with the Gaill, places referred to in the Index to that work, under the name Mathgamhain.

Brachaidhe, died. The battle of Formael (i.e., at Rath-bec) by Cinel-Eoghain over Cinel-Conaill, in which fell Maelisu Ua Canannan, King of Cinel-Conaill, and Muircertach Ua Taidhg,<sup>1</sup> royal heir of Connaught, and many others. Aedh Ua h-Atidh, King of Ui-Echach, was killed by his own people. Mathgamain<sup>2</sup> son of Cennetigh, King of Caisel, plundered and burned Luim-nech.<sup>3</sup> Cerbhall son of Lorcan, royal heir of Leinster, was killed by Domnall, King of Bregh.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 967 (alias 968). Cellach Ua Banan, [967.] <sup>BIS.</sup> comarb of Comgall,<sup>4</sup> died. Muiredach, comarb of Cain-nech,<sup>5</sup> Flaithbhertach, son of Muiredach, King of Ui-Echach, died. A hosting by Domnall Ua Neill to Leinster, when he plundered from Berbha westwards<sup>6</sup> to the sea, and brought a great prey of cows, and laid siege to the Foreigners and Leinstermen for two months. Connmach, comarb of Ultan,<sup>7</sup> rested.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 968 (alias 969). Cinaeth Ua Cathmail, [968.] 'herenagh' of Daire-Calgaigh; Maelfinnen son of Uchtan, bishop of Cenannus and comarb of Ultan and Cairnech, [and] Eoghan son of Clerech, bishop of Connaught, rested. Soerlaith, daughter of Elchomach, died [at the age of] 100 years. Beollan son of Ciarmac, King of Loch-gabhor, rested in Christ.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 969 (alias 970). Cenannus was plun- [969.] dered by Amlaimh Cuaran.<sup>8</sup> A victory over Ualgarg Ua Ruairc, by Conchobar son of Tadhg,<sup>9</sup> when he [Ualgarg] was killed, with many others. A hosting by the King

St. Ultan of Ardbraccan, and abbot of that place. The Four Masters (at A.D. 966) state that Connmach was also a priest of Cenannus, or Kells.

<sup>2</sup> Condere.—Connor, co. Antrim. To palliate the offence committed by Artgar (or Artghal) in plundering an ecclesiastical establishment so famous as Connor, the Four Masters (968) insinuate that it was, at the time, in the possession of the Foreigners.

now known as Kilmona, in the parish of Rahugh, co. Westmeath.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 970 (alias 971). Culen, [son of] Illulb,<sup>6</sup> [970.] King of Alba, was slain by Britons, in the field of battle. Domnall Ua Neill, King of Temhair, was expelled from Midhe by the Clann-Colmain. Niall son of Aedh,<sup>7</sup> King of Ulidia, died. Tuathal, comarb of Ciaran,<sup>8</sup> Maelsamna comarb of Cainnech,<sup>9</sup> died. Cellach Ua Nuadhat was slain by Foreigners in the door-way of the refectory.<sup>10</sup> A hosting by Domnall Ua Neill to the men of Midhe, when he spoiled all their churches and forts; and he spoiled the Ui-Failghi and the Fotharta.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 971 (alias 972). A battle between the [971.] ms. Ulidians and the Dal-Araidhe, in which the King of the Province,<sup>11</sup> i.e. Aedh son of Loingsech, and others, were slain. Murchad, son of Finn, was deceitfully killed by Domnall Cloen. Cathasach son of Fergus, comarb of Dun,<sup>12</sup>

Kings of Ulidia contained in Book of Leinster, p. 41, col. 4, the name of Niall's father is given as Eochaid, with "vel Aed" written over it.

<sup>8</sup> Comarb of Ciaran; i.e. abbot of Clonmacnoise, of which St. Ciaran "son of the carpenter" was the founder.

<sup>10</sup> Refectory.—The Irish of the words "in the door-way" (in-dorru) is not in B. The name of the church, or monastery, not having been given, it is not easy to identify Cellach Ua Nuadhat.

died. Fogartach, son of Niall Ua Tolairg, was treacherously killed by Domnall son of Congalach. Crunnmael, herenagh of Glenn-da-locha, died.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 972 (alias 973). Conchobar son of Tadhg, King of Connaught, died. A battle between Murchad Ua Flaithbertaigh<sup>1</sup> and the Connaughtmen, in which fell Cathal son of Tadhg, King of Connaught, and Geibhennach son of Aedh, King of Ui-Maine, and many others. Maelmuire, herenagh of Dairmagh,<sup>2</sup> was drowned in Es-Ruaidh.<sup>3</sup> Becan, comarb of Finnen,<sup>4</sup> Ailill, herenagh of Glenn-da-locha, died a quiet death. Dubh-dalethe, comarb of Patrick, [went] on a visitation of Munster, and obtained his demand. [972.]

Kal. Jan. A.D. 973 (alias 974). Murchad Ua Flaithbertaigh<sup>5</sup> went on a preying expedition into Cinel-Conaill, and made a great capture; but he was hit by one dart, and died thereof at Dun-Cloitighe,<sup>6</sup> after communion and penitence. Diarmait son of Dochartach, comarb of Molaise,<sup>7</sup> died. Donnchad Finn, King of Midhe, was slain by Aghda, son of Dubhcenn. A victory by Ugaire son of Tuathal<sup>8</sup> over the Osraighi, in which Diarmait son of Donnchad was slain. Another victory also by the Osraighi over the Ui-Cennselaigh, in which Domnall<sup>9</sup> son of Cellach fell. [973.]

Kal. Jan. A.D. 974 (alias 975). Edgar<sup>10</sup> son of Edmond, King of the Saxons, paused. Domnall son of Eogan, King of the Britons,<sup>11</sup> in pilgrimage, [and] Foghartach [974.]

<sup>8</sup> Tuathal. — The obit of this Tuathal, the progenitor from whom the name O'Tuathail, or O'Toole, has been derived, is entered above under the year 957.

Cennselaigh (or South Leinster) for 9 years, according to the list in the Book of Leinster, p. 40, col. 2.

Ossory in the Book of Leinster, p. 40, col. 5. But Rev. J. F. Shearman states that Dennoch was the grandson of Cellach, being the son of Muirchertach son of Cellach, both of whom were slain in the battle of Belach-Mughna, mentioned above at the year 907 (=908). Loca Patri-ciana, Table II., after p. 264.

<sup>5</sup> Comarb of Mac Nisse and Colman Ela.—This would mean Abbot of Connor (of which Mac Nisse was the founder), and of Lann-Ela (now

Kal. Jan. A.D. 975 (alias 976). Mathgamhain<sup>3</sup> son of [975.] Cennetigh, King of Caisel, was killed by Maelmhuidh son of Bran. Donnchad son of Cellach,<sup>4</sup> King of Osraighi, [and] Domnall son of Congalach, King of Bregh, died. Conaing Ua Finan, comarb of Mac Nisse<sup>5</sup> and Colman Ela,<sup>6</sup> paused. Tadhg Ua Ruadhrach, King of Cianachta, was slain in Ulidia. Setna Ua Deman, herenagh<sup>6</sup> of Oendruim, was burned in his own house.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 976 (alias 977). Muirchertach, son of [976.] Domnall Ua Neill, and Congalach, son of Domnall, two royal heirs of Ireland, were killed by Amlaimh son of Sitriuc. Gilla-Coluim Ua Canannan was killed by Domnall Ua Neill. Amlaimh son of Illulb,<sup>7</sup> King of Alba, was killed by Cinaedh son of Domnall.<sup>8</sup> Conaing son of Cadan, comarb of Moedhoc, died. In this year Flaithbertach<sup>9</sup> son of Muirchertach was born.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 977 (alias 978). Fiachra, herenagh [977.] of Ia, rested. A battle between Brian, son of Cennetigh, and Maelmhuidh,<sup>10</sup> King of Des-Mumha, in which Maelmhuidh was slain. The battle of Bithlann [was gained] over the Leinstermen by the Foreigners of Ath-cliath, in Lynally, in the barony of Ballycowan, King's County, of which St. Colman Ela was the founder). See Reeves's Down and Connor, p. 242.

monarchy is recorded under the year 979 (= 980) by the Four Masters.

<sup>4</sup> Domhnall.—A marginal note in A. distinguishes him as "Domhnall of Ard-Macha," and adds that he was the son of Muirchertach of the Leather Cloaks, son of Niall Glundubh. A quatrain in Irish, in praise of Domhnall's prowess, quoted as from Mac Coissi, is written on lower marg., fol. 52a, in A.

which fell the King of Leinster, i.e., Ugaire son of Tuathal, and many others. A victory by the Airghialla over the Cinel-Conaill, in which fell Niall Ua Canannain, and many others. Corcach-mor, of Munster, was destroyed by fire. Lis-mor-Mochuta was plundered and burned.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 978 (alias 979). Muirenn, daughter of [978.] Congalach, comarb of Brigit,<sup>1</sup> rested. Lethlabhar Ua Fiachna, King of Dal-Araidhe, was treacherously killed. Conchobar,<sup>2</sup> son of Finn, King of Ui-Failghi, died. Airechtach Ua Carain, the most learned of Ireland, rested in peace.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 979 (alias 980). The battle of Temh- [979.] BIS. air [was gained] by Maelsechnaill,<sup>3</sup> son of Domnall, over the Foreigners of Ath-cliath and the Islands, where a great slaughter of the Foreigners was committed, and their power [banished] from Ireland; and in which Ragnall, son of Amlaimh, King of the Foreigners, and Conamhal son of a Foreign chief, and many others, were slain. Domhnall<sup>4</sup> Ua Neill, Arch-King of Ireland, died in Ard-Macha, after penitence. Mughron,<sup>5</sup> comarb of Colum-Cille both in Ireland and Alba, ended life happily. Rumann Ua Aedhacain, comarb of Tigernach,<sup>6</sup> [and] Murchad son of Riada, comarb of Coman,<sup>7</sup> 'paused.' Dubhgall son of Donnchad, royal-heir of Ailech, was killed by his kinsman, i.e. by<sup>8</sup> Muiredhach son of Flann. Muiredhach son of Flann was beheaded by his own people before an entire<sup>9</sup> month. Comaltan Ua Cleirigh, King of Ui-Fiachrach-Aidhne, died. Tigernan Ua Maeldoraidh, i.e. King of Cinel-Conaill, was slain by his own written on the lower marg., fol. 52 a in A., fixing the year of Mughron's death at 980 (the correct year), do not seem of sufficient merit to be printed.

<sup>4</sup> Tigernach.—Other authorities, as the Four Masters, the Chron. Scotorum, and the lists of Kings in the Book of Leinster, write the name Echtigern, which is apparently the proper form. The Ann. F. M., at A.D. 951, record the death of an Echtigern, Lord of Ui-Cennselaigh, who was probably the father of Bruatar.

Kal. Jan. A.D. 980 (alias 981). Domhnall Ua h-Aitidh,<sup>2</sup> King of Ui-Echach, and Loingsech son of Fogartach, King of Ui-Niallain, fell by one another. Cleirichen son of Donngal, comarb of Fechin,<sup>3</sup> Eoghan Ua Cadhain, comarb of Brenaind, [and] Sinach son of Murthuilen, comarb of Comghall, 'fell asleep' in Christ. Unusual abundance of acorns in this year. [980.]

Kal. Jan. A.D. 981 (alias 982). Bruatar son of Tigernach,<sup>4</sup> King of the Ui-Cennselaigh, died. Archu,<sup>5</sup> son of Niall, was treacherously killed by the sons of Ardgar. Ahdh Ua Dubhda, King of the North of Connaught, died a quiet death. Plundering of Cill-dara by Imhar of Port-Lairge.<sup>6</sup> [981.]

Kal. Jan. A.D. 982 (alias 983). Cormac son of Maelciarain, comarb of Mochuta,<sup>7</sup> Muiredach son of Muirecan, vice-abbot of Ard-Macha, died. A battle-rout by Maelsechnaill son of Domnall, and by Glun-iairn son of Amlaimh, over Domnall Cloen, King of Leinster (and over Imhar<sup>8</sup> of Port-Lairge<sup>6</sup>), where a great many perished<sup>9</sup> by drowning and killing, including Gilla-Patraic, son of Imhar, and others. <sup>6</sup> Port-Lairge.—The old name of Waterford.

<sup>7</sup> Comarb of Mochuta; i.e. abbot, or bishop, of Lismore, co. Waterford. But, for "Mochuta," the Four Mast. have "Mochta," which would make Cormac abbot of Louth.

At the year 1023, however, the F. Masters notice the death, at Clonmacnoise, of an Erard MacCoisse, "chief chronicler" of the Irish. It is probable that Airard MacCoissi the "chief poet," and Erard MacCoisse the "chief chronicler" were one and the same person, as the

<sup>2</sup> Comarb of Finnen and Mocholmoc; i.e. Abbot of Cluain-Iraird (now Clonard), in Meath, of which Finnen was the founder, and Mocholmoc one of the earlier abbots. The obit of Mocholmoc is given at the year 653 supra, where his name is written Colman. The expansion of the name into Mocholmoc (=mo-Cholum-oc) arose from the habit of putting the devotional prefix mo ("my") before, and adding the adjective oc ("young") after, the simple name of a saint, in token of affectionate regard.

<sup>13</sup> Gailenga of Corran.—The Gailenga, who gave name to the district now known as the barony of Gallen, co. Mayo, were descended from Cormac Gaileng, great grandson of Oilill Oluim, King of Munster in the 2nd century. The baronies of Corran and Leyny, in the co. Sligo, were also inhabited by the same stock.

For an account of this important battle, see Todd's War of the Gaedhil, &c., p. 110; and the Introduction to the same work, p. cxliv., note <sup>3</sup>, where a most valuable note on the topography of the district, contributed by Rev. J. F. Shearman, is printed.

<sup>4</sup> Alias 1000.—The alias reading is added, as usual, in a later hand. A marginal note in orig. hand in A. (and also in B.) has, in Irish characters, Dalach, King of Airghialla, was slain by Ua Ruairc. The plundering of Ui-Echach<sup>1</sup> by Aedh, son of Domnall, who brought a great spoil of cows therefrom. A hosting by Brian, King of Caisel, to Glenn-Mama,<sup>2</sup> where the Foreigners of Ath-cliath, together with the Leinstermen, came to attack him; but they were routed, and put to slaughter, including Aralt son of Amlaimh, and Culen son of Etigen,<sup>3</sup> and other chiefs of the Foreigners. Brian went afterwards into Ath-cliath; and Ath-cliath was pillaged by him.

A bissextile<sup>5</sup> and embolism<sup>6</sup> in this year. Domnall Ua Domnallain, King of Derlas,<sup>6</sup> was killed by Aedh Ua Neill. Imhar, King of Port-Lairge,<sup>7</sup> died. The Foreigners again in Ath-cliath, and in submission to Brian. Flaithbertach Ua Canannain, King of Cinel-Conaill, was slain by his own people. Aedh Ua Ciardha was blinded. A hosting by Brian to Ferta-Nimhe<sup>8</sup> in Magh-Bregh. The Foreigners and Leinstermen with a predatory party of cavalry went before them; but Mael-sechlainn met them, and they were nearly all slain. Brian came back, without battle or plunder, through the power of the Lord.

O'Donovan conjectures that the name may be represented by Feartagh, in the parish of Moynalty, barony of Lower Kells, co. Meath; but without any apparent authority.

<sup>1</sup> Son of Eochaidh.—Mac Eocháda. With this the entry in Ann. Four M. (at 1001) agrees. But in the Book of Leinster (p. 42, col. 4), the name of Maelmuire's father is given as "Eochacan." See Ware's Works (Harris's ed.), Vol. I., p. 49; and Todd's St. Patrick, p. 182.

<sup>2</sup> Both-Domnaigh.—Bodoney, in Glenelly, in the barony of Strabane Upper, county of Tyrone. The original is interlined in A. and B. But the interlineation in B. would convey to the reader the idea that the locality was intended to be identified with the name of Maelmuire son of Eochaidh (rectè Eochacán); which would be wrong. See at the year 1004 infra, where Muirecan is stated to have been "from (or of) Both-Domnaigh."

<sup>3</sup> Comarb of Fechin; i.e. abbot of Fore, co. Westmeath. In M'Geoghegan's Transl. of the Annals of Clonmacnoise, at A.D. 994 (=1001), it is stated that Maelpoil was also "bushopp of Clonvicknose."

Eochaidh<sup>1</sup>) in the place of Muirecan (of Both-domnaigh<sup>2</sup>). Fergal son of Conang, King of Ailech, died. Niall Ua Ruairc was slain by the Cinel-Eoghain and [Cinel]-Conaill. Maelpoil, comarb of Fechin,<sup>3</sup> died. A preying expedition by the men of Munster to the south of Midhe, when Oengus son of Carrach<sup>4</sup> met them, and they left the spoils, and a slaughter of heads besides. The causeway of Ath-Luain<sup>5</sup> [was made] by Maelsechlainn, and by Cathal son of Conchobar.

Trenfer son of Celechan, vice-abbot<sup>7</sup> of Ard-Macha, was slain by Macleighbinn son of Cairell, King of Fernmhagh. The devastation of Connaught by Aedh,<sup>6</sup> son of Domnall. Merlechan, King of Gailenga, and Brotud son of Diarmait, were slain by Maelsechlainn. Colum, herenagh of Imlech-Ibhair, [and] Cathalan, herenagh of Daiminis, died. Cernachan son of Fland, King of Luighne,<sup>8</sup> went on a preying expedition into Fernmagh,<sup>9</sup> when he killed Muirchertach Ua Ciardha, royal heir of Cairpre. Inaccurately written na (gen. pl. of the definite article), in A. and B.; which probably misled the translator in Clar. 49 into rendering "Ua Traightech" by "of the feet." But Ua Traightech was a family name in Clare. O'Connor is, in this case, more than unusually amusing in his translation, for he renders the proper name "Acher na (recte Ua) Traig tech" by "Historicorum dux precipuus."

<sup>6</sup> Ferna-mor.—The "Great Alder tree." Ferns, in the county of Wexford, which was founded by St. Maedoc (or St. Mogue, as the name is phonetically written).

<sup>7</sup> Successor of Cainnech; i.e. abbot of Achadh-bó (Aghaboe), in the Queen's County. St. Cainnech (or Canice) was also founder of the monastery of Drumachose, in the present barony of Keenaght, co. Londonderry. But Saint Canice's successors in Drumachose are usually styled "successors (comarbs) of Cainnech in Cianachta," in the Irish Annals.

Castlereagh. A marg. note in A., in orig. hand, states that the battle was fought on the 18th of the Kalends of October [14th Sept.], being the fifth day of the week [i.e. Thursday], which would agree with the year 1003.

the Ulidians and Cinel-Eoghain, where the Ulidians were defeated, and Eochaid, son of Ardgar, King of Ulidia, and Dubhtuinne his brother, and his two sons, viz., Cuduiligh and Domnall, were slain, and a havoc was made of the army besides, between good and bad, viz., Gairbhith, King of Ui-Echach, and Gilla Patraic son of Tomaltach, and Cumuscach son of Flathroe, and Dubhslanga son of Aedh, and Cathalan son of Etroch, and Conene son of Muirchertach, and the elect of the Ulidians besides. And the fighting extended to Dun-Echdach,<sup>1</sup> and to Druim-bó.<sup>2</sup> There also fell there Aedh, son of Domnall Ua Neill, King of Ailech, (and others,<sup>3</sup> in the 29th year of his age, and the 10th year of [his] reign). But the Cinel-Eoghain say that he was killed by themselves. Donnchad Ua Loingsigh, King of Dal-Araidhe, was treacherously killed by the Cinel-Eoghain. A hosting by Brian to Traig-Eothaile,<sup>4</sup> to go round [the North of Ireland]; but the Cinel-Eoghain<sup>5</sup> prevented him. Two Ua Canannains were slain by Ua Maeldoraidh. Dubhslane Ua Lorcaín, herenagh of Imlech-Ibhair,<sup>6</sup> rested. Malsechlainn, King of Temhair, was thrown from his horse, so that he was in danger of death.

<sup>4</sup> Of Both-Domnaigh.—The clause o boit domnaic, which is added as a gloss, in a later hand in A., is in the marg. in B., where the more correct form, as above given, is written. See above, under A.D. 1000.

<sup>6</sup> Cinaedh son of Dubh.—Or Kenneth, son of Duff (sl. 966 supra), as he is called in Scotch historical writings. See Skene's Chron. Picts and Scots, Introd., pp. cxliii.—cxlvi.

<sup>8</sup> Flaithbertach.—i.e. Flaithbertach Ua Neill (or O'Neill), King of Ailech, referred to in the 2nd entry preceding, in connexion with the plundering of Leth-Cathail [Lecale, co. Down], and the killing of its King, Aedh son of Tomaltach.

herenagh of Mainistir,<sup>1</sup> [rested] in Christ. Gilla-Comghaill, King of Ulidia,<sup>2</sup> was killed by Maelruanaigh, his own brother. Aedh, son of Tomaltach, was killed by Flaithbertach Ua Neill, who plundered Leth-Cathail.<sup>3</sup> Muirecan (of Both-Domnaigh<sup>4</sup>), comarb of Patrick, in the 72nd year of his age, [and] Aedh of Treoit,<sup>5</sup> a man eminent in knowledge and piety, ended life in Ard-Macha. A battle amongst the men of Alba themselves, in which the King of Alba, i.e. Cinaedh son of Dubh,<sup>6</sup> was slain. An overthrow of the Ulidians and Ui-Echach, at Loch-Bricrenn,<sup>7</sup> by Flaithbertach,<sup>8</sup> wherein fell Artan, royal heir of Ui-Echach. A hosting by Brian, accompanied by the princes of Ireland, to Ard-Macha, when he left 22 ounces of gold on Patrick's altar. He came back bringing with him the hostages of Ireland.

<sup>11</sup> Ua Dubhtai. — This seems to be a mistake for Ua Dubhdai (O'Dowda). According to the Ann. Four Mast., and the Chron. Scotorum, Maelruanaidh Ua Dubhdai was King of the Ui-Fiachrach of Muirisc, whose territory is now represented by the barony of Tireragh (Tir Fiachrach), in the co. Sligo. See O'Donovan's Hy-Fiachrach, p. 350.

<sup>12</sup> Son. — mac, A. B. has .h. for ua, grandson, or descendant.

"Strange [to see] Sliabh-Cua without a troop,

Foreigners not rowing about . . .
A lone woman going over Luachair, Cows without a herd, lowing."

It is added that this happy condition was "in tempore Briani." The allusion to a lone woman going over Luachair [Sliabh-Luachra, in Munster] seems connected with the tradition on which Moore founded his charming song "Rich and Rare."

crossing) of Camus; a ford on the River Bann, near the old church of Camus-Macosquin. See Reeves's Down and Connor, pp. 342, 388.

Mael-na-mbo<sup>4</sup> (i.e. King of Ui-Ceinnselaigh), was slain by his own people. Gilla-Comghaill, son of Ardghar, son of Madadhan, King of Ulidia, was killed by his brother,<sup>5</sup> i.e., by Maelruanaidh son of Ardghar.

Kal. Jan. Wednesd., m, 9. A.D. 1006 (alias 1007). [1006.] Maelruanaidh, son of Ardghar, was killed by Matadhan son of Domnall. Cellach Ua Menngoran, herenagh of Corcach,<sup>6</sup> rested. Trenfher<sup>7</sup> Ua Baighellan, King of Dartraighi,<sup>8</sup> was killed by the Cinel-Conaill on Loch-Eirne. Matadhan son of Domnall, King of Ulidia, was killed by the Torc,<sup>9</sup> in St. Bridget's church, in the middle of Dun-da-lethglas.<sup>10</sup> Cuchonnacht son of Dunadach, chieftain of Sil-Anmchada,<sup>11</sup> was treacherously slain by Brian.<sup>12</sup> A hosting by Flaithbertach Ua Neill into Ulidia,

<sup>8</sup> Dartraighi. — Or Dartraighi-Coininse, the present barony of Dartry, in the county of Monaghan, of which the Ui-Baighellain (or O'Boylans) were chiefs.

Anmchad; the tribe name of that powerful branch of the Ui-Maine of Connaught whose descendants assumed the patronymic of O'Madden (now Madden, without the O'), and whose patrimony embraced the present barony of Longford, in the county of Galway, and the parish of Lusmagh, in the barony of Garrycastle, in the King's County, on the east side of the river Shannon.

<sup>12</sup> Brian; i.e. Brian Borumha. According to the Ann. Four Mast. (1006), and the Chron. Scotorum (1005), the slayer of Cuchonnacht was Murchadh, son of Brian, which agrees with a marginal note in a later hand in A.

<sup>2</sup> Dun-droma; i.e. the "Fort of the Ridge (or Hill)." This name would be Anglicised "Dundrum." There is a townland of Dundrum in the parish of Keady, in the barony and county of Armagh; but it is some miles to the south of the town of Armagh, and not in the territory of Cinel-Eoghain. It may, however, be the place referred to. This entry is very imperfectly given in O'Connor's version of this Chronicle.

The Torc,<sup>5</sup> King of Ulidia, was killed by Muiredach son of Matadhan, in revenge of his father,<sup>6</sup> through the power of God and Patrick. Muiredach, son of Crichan, resigned the successorship of Colum-Cille for God.<sup>7</sup> Renewal of the Fair of Tailltiu<sup>8</sup> by Maelsechnaill. Ferdomnach<sup>9</sup> [was installed] in the successorship of Colum-Cille, by the counsel of the men of Ireland, in that Fair. The great Gospel<sup>10</sup> of Colum-Cille was wickedly stolen<sup>11</sup> in the night out of the western sacristy of the great stone-church of Cenannas—the chief relic of the western world, on account of its ornamental cover. The same Gospel was found after twenty [nights<sup>12</sup>] and two months, its gold having been taken off it, and a sod over it. Domnall son of Dubhtuinne, King of Ulidia, was killed by Muiredach son of Matadhan, and by Uargaeth of Sliabh-Fuait.

(and more correctly) Ui-Tortain, or "descendants of Tortan," who was descended in the fourth generation from Colla Dachrioch, one of the three ancestors of the Airghialla. The Ui-Dorthainn were seated near Ardbraccan, in the present county of Meath. See O'Donovan's ed. of Leabhar na g-ceart, p. 151. This entry is not given in the Ann. Four Mast.

<sup>6</sup> Trian-mor.—"Trian-mor" means the "great third." According to Dr. Reeves, that portion of ancient Armagh outside the Rath (or rampart) was divided into three divisions, one of which, Trian-mor, included the Cremthann (alias abbot of Tir-da-glas),<sup>1</sup> [and] Maelmuire, successor of Cainech,<sup>2</sup> 'fell asleep' in Christ. Muiredach son of Matadhan, royal heir of Ulidia, was killed by his own people. Fachtna, successor of Finnia of Cluain-Iraird, rested. Great frost and snow from the 6th of the Ides<sup>3</sup> of January to Easter.

Kal. Jan. Saturd.; m. 1. A.D. 1008 (alias 1009). A [1008] bis. great retaliatory depredation by Malsechlainn on the Leinstermen. Cathal son of Carlus, comarb of Cainech,<sup>2</sup> [and] Maelmuire Ua Uchtain, comarb of Cenannas,<sup>4</sup> died. Maelan (i.e. "of the great spear"), King of the Ui-Dorthainn,<sup>5</sup> was killed by the Cinel-Eoghain in Ard-Macha, in the middle of Trian-mor,<sup>6</sup> through an uprising of the two armies. Donnchad Ua Ceile was blinded by Flaithbertach,<sup>7</sup> in Inis-Eoghain; and he was killed afterwards. A victory over the Connaughtmen by the men of Breifni.<sup>8</sup> A victory also by the Connaughtmen over the men of Breifni. A preying expedition by Flaithbertach Ua Neill to the men of Bregha, when he took a great cattle spoil. Maelmordha, King of Leinster, was thrown from his horse, so that his leg was broken. Dubhchablaigh, daughter of the King of Connaught,<sup>9</sup> i.e., the wife of Brian,<sup>10</sup> son of Cennetigh, died. The oratory of Ard-Macha was roofed with lead in this year. Clothna son of Aengus, chief poet of Ireland, died.

space now occupied by "Irish-street, Callan-street, and the western region of the town." See Ancient Churches of Armagh; Lusk, 1860; pp. 19-20.

<sup>3</sup> Maelsuthain.—O'Curry was under the impression that this Maelsuthain was the tutor and "soul-friend" (anmchara) of Brian Borumha (MS. Materials, p. 76), although the obit of "Maelsuthain, anmchara of Brian," is entered in the Ann. Four Mast. at the year 1031, where no mention is made of any connexion of this latter Maelsuthain with the Eoghanacht of Loch-Lein, a territory comprising Killarney and an extensive district around it, the patrimony of the older branch of the O'Donoghoe family. It may be added that the name of Maelsuthain does not appear in the ordinary Irish pedigrees of the O'Donoghoes of Loch-Lein. Great interest attaches to the history of the Maelsuthain who was anmchara of Brian Borumha, and who, in a note written by him in the Book of Armagh, fol. 16 b b., Latinizes his name calvus perennis, and states that the note was written by him "in conspectu Briani imperatoris Scotorum."

A hot summer, a fruitful autumn. Scanlan Ua Dungalain, abbot of Dun-lethglaise, was profaned in Dun;<sup>9</sup> and he was brought out and blinded in Finnabhair, by Niall<sup>10</sup> son of Dubhtuinne. <sup>8</sup> Sliabh-Fuaid.—The old name of the Fewes Mountains, near Newtown-hamilton, in the barony of Upper Fewes, in the south-west of the co. Armagh.

<sup>10</sup> Niall.—He was King of Ulidia for 4 years and 6 months, according to the list of Kings of that province in the Book of Leinster, p. 40, col. 4. His death is recorded at the year 1016 infra.

<sup>11</sup> Tadhg. — King of Connaught, and known as Tadhg an eich gíl, or "Tadhg of the White Steed." His death is noticed at the year 1030. He was the first who assumed the surname "O'Conchobair (or O'Conor)."

<sup>13</sup> Comarb of Tigernach; i.e. abbot of Cluain-eois (Clones), in the county Monaghan. The original of the parenthetic clause which follows is interlined in a later hand in A., and in the original hand in B.

<sup>3</sup> Ua Domhnaill; or O'Donnell. This is the first notice of the surname O'Donnell to be found in the Irish Annals. The Domnall (or Donnell) from whom the name is derived was son of Eignechan (ob. 905 supra), who was King of Cinel-Conaill. See O'Donovan's Four Mast., A.D. 1010, note a.

Flaithbertach Ua Neill, (King of Oilech, with the warriors of the Fochla,<sup>2</sup> and Murchad son of Brian, with the men of Munster and Leinster, and the Ui-Neill of the South), ravaged Cinel-Conaill, and carried off 300 captives, and many cows. Maelruanaidh Ua Domnaill,<sup>3</sup> King of Cinel-Lughdach,<sup>4</sup> was slain by the men of Magh-Itha; Oengus Ua Lapain, King of Cinel-Enna,<sup>5</sup> by the Cinel-Eoghain of the Island.<sup>6</sup> Aedh son of Mathgamain, royal-heir of Caisel, died. A hosting by Flaithbertach Ua Neill to Dun-Echdach,<sup>7</sup> when he burned the dun, and broke down the town, and brought pledges from Niall son of Dubhtuinne. A hosting by Brian to Magh-Corainn, when he brought with him the King of Cinel-Conaill, i.e. Maelruanaidh Ua Maeldoraidh, in submission, to Cenn-coradh.<sup>8</sup> Dalach of Disert-Tola, comarb of Fechin and of Tola, died at a good old age. <sup>8</sup> Cenn-coradh.—"The Head of the Weir." The residence of Brian Borumha at Killaloe. The original of this entry and the one succeeding it is written in a space which appears to have been left blank by the original scribe in A. They form part of the text in B.

<sup>9</sup> Enach-duibh.—This name would now be written Annaduff, or Annagh-duff. The place referred to was probably Annaduff, in the co. Leitrim or Annaghduff. co. Cavan.

A hosting by Flaithbertach again into Cinel-Conaill until he reached Druim-cliaibh<sup>3</sup> and Traig-Eothaili,<sup>4</sup> when they killed the son of Gillapatraic son of Fergal, i.e. Niall; and they inflicted a defeat on Maelruanaidh Ua Maeldoraidh; but no one was lost there. A hosting meanwhile by Maelsechlainn, in their absence, into Tir-Eoghain, to Magh-dagabhul,<sup>5</sup> when his plundering parties burned Telach-óc,<sup>6</sup> and took a spoil. Another hosting by Flaithbertach as far as Ard-Ulad,<sup>7</sup> when he plundered the Ard, and brought off the greatest spoils that a King had ever borne, between prisoners and cattle, though they are not reckoned. A hosting by Brian into Magh-Muirtheimne; and he gave full freedom to Patrick's churches on that hosting. A victory<sup>8</sup> over Niall son of Dubhtuinne, by Niall son of Eochaid, in which fell Muirchertach son of Artan, royal heir of Ui-Echach; and the son of Eochaid was afterwards made King. <sup>1</sup> Finnfaidhech.—See note <sup>10</sup>, p. 465.

<sup>8</sup> Ed.—There is apparently some error here. The name of the place in the Ann. Four Mast., is "Maighen-attaed." But this has not been identified.

<sup>9</sup> Tiaga.—Tiaga is the plural of tiag, a satchel or bag, and the same as Lat. theca. It may possibly be a loan word from the Latin. The entry is not very intelligible. The writer may have intended to say that each plough was drawn by Foreigners, whilst two Foreigners in sacks were drawn after the plough, to do the work of a harrow. The Translator in Clar. 49 states that "the Gentiles" were made to "plough by theire bodies, and two of them by their revenge of the profanation of the 'Finnfaidhech'¹ of Patrick, and of the breaking of Bachal-Patraic,² by the advice³ of Maelduire⁴ and of Brian. A great depredation by Ualgarg Ua Ciardha, King of Cairpre,⁵ and the son of Niall Ua Ruairc, in Gailenga;⁶ but a few good men of Maelsechlainn's household, who were after drinking then and were⁷ intoxicated, met them and gave them battle through pride, where Donnchad son of Donnchad Finn, royal heir of Temhair, and Cernachan son of Flann, King of Luighne, and Senan Ua Leochain, King of Gailenga, and many others, were slain. Maelsechlainn afterwards overtook them, when the preys were left with him, and Ualgarg Ua Ciardha, King of Cairpre, and several others, were slain by him. A hosting by Flaithbertach, King of Ailech, as far as Ed³ by the side of Cenannas, when Maelsechlainn abandoned the hill to him. Gilla-Mochonna son of Fogartach, King of the south of Bregha, died in his sleep in Maelsechlainn's house, after drinking. By him the Foreigners were yoked to the plough, and two Foreigners harrowing from their *tiaga*⁹ after them. A victory over the men of Midhe, at the Draighnen,¹⁰ by Foreigners and Leinstermen; 150 persons were killed, including Flann son of Maelsechlainn. A hosting by Brian to Ath-in-chairthinn,¹¹ where he remained three months.¹² A great depredation tayles harrowing after them." O'Connor's attempt at rendering this entry is even worse.

¹⁰ Draighnen. — The "thorny place." Now Drinan in the parish of Kinsaley, barony of Coolock, co. Dublin. This battle is referred to in a stanza (not in B.), written in the lower margin of fol. 54b in A., as follows:—

Ḥimalotar luan for peēt,
 Fḡr Mīōe fḡr forūmteēt;
 Datar failti Gaill no clop, Iccon draighnen don topop.

"Not well went they on Monday, on an expedition—

The men of Meath—towards advancing;

The Foreigners, it was heard, were glad

At the Drinan, because of the trip."

¹¹ Ath-in-chairthinn.—The "ford of the mountain ash" (or "quicken-tree"). Strangely translated "Vadum Officinæ ferrariæ" by O'Connor. Not identified.

<sup>5</sup> Inis-gaill-duibh. — The "Island of the black Foreigner." Not identified. O'Donovan thought that it was another name for the King's Island, at Limerick.

<sup>6</sup> Inis-locha-Sainglenn. — The "Island of Loch-Sainglenn." Loch-Sainglenn is not now known; but the name seems partly preserved in that of Singland, a large townland in the vicinity of Limerick. See Todd's War of the Gaedhil, &c., Introd., cxxi., note<sup>3</sup>.

A slaughter of Foreigners by Cathal,<sup>2</sup> son of Donnchad, son of Dubhdabairenn, in which fell Amlaibh son of Sitriuc, i.e. son of the King of the Foreigners, and Mathgamain,<sup>3</sup> son of Dubhgilla,<sup>3</sup> son of Amlaibh, and others. A victory over the Connaughtmen by Ua Maeldoraidh, in which fell Domnall son of Cathal (i.e. the Cat), royal heir of Connaught. Muirchertach, son of Aedh Ua Neill, was slain by the Dal-Riata. Numerous fortresses were constructed by Brian, viz., Cathair-Cinn-coradh,<sup>4</sup> and Inis-gaill-duibh,<sup>5</sup> and Inis-locha-Sainglenn.<sup>6</sup> The Leinstermen and Foreigners made war against Brian; and the Munstermen and Brian encamped at Sliabh-Mairci, and plundered Leinster to Ath-cliath. [Flann,<sup>7</sup> son of] Maelsechlainn was slain by the Foreigners of Ath-cliath.

Kal. Jan. Frid.; m. 26. A.D. 1014. This is the eighth year of the Cycle of Nineteen; and this is the 582nd year since the coming of St. Patrick to baptise the Scoti. The festival of Gregory<sup>8</sup> was before Shrove-tide, and Little Easter<sup>9</sup> in summer, in this year; which had not been heard of from ancient times. A hosting by Brian, son of Cenneidigh, son of Lorcan, King of Ireland, and by Maelsechlainn son <sup>7</sup> Flann.—This name having been omitted in the orig. MSS., evidently through an oversight, has been supplied on the authority of the Chron. Scotorum, and Ann. Four Mast. The name of Maelsechlainn, Flann's father, is written in the genit. form, Mael-sechlainn in A. and B., which shows that some word or name had been omitted before it. The Translator in Clar. 49 writes "Flann, son of Maelsechlainn, by Genties of Dublin;" which would tend to prove that the original from which he made his version was neither of the MSS. A. and B.

Fol. 55ab.

<sup>1</sup> Battle.—The famous battle of Clontarf, which was fought on Good Friday, in the year 1014; a very curious account of which is contained in the Annals of Loch-Cé. But the fullest description of the battle is given in Todd's ed. of the War of the Gaedhil with the Gaill, pp. 151–211. See the Introd. to the work, pp. xxvi.–xxvii., and clxvii., seq. O'Donovan has illustrated the narrative of the battle, given by the Four Masters (at 1013=1014), with many useful notes.

<sup>2</sup> Fortuatha.—This name signifies "border territories." See note 7, p. 157 supra, and O'Donovan's ed. of Leabhar na g-ceart, 207, note d, where

of Domnall, King of Temhair, to Ath-cliath. All the Leinstermen were assembled before them, and the Foreigners of Ath-cliath, and an equal number of the Foreigners of Lochlann along with them, viz., 1,000 mail-clad men. A valorous battle<sup>1</sup> was fought between them, for which no likeness has been found. The Foreigners and the Leinstermen were defeated at first, however, so that they were entirely annihilated. In this battle there fell of the hostile band of the Foreigners, Maelmordha son of Murchad, King of Leinster, and Domnall son of Fergal, King of the Fortuatha.<sup>2</sup> But of the Foreigners there fell Dubhgall son of Amlaimh; Siucraidh son of Lodur, Earl of Insi-Örc,<sup>3</sup> and Gillaciarain son of Glun-iairnn, royal heir of the Foreigners, and Oittir Dubh, and Suartgair, and Donnchad grandson of Erulb, and Grisine, and Luimne, and Amlaimh son of Lagmann, and Brotor (who slew Brian),<sup>4</sup> i.e., chieftain of the Danish fleet, and 6,000 persons, between killing and drowning. There fell of the Gaedhil, in the mutual wounding, Brian son of Cenneidigh, arch-king of the Gaedhil of Ireland, and of the Foreigners and Britons, the Augustus of all the north-west of Europe, and his son, i.e. Murchad, and his [Murchad's] son, i.e. Toirdhelbhach, and Conaing, son of Donnucuan,<sup>5</sup> son of Cenneidigh, royal heir of Munster, and Mothla,<sup>6</sup> son of Domnall, son of Faelan, King of the Deisi-Mumhan,<sup>7</sup> Eocho son of Dunadhach,<sup>8</sup> and Niall Ua ventures, succeeded in subduing that part of Munster comprising nearly the whole of the present county of Waterford, with (subsequently) adjacent parts of the co. Tipperary. The name of "Deisi" is still preserved in the barony names Decies Within, and Decies Without, co. Waterford. See O'Flaherty's Ogygia, part III., ch. 69.

<sup>1</sup> Tadhg Ua Cellaigh.—This entry is most corruptly given in A. and B., in which the text is da piġ .h. Maine .h. Ceallaiġ, "two Kings of Ui-Maine, Ui-Cellaigh." But there were not two Kings of Hymany at the time. It would appear that the first word of the entry, da, (before which a blank has been left in A. and B.), is a mistake for Taṛġ, and that the name .h. Ceallaiġ has been wrongly transposed. Tadhg Ua Cellaigh (or O'Kelly) is mentioned in all other Irish Chronicles as having fallen in the battle of Clontarf, fighting on the side of Brian; for which reason he is styled in the O'Kelly pedigrees Tadhg catha Briain, i.e. "Tadhg of the battle of Brian." See O'Donovan's Hy-Many, p. 99.

<sup>6</sup> Corco-Baiscinn.—This was the tribe-name of the descendants of Cairbre Baschaoim; and also the name of their territory, which anciently com-

Cuinn, and [Cuduiligh] son of Cenneidigh—Brian's three companions; Tadhg Ua Cellaigh,<sup>1</sup> King of Ui-Maine; and Maelruanaidh Ua hEidhinn, King of Aidhne;<sup>2</sup> and Geibhennach Ua Dubhagain,<sup>3</sup> King of Fera-Maighe<sup>4</sup>; and Mac-Beathadh, son of Muiredach Cloen, King of Ciarraidhe-luachra,<sup>5</sup> and Domnall, son of Diarmaid, King of Corca-Baiscinn;<sup>6</sup> and Scannlan son of Cathal, King of the Eoghanacht of Loch-Lein; and Domnall, son of Emhin, son of Cainnech, great steward of Mar in Alba, and a great many other nobles. Maelmuire (son of Eochaidh<sup>7</sup>), comarb of Patrick, went, moreover, with seniors and with relics to Sord-Choluim-Cille, and carried thence the body of Brian, King of Ireland, and the body of his son Murchad, and the head of Conaing,<sup>8</sup> and the head of Mothla, and interred them in Ard-Macha, in a new tomb. Twelve nights, moreover, were the congregation of Patrick waking the bodies, in honour of the dead king. Dunlang, son of Tuathal, King of Leinster, died. A battle between Cian,<sup>9</sup> son of Maelmhuidh, and Domnall<sup>10</sup> son of Dubhdabairenn, in which Cian, and Cathal, and Raghallach—three sons of Maelmhuidh, were killed, and a slaughter about them. Cathal, son of prised the present baronies of Clonderalaw, Moyarta, and Ibrickan, in the west of the county of Clare. O'Donovan states that the Domnall referred to in this entry was the ancestor of the family of O'Domhnaill, or O'Donnell, of Clonderalaw. See Ann. Four Mast., A.D. 1013, note q.

<sup>7</sup> Son of Eochaidh.—The original of this clause is added by way of gloss in A. and B. In the oldest Irish list of the comarbs of Patrick (i.e. bishops or abbots of Armagh), namely, that contained in the Book of Leinster, p. 42, Maelmuire is described as "son of Eochacan."

<sup>9</sup> Cian.—Ancestor of the O'Mahonys of Ui-Echach (or Iveagh) of Munster, now represented by the O'Mahonys of Cork and Kerry, amongst whom the Christian name Cian (or Kean) is still a favourite name.

<sup>10</sup> Domnall.—He was the ancestor of an old and extinct branch of the O'Donoghoe family, the head of which was called O'Donoghoe Mór, and of the branch known as the "O'Donoghoes of the Glen."

<sup>3</sup> Magh-nAi.—A large and fertile plain in the centre of the present county of Roscommon, lying between the towns of Elphin and Roscommon, Castlereagh and Strokestown. It was otherwise called Machaire Chonnacht. The limits of Magh-nAi, are described from local tradition, by O’Donovan, in a note to the Ann. Four Mast., A.D. 1189, note h.

<sup>4</sup> Although not on that occasion.—O’Conor erroneously renders the original, licet non in eadem vice, by “prope centum numero, in eadem vice.” The explanation of this apparent enigma is furnished by an entry under the year 1012, recording the defeat of the Connaughtmen by Ua Maeldoraidh, and the killing of Domnall son of Cathal, royal heir of Connaught. See Chron. Scotorum (ed. Hennessy), p. 250, note <sup>1</sup>.

Domnall, King of Ui-Echach,<sup>1</sup> was slain by Donnchad son of Brian. A victory by Tadhg, son of Brian, over Donnchad, son of Brian, in which Ruaidhri Ua Donnacain, King of Aradh,<sup>2</sup> was slain. A hosting by Ua Maeldoraidh and Ua Ruairc into Magh-nAi,<sup>3</sup> when they killed Domnall, son of Cathal, and ravaged the plain; and they carried off the hostages of Connaught, although not on that occasion.<sup>4</sup> A victory over the Dal-Araidhe by the Ulidians, when a great many were slain. Flaithbertach son of Domnall, comarb of Ciaran<sup>5</sup> and Finnen,<sup>5</sup> and Ronan comarb of Fechin,<sup>6</sup> and Conn Ua Digraidh,<sup>7</sup> 'fell asleep' in Christ. Numerous, truly, are the events of this year.

Kal. Jan. Saturd.; m. 7.<sup>8</sup> A.D. 1015. Domnall, son of Dubhdabairenn, was killed by Donnchad, son of Brian, in battle. Flaithbertach Ua Neill came into Midhe, to aid Maelsechlainn. Maelsechlainn went afterwards on a hosting into Leinster, when he plundered the Leinstermen; and he brought away a great prey of cattle, and the hostages of Leinster. Niall, son of Fergal,<sup>9</sup> son of Conaing, was slain by his own people. Muircertach, son of Muiredach Ua Neill, was slain by the Ui-Tuirtre. Donnchad Ua Goaigh,<sup>10</sup> King of Cianachta,<sup>11</sup> was killed by Cinel-Eoghain. Muirchertach Ua Lorcaín, herenagh of Lothra; Cernach

See the final entry under the next year, where this entry is repeated, but in a very inaccurate form.

<sup>7</sup> Conn Ua Digraidh.—In the Ann. Four Mast. (A.D. 1013=1014), Conn Ua Digraidhe is stated to have been comarb, or successor, of Caeimhghin (St. Kevin); i.e. abbot of Glendalough. His name does not appear in Archdall's inaccurate list of the abbots of Glendalough.

<sup>8</sup> m. 7.—The age of the moon is written .iiii. (4) in A. and B., which is obviously a mistake for .viii., it not being always easy to distinguish between the Roman numerals u. (5) and ii. (2.)

<sup>10</sup> Donnchad Ua Goaigh.—According to O'Donovan, this name would be Anglicised "Donough O'Goey," or "Denis Gough." Ann. Four Mast., 1014, note g.

<sup>3</sup> Tadhg.—Better known to students of Irish history as Tadhg-an-eich-gil, or "Tadhg of the white steed." He was the son of Cathal, son of Conchobar (son of Tadhg), from whom the hereditary surname of O'Concho-bhair or O'Conor) has been derived, and whose obit is noticed above at the year 972. The Four Mast. state (1014=1015) that Tadhg killed Aedh, in revenge for his brother, Domnall son of Cathal, whose death is recorded under the preceding year.

known by this name in Magh-Ai, or the Plain of Connaught.

<sup>5</sup> Bachal-Isu.—The "Staff or (Crozier) of Jesus." The so-called 'translator' of a portion of this Chronicle, contained in the MS. Clar. 49, Brit. Museum, renders do faeraim na bacla lpu by "rescuing the crostafle of Jesus," which is wrong; the word faeraim (regarded by the translator as meaning "rescuing") signifying "protection." See O'Don. Suppl. to O'Reilly's Dict., v. poeraim. For some curious information regarding the Bachal-Isu, see O'Curry's MS. Materials, App., p. 600, sq.

son of Cathasach, herenagh of Dun-lethglaise; Niall son of Dercan, herenagh of Mungairid,<sup>1</sup> [and] Donngal Ua Caintéin, herenagh of Tir-da-glas,<sup>2</sup> 'fell asleep' in Christ. Aedh Ua Ruairc, King of Breifni, was treacherously killed by Tadhg,<sup>3</sup> King of Connaught, viz., at Loch-Neill,<sup>4</sup> in Magh-Ai, when under the protection of the Bachal-Isu;<sup>5</sup> and it was this [deed] that cut off sovereignty from his race, excepting only his son Aedh. Flaithbertach son of Domnall, comarb of Ciaran and Finnen, and of Cronan and Fechin,<sup>6</sup> rested.

Kal. Jan. Sund.; m. 18. A.D. 1016. Flannacan son [1016.] of Conaing, vice-herenagh of Ard-Macha, and Muirghes, herenagh of Lis-oiged,<sup>7</sup> 'fell asleep' in Christ. Eithne, daughter of Ua Suairt, comarb of Brigit,<sup>8</sup> [and] Diarmait Ua Mailtelcha, comarb of Comgall,<sup>9</sup> rested. Mac Liag,<sup>10</sup> chief poet of Ireland, died. A battle between the Ulidians and the Dal-Araidhe, when the Dal-Araidhe were defeated. There fell there Domnall Ua Loingsigh,<sup>11</sup> King of Dal-Araidhe, and Niall son of Dubhtuinne, and Conchobar Ua Domnallain, King of Ui-Tuirtre, and many<sup>12</sup> others. Niall son of Eochaidh, was victorious. The son of Muiredach son of Flann, King of Magh-Itha, was slain by his own people. Donncuan, son of Dunlang, where, instead of "[comarb] of Cronan and Fechin," the Chronicler correctly says "Ronan, comarb of Fechin." This entry is added in a later hand in A.

<sup>10</sup> Mac Liag.—Called Muirchertach Mac Liag in the Chron. Scotorum, A.D. 1014, and Ann. Four Mast, A.D. 1015. Said to have been the secretary of King Brian Borumha, a life of whom he is alleged to have written. For some account of Mac Liag's poetical writings, see O'Reilly's Irish Writers, pp. 70-72; Hardiman's Irish Minstrelsy, Vol. II., p. 361, and O'Curry's Manners and Customs, Vol. II., pp. 99, 116-143, and Vol. III., p. 153.

<sup>11</sup> Ui Loingsigh.—"Grandson (or descendant) of Loingsech." The Four Masters have "Mac Loingsigh" ("son of Loingsech"). The Chron. Scotorum and Annals of Loch Cé agree with the present chronicle.

King of Leinster, and Tadhg Ua Riain, King of Ui-Drona,<sup>1</sup> were slain by Donnchad, son of Gilla-Patraic, in the middle of Leth-glenn. Dunlethglaise was all burned. Cluain-mic-Nois and Cluain-ferta, and Cenannas, were burned. Airbhertach, son of Cosdobrain, herenagh of Ros-ailithir,<sup>2</sup> died. Peace in Ireland.

Kal. Jan. Tuesd.; m. 28. A.D. 1017. Oenghus, son [1017.] of Carrach-calma,<sup>3</sup> royal heir of Temhair, died. Ferghal son of Domnall, son of Conchobhar, royal heir of Ailech, was slain by the Cinel-Eoghain themselves. Flann Ua Beice, King of Ui-Meith, was slain by his own people. Cormac, son of Lorcan, King of Ui-Echach,<sup>4</sup> was killed by the Ui-Trena.<sup>5</sup> Donnchad, son of Donnchad Ua Conghalaigh, royal heir of Ireland, was killed by his own people. Muiredhach Ua Duibheoin,<sup>6</sup> King of Ui-Mic-Uais of Bregha,<sup>7</sup> was killed by Flaithbertach Ua Neill. A slaughter of Foreigners and Leinstermen in Odba,<sup>8</sup> by Maelsechlainn. Oengus son of Flann, herenagh of Lannleire,<sup>9</sup> Cormac Ua Mailmidhe, herenagh of Druim-rathe,<sup>10</sup> died. Gilla-Christ Ua Lorcain, King of Caille-Follamhain, was killed in Cenannas. Conn son of Conchobar, son of Eicnechan, died. Glenn-da-locha was burned for the most part.

<sup>2</sup> Ua Lorcain.—In the Annals of Tigernach and the Four Masters, the name is written "Ua Leochain," which is undoubtedly the proper form. The name "Ua Leochain" has been corrupted to "Loughan," and is now usually Anglicised "Duck" in the counties of Kildare and Meath; for the reason that loughan was regarded as the same as lachan the genit. of lacha, a duck.

<sup>3</sup> Saithni.—A tribe occupying a territory in the north of the present county of Dublin, co-extensive with the barony of Balrothery West. The family name was O'Cathasaigh (i.e. O'Casey, or Casey). See Dr. Reeves's valuable note regarding the limits of the territory, and its ancient possessors, in the Appendix to O'Donovan's ed. of O'Dugan's Topogr. Poem, note <sup>20</sup>. The Saithni were a branch of the Cianachta-Bregh, a Meath tribe, and may have given name to the townland and parish of Dunsany (Dun-Saithni?), in the adjoining barony of Skreen, co. Meath.

<sup>6</sup> Fera-Cell.—This was the name of O'Molloy's country in the King's County, which anciently comprised, besides the barony of Fircal (now known by the name of Eglish), the baronies of Ballycowan and Ballyboy.

Christ. Broen<sup>1</sup> son of Maelmordha, King of Leinster, was blinded in Ath-clíath, by Sitriuc son of Amlaimh. Oentrubh<sup>4</sup> was plundered by the Fera-Manach.<sup>5</sup> Domnall Ua Caindelbhain, King of Loeghaire, and Caismidhe, Malsechlainn's steward, were killed by the Fera-Cell<sup>6</sup> and the Eile,<sup>7</sup> in pursuit of a prey. The 'hairy star'<sup>8</sup> appeared this year, during the space of a fortnight, in Autumn time. Gillacolum, son of Muiredach Ua Maitrea, and Aedh Ua Erudhain, King of Ui-Bresail-Macha,<sup>9</sup> died.

Kal. Jan. Thursd.; m. 21. A.D. 1019. Alene, son of Ossene, King of Mughdorna, and Ossene Ua Cathasaigh, King of the Saithni,<sup>10</sup> were killed by the Gailenga. Cill-

See O'Donovan's ed. of O'Dugan's Topogr. Poem, App., note <sup>24</sup>.

<sup>7</sup> Eile.—A powerful tribe, whose name was derived from Eile, descended in the ninth generation, according to the Book of Leinster (p. 366, col. 8), from Cian, son of Oilill Cluim, King of Munster in the third century. The territory of this comprised the present baronies of Eliogarty and Ikerrin in the county of Tipperary, and the baronies of Ballybrit and Clonlisk, in the King's County. The three most prominent families of this tribe were the O'Meaghers of Ikerin (now apparently represented by Joseph Casimir O'Meagher of Dublin), the O'Fogartys and O'Carrolls.

<sup>8</sup> Hairy star. — petlu mongac. The appearance of this "hairy star," or comet, is not noticed in any of the other Irish Chronicles, with the exception of the Annals of Loch-Cé. See Chambers' Handbook of Descriptive Astronomy, p. 408 (3rd ed.); the author of which does not seem to have known anything of the care with which the compilers of these Annals noted the occurrence of atmospherical and astronomical phenomena.

<sup>9</sup> Ui - Bresail - Macha. — A tribe, (otherwise called Clann - Bresail), descended from Bresal, son of Feidhlim, son of Fiachra Casan, son of Colla-da-chrich. See O'Flaherty's Ogygia, part III., chap. 76. The territory of the Clann-Bresail seems to have been co-extensive with the present baronies of O'Neilland East and West, in the county of Armagh.

Mathgamain, son of Conaing,<sup>4</sup> son of Donncuan, royal heir of Munster, died. Flaithbertach Ua Neill came into Tir-Conaill, and plundered Tir-Enna<sup>5</sup> and Tir-Lughdach.<sup>6</sup> Ruaidhri Ua Ailellain, King of Ui-Echach, was killed by the men of Fernmhagh. Two sons of Cennedigh, viz., Conghalach and Gillamuire, were immediately slain, moreover, in revenge of him. An assault was given by the Ui-Caisin<sup>7</sup> to Donnchad son of Brian, so that his right hand was cut off him. The stone church of Dermagh<sup>8</sup> was broken by Muirchertach Ua Carraigh,<sup>9</sup> upon Maelmuaidh, King of Fera-Cell,<sup>10</sup> who was forcibly taken thereout, and afterwards killed.

Kal. Jan. Frid.; m. 2. A.D. 1020. Cill-dara, with [1020.] its oratory, was burned. Glenn-da-locha, with its oratories, was all burned. Cluain-Iraird, and Cluain-mic-Nois, and Sord-Coluim-cille,<sup>11</sup> the third part, were burned. Flaithbertach Ua hEochadha<sup>12</sup> was blinded by Niall son of Eochaidh. <sup>12</sup> Ua hEochadha. — This name, which signifies "descendant of Eochaidh," i.e. of Eochaidh son of Niall, son of Eochaidh, son of Ardghar, King of Ulidia [ob. 976], is now variously written O'Haughey, Haughey, Hoey, and Howe.

<sup>14</sup> Ui-Mac-Uais. — A tribe seated in Magh-Bregh (or the Plain of Bregia), in the east of the present county of Meath, to the S.W. of Tara Hill. There were several tribes called Ui-Mac-Uais, all descended from Colla Uais, (flor. A.D. 323), one of the "Three Collas," from whom the powerful northern septs of Airghialla were descended. <sup>3</sup> Preaching chair. — Evidently meant for "pulpit."

<sup>5</sup> Maelmuire.—Or Marianus, as the name has been Latinized. See Ware's account of the Archbishops of Armagh (Harris's ed., Vol. i., p. 49), where it is stated that Maelmuire "died of grief, as it was thought, for the universal destruction of Armagh by fire, the month before."

<sup>8</sup> Ugair. — After having been King of Leinster for seven years, according to the Book of Leinster (p. 39, col. 3), this brave prince was put to death in a house set on fire, by Donnsléibhe, King of Ui-Faelain, in the year 1024. Vid. infra.

<sup>9</sup> Deilgne - Mogoroc. — Written "Dergne-Mogoroc" in the Ann. Four Mast. Now known as Delgany, in the barony of Rathdown, and county of Wicklow. Regarding the different modes of writing the name, arising from the interchange between the all burned, viz., the great 'Damliac,'<sup>1</sup> with its roof of lead, and the bell-house with its bells, and the Saball,<sup>2</sup> and the Toi,<sup>2</sup> and the abbots' chariot, and the old preaching chair,<sup>3</sup> on the 3rd of the Kalends of June,<sup>4</sup> the Monday before Whitsunday. Maeltuirc<sup>5</sup> son of Eochaidh, comarb of Patrick, head of the clerics of all the north-west of Europe, rested in Christ on the 3rd of the Nones<sup>6</sup> of June, the Friday before Whitsuntide. Amhalgaidh in the successorship of Patrick, by the will of the laity and clergy.<sup>7</sup> Finnlaech, son of Ruaidhri, King of Alba, was slain by his own people. Aedh Ua Innrechtaigh, King of Ui-Meith, was killed by the Ui-Niallain.

Kal. Jan. Sund.; m. 13. A.D. 1021. A victory by [1021.] Ugaire,<sup>8</sup> son of Dunlaing, King of Leinster, over Sitriuc son of Amlaimh, King of Ath-cliath, at Deilgne-Mogoroc.<sup>9</sup> A shower of wheat<sup>10</sup> was shed in Osraighi. A preying expedition by the son of Aedh Ua Neill, across the Ui-Dorthain<sup>11</sup> who were in Magh-itechta, and they killed the Lethderg in the pursuit; (but the greater part of the Airghialla<sup>12</sup> came together behind him and before him. Or thus it is narrated in the Book of Dubhdaleithe "but the Ui-Meith met him, &c."); but the Ui-Meith, and the Mughdorna, and the Saithni,<sup>13</sup> and the men of Fernmagh,<sup>14</sup> and the Ui-Dorthain,<sup>11</sup> with their Kings, met him. Ua Ceilechan<sup>15</sup> and Ua Lorcaín, with the Ui-Bresail and Ui-letters l and r, so frequently observable in Irish texts, see Joyce's Irish Names of Places (Second Series), p. 26.

<sup>11</sup> Ui-Dorthain.—Otherwise, and more correctly, written Ui-Tortain; a tribe of the Airghialla who were seated near Ardraccan in the present county of Meath. The events recorded in this entry, which is very inaccurately put together, are not noticed in any of the other Irish Chronicles.

<sup>15</sup> Ua-Ceilechan.—Written "Ua Celechair" in B., but incorrectly, as the Ua Ceilechains (or O'Callaghans) were at this time the principal family of the Ui-Bresail. See at the year 1037 infra, where the death of Archu Ua Ceilechain, King of Ui-Bresail, is recorded.

King of Munster in the 3rd century. The name of the tribe was applied to the territory, which was anciently called Eli-tuaiscert, or Northern Eli, and in later times Eli-Ua-Cerbhaill (or Eli-O'Carroll), from Cerbhall, who was 15th in descent from the Eli referred to. See the Book of Leinster, p. 336, col. 8; and O'Donovan's ed. of O'Huidhrin, App., note 759. The territory of Eli-O'Carroll is now represented by the baronies of Clonlisk and Ballybritt, in the King's County. Among the principal representatives of this distinguished Irish sept may be mentioned the Rev. John James O'Carroll, S.J., and his brother, Rev. Fras. Aug., sons of Redmund Peter O'Carroll; Frederick John O'Carroll, B.L., son of Frederick Francis, brother of Redmund; and the Right Hon. John

Niallain, were before him in Aenach-Macha,<sup>1</sup> where they all surrounded him. But the son of Aedh carried his prey through them all; and he had only twelve score good warriors. And a great number fell between them in the middle of Aenach-Macha.<sup>2</sup> Thus in the Book of Dubhdaleithe. Branacan Ua Maeluidhir, a chieftain of Midhe, was drowned on May-day in Loch-Aininne.<sup>3</sup> Amhalgaidh, comarb of Patrick, went to Munster for the first time, and made a great visitation. Cellach Ua Cathasaigh, King of the Saithne,<sup>4</sup> was killed by the Cinel-Eoghain. The son<sup>5</sup> of Flann, son of Maelsechlainn, royal-heir of Temhair; Aedh, i.e. royal-heir of Ailech,<sup>6</sup> and Domnall Ua Murchada, were slain.

Kal. Jan. Mond., m. 24. A.D. 1022. The son of Cerbhall, King of Eli,<sup>7</sup> and Domnall Ua Cellaigh, King of Fotharta,<sup>8</sup> and Sitriuc son of Imhar, King of Port-Lairge,<sup>9</sup> were slain. Macleighbinn son of Cairell, King of Airghialla; Flann Ua Tacain, herenagh of Dairmagh,<sup>10</sup> and Lachtan (i.e. who died in Ard-Macha<sup>11</sup>), comarb of Inis-cain-Dega,<sup>12</sup> 'fell asleep' in Christ. Maelsechlainn, son of Domnall (son of Donnchad<sup>13</sup>), arch-King of Ireland, pillar of the dignity and nobility of the west of the [1022.]

Naish, eldest son of Anne Margaret (sister of the same Redmund), who married Carroll P. Naish, Esquire, of Ballycullen, co. Limerick.

<sup>6</sup> Fotharta. — Fotharta-Fea, or Fotharta O'Nolan; now the barony of Forth, in the county of Carlow, the patrimony of the ancient sept of the Ui-Nuallain, a name now written O'Nolan, and Nolan (without the O'). See O'Flaherty's Ogygia, part 3, chap. 64, and Leabhar na g-ceart (ed. O'Donovan), p. 211.

information regarding the history of this remarkable establishment in ancient times, see Reeves's Adamnan v. Dairmagh.

<sup>11</sup> Died in Ard-Macha.—The corresponding Irish of this clause is interlined by way of gloss in A. and B., by the original hands.

<sup>12</sup> Inis-cain-Dega.—Inishkeen, in the barony of Upper Dundalk, co. Louth, on the borders of the county of Monaghan, a portion of which county is comprised in the parish of Inishkeen.

indicate correctly the year 1022. A few lines of poetry in praise of Maelsechlainn (Malachy II.), not in B., are added in the lower margin of fol. 56a in A. But as the text is rather corrupt, it has not been considered necessary to print them.

world, died in the 43rd year<sup>1</sup> of his reign, the 73rd year of his age, on the 4th of the Nones of September, i.e. on Sunday,<sup>2</sup> being the second of the moon. A sea-fight on the sea, between the Foreigners of Ath-cliath and Niall, son of Eochaidh, King of Ulidia, when the Foreigners were defeated, and a great slaughter was made of them; and the rest were made captive. Muirchertach Ua Carraigh,<sup>3</sup> i.e. royal heir of Temhair, was killed by the Got, i.e. Maelsechlainn. A victory in Sliabh-Fuait,<sup>4</sup> over the Airghialla, by Niall son of Eochaidh, where a great slaughter was made of the Airghialla. Mathgamhain son of Laidgнен, King of Fernmagh,<sup>5</sup> was killed by Cathalan Ua Crichain, in the middle of Cluain-Eois. Muiren, 'of the tongues'<sup>6</sup> was slain.

Kal. Jan. Tuesd.; m. 5. A.D. 1023. An eclipse of the moon on the 14th of the January moon, i.e. the 4th of the Ides<sup>7</sup> of January, a Thursday. An eclipse of the sun, also, on the 27th of the same moon, a Thursday, at the end of a fortnight, on the 9th of the Kalends [of February].<sup>8</sup> Domnall, son of Aedh Bec Ua Maelsechlainn, was killed by the son of Senan Ua Leochain.<sup>9</sup> Donnchad Ua Duinn, King of Bregha, was taken prisoner by Foreigners, in their own assembly, and carried across the sea.<sup>10</sup> Lochlainn,<sup>11</sup> son of Maelsechlainn, was killed by his own people. Tadhg, son of Brian,<sup>12</sup> was killed by the

Ua Leochain is wrongly written O'Lorcain.

<sup>10</sup> Carried across the sea. — The Four Masters state (ad an.), that this was in violation of Colum Cille, whose successor was his [Donnchad's] guarantee.

<sup>11</sup> Lochlainn. — According to the Ann. Four M., Lochlainn was King of Inis-Eoghain (Inishowen) and Magh-Itha, and was slain by his own brother, Niall, and the Cianachta of Glenn-Geimhin.

<sup>6</sup> Cuana.—This is a curious way of writing the name of Conrad II., the successor of Henry II, in the empire. O'Donovan strangely confounds Cuana (or Conrad II.) with Otho III., who was the predecessor of Henry II. Ann. Four M., A.D. 1024, note u.

<sup>7</sup> Ua Machainens.—Ua Machainen was the name of the ruling sept at the time in Mughdorna, which was most likely Mughdorna-Bregh (or Mughdorna of Bregia) in the co. Meath; a territory not yet identified, but adjoining the country of the Gailenga, the present barony of Morgallion in that county.

<sup>8</sup> Luighne.—Now represented by the barony of Leyny, co. Sligo, where the name of Ua hEghra (or O'Hara) is still very general.

<sup>10</sup> Dubhloch.—The "Black Lake." In the Book of Leinster, p. 39, col. 3, where the death of Ugaire son of Dunlaing is recorded, it is stated that a house was burned over him at Dubloch in Laighis-Chule. Laighis-Chule was the name of one of the seven septs of Laighis (or Leix), and was also, as usual, applied to their territory, which appears to have been comprised in the present barony of Stradbally, in the Queen's County. In a short general account of the tribes of Leix, contained in the Book of Leinster (p. 318), the Nuachongbail (the old name of the village, or church, of Stradbally, in the parish and barony of Stradbally), is otherwise given as Tulach mic Comgaill, "the hill of Comgall's son"; and this Comgall appears in the short pedigree of the Laighis-Cúle (loc. cit., col. 2), whilst his son, Colman son of Comgall (after whom Nuachongbail was called Tulach mic Comgaill), is described as erlam na cilli; i.e. "founder (or patron) of the church." Colman's day in the Calendar is May 15th. See Martyr. Doneg. at that date.

<sup>11</sup> Ui-Muiredhaigh.—This was the tribe-name of the O'Tooles, whose country at the date of the event above recorded embraced nearly the southern half of the present county of Kildare. Soon after the Anglo-Norman invasion, the O'Tooles went into the mountains of Wicklow, and settled in the Glen of Imaal, and the territory of Fera-Cualann.

<sup>12</sup> Ath-na-croise.—The "Ford of the Cross." There is no place now known by this name, or any variation of it, such as Cross-ford, in the barony of Corran, co. Sligo. A stanza in the lower margin of fol. 56b in A., which is not in B., referring to this battle, is as follows:—

In cat oc at na croiri, Pechtatar ri cen tari;
Ro imad collaib Corann;

"[In] the battle at Ath-na-croise Men fought without weakness.

<sup>3</sup> Inis-Mochta.—"Mochta's Island." Now Inishmot, in a parish of the same name, barony of Lower Slane, co. Meath. The lake in which this island was situated has disappeared, but the ruins of St. Mochta's church are still to be seen in a spot surrounded by low, swampy ground, always flooded in winter. St. Mochta "of the Island," whose day in the Calendar is Jan. 26, is to be distinguished from Mochta of <sup>9</sup> Domnall. — In the Ann. Four M. (ad an.), and Chron. Scot. (A.D. 1025=1027), Domnall is described as "son of Senchán, son of Flaithbertach," and royal heir of Munster.

Cathalan Ua Crichain, King of Fernmagh, and Culocha Ua Gairbhídh, King of Ui-Meith, fell by each other in a fight. A depredation was committed by the Cinel-Eoghain upon the Ulidians, when they carried off a great prey of cattle. Dun-Caillen<sup>2</sup> in Alba was all burned. In the Book of Leinster, p. 335, col. 6, the name is given "Cinaedh son of Ingerree," and over "Ingerree" is written the name Muiredach, by way of gloss; from which it would appear that "Ingerree" was a nickname.

The killing of Amlaimh, on his way to Rome, by Saxons, is recorded at A.D. 1034 infra. His departure for Rome is also noticed under last year.

<sup>7</sup> Three score ounces.—The 'translator' in Clar. 49 has "3 ounces." But the MSS. A. and B. have tpi .xx., "three score."

<sup>8</sup> Sword of Carlus.—This weapon seems to have been regarded as a most sacred object by the Foreigners. The chieftain whose sword it was—Carlus son of Amlaimh, chief of the Foreigners—was slain in the battle of Cill-Ua-nDaighri (note <sup>6</sup>, p. 378 supra), according to the Ann. Four Mast. The same Annals (at A.D. 994), and the Chron. Scotorum (933), record the forcible taking by King Mael-sechlain, from the Foreigners of Dublin, of the "Sword of Carlus" and the "Ring of Tomar." Dr. Todd suggests that the sword must have been recovered by the Foreigners (or

<sup>4</sup> Tadhg Ua Conchobair.—Known in history by the name of Tadhg an eich ghil, or Tadhg "of the White Steed." His death is recorded again in the last entry for this year, perhaps through oversight. But in the entry in question, Tadhg is stated to have been slain by Maelsechlainn, grandson of Maelruanaidh, whom the Four Masters (1030) describe as the "Got," and "lord of Midhe and Crimthainn."

<sup>5</sup> The Got; i.e. the Stammerer. See under the year 1023 supra. The person here referred to was Domnall Got O'Maelsechlainn, King of Midhe (or King of Uisnech, according to the Book of Leinster, p. 42, col. 2).

<sup>6</sup> Cinel-Binnigh of the Glen.—The Cinel-Binnigh, who were descended from Eochaidh Binnech, son of Eoghan, son of Niall Nine-hostager, occupied a territory comprised in the present county of Londonderry. The tribe seems in the course of time to have become divided into three or four divisions. But the exact limits of the territory of the original tribe, or of either of the subdivisions, has not been ascertained. See Reeves's Colton's Visitation, p. 73, note y. The translation of this entry in Clar. 49 is a remarkable instance of the ignorance of Irish of the so-called translator, who thus renders the very simple text above printed:—"Maelduin mac Ciarmaic the Lady Mary of Kindred-Binni of Glans, killed by the disease that killeth cattle, in Irish called Conach."!!

Tadhg Ua Conchobair,<sup>4</sup> King of Connaught, and the Got,<sup>5</sup> King of Midhe, were slain. Ruaidhri Ua Canannain was killed by Aedh Ua Neill. Tadhg son of Lorcan, King of Ui-Ceinnsealaigh, died in his pilgrimage in Glenn-da-locha. Cumhara, son of Macliag, chief poet of Ireland, died. Eochaid, son of the Abbot, was slain by the Orc Ua Ruadacain, in treachery. The Cinel-Eoghain broke the house of Ua Loingsigh, in the middle of Oentruimh. Maelduin son of Ciarmac, steward of Cinel-Binnigh of the Glen,<sup>6</sup> was killed by Conchobar Ua Loingsigh. Tadhg,<sup>7</sup> son of Cathal, son of Conchobar, was slain by Maelsechlainn, grandson of Maelruanaidh, King of Crimthainn.

<sup>7</sup> Tadhg.—Tadhg an eich ghil, or Tadhg "of the White Steed," King of Connaught. This entry, which is not in B., nor in Clar. 49, seems to be a repetition of a previous entry under this year, but involving some difference of meaning. See note <sup>4</sup>.

Some lines of poetry describing the bargains obtainable at Armagh, in the time of Flaithbertach, are added in the lower margin of fol. 57a in A. (but are not in B.), viz. :—

<sup>3</sup> Cill-Combair.—The church of Comar (now Comber, in the barony of Lower Castlereagh, Co. Down). The b in the member of the name Combair, in the text, is wrong. The proper form of the name is Cill-Comair, the Church of the Comar

(or "Confluence"). See Reeves's Down and Connor, p. 338.

the Foreigners of Ath-clíath. Two hundred men were burned in the Daimliac, and two hundred were carried into captivity. Cill-dara was burned through the negligence of a wicked woman. A hosting by the son of Eochaid<sup>1</sup> to Telach-og<sup>2</sup>; but he obtained nothing. Aedh Ua Neill passed round him eastwards, and carried off three thousand cows, and one thousand two hundred captives. A hosting by the son of Eochaid<sup>1</sup> into Uí-Echach, when he burned Cill-Combair,<sup>3</sup> with its oratory, killed four of the clerics, and carried away thirty captives. A hosting by the son of Brian<sup>4</sup> into Osraighi, when a slaughter of his people was made, including Maelcolaim Cainraighech,<sup>5</sup> and many others. Cathasach, comarb of Coemghin, was blinded by Domnall son of Dunlaing. The 'snow-depredation'<sup>6</sup> by Aedh Ua Neill, in Tír-Conaill, when he killed Ua Canannain,<sup>7</sup> King of Cinel-Conaill. Ua Donnacain, King of Aradh-tíre, was killed by Ua Briain, i.e. Toirdhelbhach.<sup>8</sup>

Kal. Jan. Saturd., m. 15. A.D. 1032. Mathgamain [1032.]<sup>BIS.</sup> Ua Riagain,<sup>9</sup> King of Bregha, was slain by Domnall Ua Cellaigh, through treachery. Gillacomgan, son of Maelbríghde, great steward of Murebhe,<sup>10</sup> was burned with fifty men about him. Domnall Ua Maeldoraidh, King of Cinel-Conaill; the son of Mathghamain son of Muiredach, King of Ciarraidhe,<sup>11</sup> [and] Domnall<sup>12</sup> son of Donncothaigh, King of Gailenga, were slain. Etru Ua Conaing, royal pronounced Threlagh, and is sometimes written Turlogh, and Anglicised Terence. This Toirdhelbhach, who was the son of Tadhg (sl. 1023, supra), son of Brian Borumha, was the first person who adopted the hereditary surname of Ua Briain (or O'Brien).

(whose obit is entered above at the year 1029), and the father of Lulach, also King of Alba (or Scotland), slain by Malcolm son of Donnchadh (Duncan) in the year 1058, as appears under that year infra.

<sup>11</sup> Ciarraidhe; i.e. Ciarraidhe-Luachra, the name of which is now represented by that of Kerry (the co. Kerry).

<sup>8</sup> Carman. — See note <sup>11</sup>, p. 345 supra. Carman has been strangely confounded with Loch-Garman, the Irish name of Wexford, by writers on Irish history generally. But there is no authority for identifying the one place with the other. When Donnchadh MacGillapatrick inaugurated his succession to the kingship of Ossory by the celebration of the Fair (and Games) of Carman, he was not likely to go to Wexford for the purpose, where he would probably get a heir of Munster, was killed by the 'family' of Imlech.<sup>1</sup> The victory of Druim-Bennchair<sup>2</sup> was gained over the Ulidians by the Airghialla. The victory of Inbher-Boinne<sup>3</sup> was gained by Sitriuc, son of Amhlaimh, over the Conailli, the Ui-Dorthain, and the Ui-Meith, in which they were put to slaughter. Maeltuile,<sup>4</sup> bishop of Ard-Macha, rested in Christ. Aedh Ua Forreidh<sup>4</sup> assumed the bishopric.

Kal. Jan. Mond.; m. 26. A.D. 1033. A victory was [1033.] gained by Murchad Ua Maelsechlainn over Conchobar Ua Maelsechlainn, when Maelruanaidh, grandson of Carrach Calma,<sup>5</sup> and Lorcan Ua Caindelbhain, King of Leoghaire, and many others, were slain. Conn, son of Maelpatraic, herenagh of Mungairit,<sup>6</sup> rested. Conchobar,<sup>7</sup> grandson of Muiredhach, King of Ciarraidhe, was slain. The Fair of Carman<sup>8</sup> [was celebrated] by Donnchad MacGillapatraic, after assuming the Kingship of Leinster. Amhergin Ua Cerbhaill, King of Eli,<sup>9</sup> and Cu-Mumhan,<sup>10</sup> son of Ruaidhri Ua Cetfadh, died. A breach among the Eli,<sup>9</sup> in which fell Braen Ua Cleirigh, and Muiredach MacGillapatraic, and a great many more. The son of Mac Boete,<sup>11</sup> son of Cinaedh,<sup>12</sup> was killed by Maelcolaim,<sup>13</sup> son of Cinaedh. Oengus, grandson of Cathal, King of Eoghanacht of Loch-Lein<sup>14</sup> [was killed]. The shrine of very warm reception from the Ui-Ceinnselaigh. Carman was really the name of a place in the present county of Carlow.

<sup>11</sup> Son of MacBoete.—Mac mic Boete may mean "son of the son of Boete," or "son of MacBoete," a name formed like MacBethad (Macbeth), but different in derivation as well as in signification.

Peter and Paul was dropping blood on Patrick's altar in Ard-Macha, in the presence of all observers. Aedh, son of Flaitbertach Ua Neill, King of Ailech, and royal heir of Ireland, died after penitence, on the night of Andrew's festival.<sup>1</sup>

Kal. Jan. Tuesd.; m. 7. A.D. 1034. Maelcolaim,<sup>2</sup> son of Cinaedh, King of Alba, died. Amlaimh, son of Sitriuc, was killed by Saxons on his way to Rome. Gillasechnaill,<sup>3</sup> son of Gillamochonna, was slain. Dubhdaingen, King of Connaught, was slain by his own people. Donnchad, son of Brian, plundered all Osraighe. Cathal Martyr, herenagh of Corcach, and Conn, son of Mael-patraic, herenagh of Mungairit<sup>5</sup> 'fell asleep' in Christ. A hosting of the Ulidians into Midhe, to Tech-mic-Mellen.<sup>6</sup> Gilla-Fulartaigh, King of the Deisi<sup>7</sup> of Bregha, was slain. Macnia Ua hUchtain,<sup>8</sup> lector of Cenannas, was drowned coming from Alba, and the culebad<sup>9</sup> of Colum-Cille, and three of Patrick's reliquaries, and thirty men about them. Suibhne, son of Cinaedh, King of the Gall-Gaidhel,<sup>10</sup> died. [1034.]

capacities, with the monastery of Kells. See Reeves's Adamnan, p. 397.

<sup>9</sup> Culebad.—The meaning of the word culebad has been much discussed. Dr. Reeves thought it was the Irish word for Latin colobium (a tunic). Adamnan, p. 323. See Ann. Loch Cé, A.D. 1034, note <sup>2</sup>. The Rev. Thomas Olden has treated of the nature and use of the culebad in an interesting paper published in the Proceedings of the R. I. Acad., ser. II., vol. II., part 7 (Jan. 1886), pp. 355–8. Mr. Olden explains culebad (glossed "flabellum," in the authority there cited) as a fan for driving away "flies and other unclean insects which fly past, so that they may not touch the sacred things" (p. 356). See Ann.

Loch Cé (ed. Hennessy) A.D. 1031, note <sup>2</sup>, and 1128, note <sup>6</sup>. See also O'Curry's MS. Materials, p. 335, where it is erroneously stated that the "cuilefadh of St. Patrick" was alluded to in the Annals of the Four Masters at the year 1128. There is reference to a cuilebadh, under that year, in the Ann. Loch Cé. (See Hennessy's ed., ad an., note <sup>6</sup>), and also in the present Chronicle under the same date infra (where see note).

<sup>10</sup> Gall-Gaidhel.—"Foreign Irish." The Gaedhlic (or Celtic) people in the mainland and islands of Scotland who were under the rule of the Norsemen. The name is now represented by Galloway, in Scotland.

<sup>3</sup> West of Leinster.—ιαρṡαιρ Laiſen. This is probably a mistake for αιρṡep Laiſen (or East of Leinster). The Four Mast. state that Cathal was King of Ui-Cellaigh-Cualann, a territory that embraced the north-east portion of the present county of Wicklow.

<sup>4</sup> Cinel-Boghaine.—The tribe-name of the descendants of Enna-Boghaine, second son of Conall Gulban, son of Niall Nine-hostager. Their territory is now represented by the barony of Banagh, co. Donegal.

<sup>5</sup> Hound.—cu. Translated "persecutor" in Clar. 49, and "canis venaticus" by O'Connor. O'Donovan renders cu na naemh ocus na firen by "watchdog of the saints and just men." But as the Chronicler records that Iarnan met his death through the power of the saints, it is obvious that he must have regarded Iarnan as an enemy of all holy and good men.

<sup>6</sup> Delbna.—There were several sub-sections of the great family of Delbna (descendants of Lughaidh Delbhaedh, son of Cas, ancestor of

Kal. Jan. Wednesd.; m. 18. A.D. 1035. Cnút<sup>1</sup> son [1035.] of Sain,<sup>2</sup> King of the Saxons, died. Cathal son of Amhalgaidh, King of the West of Leinster,<sup>3</sup> and his wife, the daughter of the son of Gillacoemhgin, son of Cinaedh, and his dog, were killed at the same time by the son of Cellach, son of Dunchad. Flaithbertach Ua Murchada, King of Cinel-Boghaine,<sup>4</sup> was slain with many others. Iarnan Ua Flannchadha, 'hound'<sup>5</sup> of the saints and faithful, went on a predatory expedition into Delbhna;<sup>6</sup> but a few of the Delbhna met him about a herd, and gave him battle; and Iarnan was killed, and a slaughter [was made] of his people, through the power of the saints. Ragnall, grandson of Imhar, King of Port-Lairge, was killed in Ath-clíath, by Sitriuc son of Amlaimh. Ard-Breacain was plundered by Sitriuc son of Amlaimh. Sord of Colum-Cille<sup>7</sup> was plundered and burned by Conchobar Ua Maelsechlainn, in revenge therefor.

Kal. Jan. Thursd.; m. 29. A.D. 1036. Domnall Ua [1036.]<sup>8</sup> hUathmarain, King of Fir-Li, by the Dalaraidhe; Scológ Ua Flannacain, King of Tethbha, by his own people; Domnall Ua Flainn, royal heir of Temhair, by the men of Breifne; Murchad Ua Incappail, and Niall son of Muirghes, two royal heirs of the west of Connaught—were all slain. Cuchiche, son of Eignechan, King of Cinel-Enna, died. Donnchad son of Dunlaing, King of Leinster, was blinded<sup>8</sup> by Donnchad MacGillapatraic, the Dal-Cais of Thomond) scattered throughout Leinster and Connaught. See O'Donovan's ed. of O'Dugan's Topogr. Poem, App., notes <sup>26</sup>, <sup>28</sup>. The Delbhna above referred to was probably the branch that gave name to the present barony of Delvin, in the co. Westmeath.

From the retaliation here recorded, it would seem that Swords was at the time in the possession of the Foreigners.

<sup>8</sup> Blinded.—It is stated in the Book of Leinster (p. 39, col. 3) that the operation took place after the victim had been brought out of the church of Disert-Diarmata (i.e. Castledermot, co. Kildare), where he had probably taken refuge.

<sup>5</sup> Son of Mael-na-mbó—The name of this son was Diarmait, who, from being King of Ui-Ceinnsealaigh (or South Leinster), made himself ruler of all Leinster. His death in battle is recorded at the year 1072 infra, where he is called King of Leinster and the "Gentiles" (or Foreigners). Mael-na-mbo ("Cow-chief") was a nickname for Donnchad, King of Ui-Ceinnsealaigh (slain by his own tribe in 1005, Four Mast.), who was the grandfather of Murchadh, King of Leinster (ob. 1070, infra), from whom the name of Mac Murchadha (or Mac Murrough) has been derived. See note under A.D. 1042.

Oengus son of Flann, comarb of Brenainn of Cluain,<sup>2</sup> [and] Cellach Ua Selbhaigh, comarb of Barrè,<sup>3</sup> 'fell asleep' in Christ. Ruaidhri, son of Tadhg,<sup>4</sup> son of Lorcan, was blinded by the son of Mael-na-mbo.<sup>5</sup>

Kal. Jan. Saturd.; m. 10. A.D. 1037. Cathal, son of Ruaidhri, King of the West of Connaught, went on his pilgrimage to Ard-Macha. Flann<sup>6</sup> Ua Maelsechlainn was blinded by Conchobar<sup>6</sup> Ua Maelsechlainn. Archu Ua Celechain,<sup>7</sup> King of Ui-Bresail, and Ruaidhri Ua Lorcan, King of Ui-Niallain, were slain in Craebh-caille,<sup>8</sup> by Muiredach Ua Ruadhacain and the Ui-Echach. Cu-inmain<sup>9</sup> Ua Robann, King of Port-Lairge,<sup>10</sup> was slain by his own people. Cernachan Got<sup>11</sup> was killed by Ua Flannacain of the Ui-Maine. Three Ua Maeldoraidhs were killed. Great rain in this year. [1037.]

Kal. Jan. Sund.; m. 21. A.D. 1038. Cuinniden<sup>12</sup> Connere, comarb of MacNisse and Colman Ela, Colman Cam<sup>13</sup> Ua Conghaile, comarb of Molaise,<sup>14</sup> rested in [1038.]

<sup>7</sup> Ua Celechain.—Anglicised O'Callaghan. This family, which is to be distinguished from the more extensive Cork family of the name, was at one time powerful in that part of the co. Armagh now forming the barony of O'Neilland East. See at the year 1044 infra. The late Mr. John C. O'Callaghan, author of the Green Book and of the Irish Brigades in the Service of France, claimed to be descended from these O'Callaghan's of Ui-Bresail.

<sup>8</sup> Craebh-caille.—O'Donovan suggests (Ann. F. M., A.D. 825, note d), that this is "probably the place now called Kilcreevy," in the parish of Derrynoose, barony and county of Armagh.

<sup>2</sup> Orc-allaidh Ua Ruadhacain.—The name Ua Ruadhacain is now written O'Rogan (or Rogan without the O). Orc-allaidh (lit. "wild pig") was probably a nickname for the Muiredach [Ua Ruadhacain] mentioned under the year 1037.

<sup>3</sup> Clann-Sinaigh; i.e. the "descendants of Sinach." It would appear from an entry at the year 1059 infra, that the Clann-Sinaigh were seated in the Airthera, a territory now represented by the baronies of Lower and Upper Orior, co. Armagh.

<sup>4</sup> Ulltan.—St. Ultan of Ard-Breacain (Ardbraccan, co. Meath), whose festival day is September 4. The Dominical Letter for the year 1038 being A., the 4th of September in that year fell on a Monday.

<sup>5</sup> Mac-in-abaidh; i.e. "son of the Abbot." From this form comes the Irish and Scotch surname Mac Nab. The Four Masters do not give this entry.

<sup>7</sup> Ciaran's festival.—The festival of St. Ciaran of Clonmacnoise occurs on the 9th of September, which fell Christ. Gillachrist, son of Cathbar Ua Domnaill, was killed by the son of Conn Ua Domnaill. A battle between Cuana,<sup>1</sup> King of the All-saxan, and Otto, King of the Franks, in which 1,000 men were slain, along with Otta. Orc-allaidh Ua Ruadhacain,<sup>2</sup> King of Ui-Echach, was killed by the Clann-Sinaigh,<sup>3</sup> in Ard-Macha, on the Monday of the festival of Ultan,<sup>4</sup> in revenge of the killing of Eochaidh Mac-in-abaidh,<sup>5</sup> and in revenge of the profanation of Ard-Macha. The Ui-Maine were defeated by the Delbhna<sup>6</sup> in the middle of Cluain-mic-Nois, on the Friday of Ciaran's festival,<sup>7</sup> in which many were slain. Cuduiligh Ua Donnchadha, royal heir of Caisel, was slain by the Ui-Faelain.

Kal. Jan. Mond.; m. 2. A.D. 1039. Iaco<sup>8</sup> King of Britain, by his own people; Domnall<sup>9</sup> son of Donnchad, King of Ui-Faelain, by Domnall Ua Fergaile<sup>10</sup>; Donnchad Derg<sup>11</sup> Ua Ruairc, by Ua Conchobair<sup>12</sup>; Ruaidhri,<sup>13</sup> King of Fernmagh, by his own people; Aedh Ua Flannacain, King of Lurg and Ui-Fiachrach<sup>14</sup>—all were slain. Donnchad Mac Gillapatraic, Arch-King of Leinster and Osraighi, [and] Macnia, comarb of Buite,<sup>15</sup> a bishop, and on a Saturday in the year 1038; the vigil of Ciaran's feast day being therefore on a Friday.

<sup>11</sup> Donnchad Derg; i.e. Donnchad (or Denis), the "Red." He was the son of Art O'Ruairc, King of Connaught (nicknamed an cailech, or "the Cock"), whose death is recorded at the year 1046 infra.

<sup>14</sup> Ui Fiachrach; i.e. Ui-Fiachrach of Ard-Sratha [Ardstraw], a tribe seated in the north-west of the present county of Tyrone, along the River Derg, and near the barony of Lurg, in the county of Fermanagh.

<sup>4</sup> Lethrenna.—This name is a plural noun, the singular of which would be Lethrinn. For do Lethrennaiš, the Annals of Tigernach and the Four Masters have do Uib Labradha, "by the Ui-Labhradha." See Ann. Loch-Cé (ed. Hennessy), Vol. I, p. 40, note 7.

<sup>5</sup> Comarb of Flannan and Brenainn; i.e. abbot (or bishop) of Killaloe, in the county of Clare, and of Clonfert, in the county of Galway. But the name of Coscrach does not appear in Ware's lists of the bishops of those Sees.

<sup>6</sup> Ua hUchtain.—See Reeves's Adamnan, p. 398, and also pp. 279, 321. Maelmuire Ua hUchtain was principal of the Columbian foundations both in Ireland and Scotland.

<sup>8</sup> Corcran Clerech.—"Corcran the Cleric." After the death of Mael-sechlainn the Great (A.D. 1022 supra), there seems to have been an interregnum in the government of Ireland, during which the public affairs are alleged to have been carried on by a great poet, Cuan O'Lochain (sl. in 1024), and the Corcran Clerech here referred to. Mr. Moore (History of Ireland, vol. II., p. 147, note), states that he could find no authority for Corcran Clerech,<sup>8</sup> head of Europe as regards piety and learning, rested in Christ. Dunchad Ua Canege,<sup>9</sup> lector of Ard-Macha, the gentlest and most learned, rested in Christ. this allegation in "any of our regular Annals." The portion of the Book of Leinster dealing with the succession of the Irish Kings from the earliest period is of an annalistic character; and after the record (p. 26a), of the death of Maelsechlainn Mór (or Malachy the Great), the following entry occurs: — comfelaiciur for hEirinn for re dá bliadain xl. (no. l.) Cúan .h. lothcain, Corcran clerech; i.e. "a joint regnancy over Ireland, for 42 (or 52) years; Cuan Ua Lothchain, and Corcran Clerech." See Book of Rights (ed. O'Donovan), Introd., pp. xlii. xliii.

<sup>10</sup> Dunchad son of Crinan. — The name of Dunchad's father is written

"Critan" in the Chron. Scotorum, but (correctly) "Crinan" in the Ann. of Tigernach. This Dunchad, the Duncan of the play of Macbeth, although stated above to have been slain by his own people (a suis), is reported in the Chronicle of Marianus Scotus as having been killed a duce suo MacBethad mac Finnloech. See Skene's Chron. Picts and Scots, places referred to in Index under Duncan I.

<sup>11</sup> Aralt, King of the Saxons 'giuais'. Harold Harefoot, whose obit is also given in the Anglo-Sax. Chronicle and other Old English Chronicles at the year 1040. The meaning of the epithet 'giuais,' which Dr. O'Connor prints guais, and translates "ferorum," is not plain to the Editor. The Translator in Clar. 49 renders ru Saxan giuair by "King of Saxons of Gills." See Ann. Loch-Cé (ed. Hennessy), A.D. 1040, note <sup>11</sup>.

by Killeslin, in a parish of the same name, barony of Slievemargy, Queen's county. See O'Donovan's Four Mast., A.D. 843, note y.

<sup>7</sup> Son.—He was apparently Diarmait, [son of Donnchad, called Mael-na-mbo; see note <sup>4</sup>, p. 516 supra], at first King of Ui-Ceinnsealaigh, but ultimately King of Leinster. The obit of Diarmait is entered under the year 1072 infra, where he is described as King of the Leinstermen and Foreigners. See note <sup>5</sup>, under A.D. 1036, supra.

<sup>8</sup> Ferna-mór.—See note <sup>5</sup>. It is stated in the Ann. Four M. (A.D. 1041), that the outrages above recorded were committed in revenge not only of the burned about Michaelmas. Cenannas was burned. Dundalethglas was burned, and many churches besides.

Kal. Jan. Thursd.; m. 24. A.D. 1041. Numerous, [1041.] truly, are the events [of this year], between the killing of men, and deaths,<sup>1</sup> and depredations, and battles. No one could relate them all; but a few out of many of them [are mentioned], in order that the ages of the people might be known through them. MacBeathad, son of Ainmire, chief poet of Ard-Macha and of Ireland in general, [died]. Domnall Remhar,<sup>2</sup> son of Mael-na-mbo, was killed by the Leinstermen. Muirchertach Mac Gillapatraic was killed by the Ui-Caellaidhe,<sup>3</sup> in treachery. A depredation by the Airghialla in Conaille; when the Conaille routed them in Magh-Dachainnech.<sup>4</sup> A depredation by the Ui Neill in Ui-Echach-Uladh, when they took a great prey. Gillacomghaill, son of Donncuan, son of Dunlaing, was forcibly taken out of Cill-dara, and killed afterwards.

Kal. Jan. Frid.; m. 5. A.D. 1042. Ferna-mor- [1042.] Moedhoc<sup>5</sup> was burned by Donnchad, son of Brian. Glenn-Uissen<sup>6</sup> was burned by the son<sup>7</sup> of Mael-na-mbo, and the oratory was broken, and 100 men were slain, and 400 taken out of it—in revenge of Ferna-mór.<sup>8</sup> Loingsech (i.e. Ua Flaithen), comarb of Ciaran and Cronan,<sup>9</sup> rested. Aedh, son of the Abbot, (i.e. son of Maelmuire,<sup>10</sup> and of

<sup>2</sup> Termon-Dabheoc.—The sanctuary of Dabheoc, for whom see Martyr. of Donegal at 1 January. The church of St. Dabheoc was situated in the island in Lough Derg, co. Donegal, famous in later times as the site of St. Patrick's Purgatory. The church lands included within the limits of Termon-Dabheoc are now known by the name of Termon-Magrath, in the parish of Templecarne, barony of Tirhugh, co. Donegal.

<sup>3</sup> Ui-Caracain.—A sept that occupied and gave name to a small tract of land lying on either side of the river Blackwater, and co-extensive with the present parish of Killyman, in the diocese of Armagh. Domnall Ua Cetfadha,<sup>1</sup> the glory of Munster, died. The herenagh of Leithglenn was killed in the church door. A predatory expedition by Muirchertach<sup>2</sup> Ua Neill to the men of Bregha. But Gairbhedh Ua Cathasaigh,<sup>3</sup> King of Bregha, overtook him at Cassan-linne<sup>4</sup> when the tide was full before him; and Muirchertach<sup>2</sup> and many others fell there. Carthach,<sup>5</sup> son of Saerbrethach, King of Eoghanacht-Caisil, was burned in a house set on fire by the grandson of Longarcán son of Donnucan,<sup>6</sup> together with many nobles. A battle amongst the men of Alba between<sup>7</sup> themselves, in which Cronan, abbot of Dun-Caillen,<sup>8</sup> was killed.

Kal. Jan. Wednesd.; m. 20. A.D. 1046. Muiredach, [1046.] son of Flaithbertach<sup>9</sup> Ua Neill, royal-heir of Ailech, and Aiteidh Ua hAiteidh, King of Ui-Echach-Ulad were burned in a house set on fire, by Cu-Ulad, son of Congalach, in Uachtar-tire.<sup>10</sup> Art Ua Ruairc, King of Connaught, was killed by the Cinel-Conaill. Ferghal Ua Ciardhai, King of Cairpri, was killed by Ua Flannacain, King of Tebhtha. Conchobar Ua Loingsigh, King of Dal-Araidhe, was killed by the son of Domnall Ua Loingsigh, in Leinster.<sup>11</sup> Maelpatraic Ua Bileoice, chief lector of Ard-Macha, and a paragon of piety and chastity, died at a good old age. Dubhdaleithe, son of Maelmuire, assumed the lectorship.

<sup>3</sup> Successor of Brigit; i.e. abbess of Kildare. The name of Lann does not appear in Archdall's very imperfect list of the abbots and abbesses of Kildare.

<sup>5</sup> Ua h-Iffernain.—This name, which is not uncommon in Meath, is now written Heffernan. But the Heffernans of Meath and Kildare are to be distinguished from the Heffernans of Limerick and Clare, who come of a different stock.

festival of Patrick, for which no equal was found, which caused a great destruction of people and cattle, and of wild sea animals and birds. Birth of Domnall<sup>1</sup> son of Amalgaidh, i.e., successor of Patrick. Muirchertach, grandson of Matadhan, King of the Ui-Bresail, was killed in Ard-Macha by Matadhan Ua Ceilechain,<sup>2</sup> through treachery. Lann, daughter of Mac Selbhachain successor of Brigit,<sup>3</sup> rested in peace. Niall Ua Ruairc was killed by Ua Conchobair.<sup>4</sup> A predatory expedition by Niall, son of Maelsechlainn, into Bregha, when he killed Ua h-Iffernain.<sup>5</sup>

Kal. Jan. Frid.; m. 21. A.D. 1048. Dunlang,<sup>6</sup> son [1048] BIS. of Dungal, was slain by his brothers Ferghal Ua Maelmhuaidh, King of Fera-Cell; Gillacoluim Ua hEighnigh, chief King of Airghialla; Cennfaeladh Ua Cuill,<sup>7</sup> chief poet of Munster, [and] Maelfabhaill Ua hEidhinn, King of Ui-Fiachrach-Aidhne, died. Clothna, herenagh of Imlech-Ibhair;<sup>8</sup> Ferdornach Ua Innascaigh, comarb of Finnen,<sup>9</sup> [and] Dunchad Ua Ceilechair, comarb of Ciaran of Saighir, rested in peace. The comarb of Peter,<sup>10</sup> and twelve of his companions along with him, died after drinking poison which the comarb who had been previously expelled had given them.

Kal. Jan. Sund., m. 23. A.D. 1049. Amalgaidh<sup>11</sup> [1049.] comarb of Patrick, having spent twenty-nine years in the "glory of the east of Ireland," in the Ann. Four M.

<sup>10</sup> Comarb of Peter. — The 'comarb' (or successor) of Peter here referred to was apparently Pope Damasus II., who was enthroned on the 17th of July, 1048, in succession to Benedict IXth, and died on the 8th of August following.

<sup>11</sup> Amalgaidh. — Some lines of poetry in praise of this prelate are added in the lower margin of fol. 58b in A. But they are not worth printing.

sented by the baronies of Upper and Lower Connello, in the county of Limerick.

<sup>5</sup> Ua Beice. — O'Donovan states that this name has been made Beck and Peck. But it would be more likely to assume the form "Beaky," as consisting of two syllables.

the government, rested penitently in Christ. Maelcain-nigh Ua Taichligh,<sup>1</sup> comarb of Daimhinish, Tuathal Ua Uail, herenagh of Both-Conais,<sup>2</sup> rested in peace. Flaithbertach Ua Loingsigh was slain by the son of Conchobar Ua Loingsigh. Muirchertach son of Maelsechlainn was killed by Conchobar Ua Maelsechlainn, against the will of God and men. Conchobar Ua Cinnfaeladh,<sup>3</sup> King of Ui-Conaill-Gabhra,<sup>4</sup> [and] Imhar Ua Beice,<sup>5</sup> King of Ui-Meith, were slain. Dubhdaleithe<sup>6</sup> assumed the abbotship, from his lectorship, on the same day in which Amhalghaidh died. Aedh Ua Forreidh<sup>7</sup> assumed the lectorship. In this year was born Flaithbertach<sup>8</sup> Ua Laidhghnen, King of Fernmhagh.

Kal. Jan. Mond.; m. 4. A.D. 1050, of the Incarnation<sup>9</sup> [1050.] of the Lord. Maelruanaidh son of Cucoirne, King of Eli, Donnchad son of Gillafaelain, King of Ui-Failghi, were slain. Cill-dara, with its cathedral, was burned. Maelan, lector of Cenannas, the most learned of all Irishmen; Dubthach son of Milidh, comarb of Cainnech;<sup>10</sup> Ua Scula, herenagh of Inis-Cathaigh;<sup>11</sup> Maelduin Ua hEicertaigh, herenagh of Lothra;<sup>12</sup> [and] Cleirchen Ua Muineoc, tower of piety of Ireland, rested in peace. Diarmait Ua Cele, herenagh of Tulach-Fortchern,<sup>13</sup> [and] Maelsechlainn, son of Cennfaeladh, died. A conflict between the men of Magh-ltha and the Airghialla, in 1056, incorrectly style him "bishop of Armagh."

<sup>9</sup> Incarnation.—The words "Dominice incarnationis," though not in MS. B., are found in the MS. Clar. 49, alleged by O'Donovan to be a translation of B.

<sup>2</sup> Cluain-mic-Nois.—This entry, which is added in a later hand in A, is not in B., although it is given in English in the MS. Clar. 49, which has been supposed to be a 'translation' of MS. B.

<sup>3</sup> Sil-Anmchadha.—The tribe-name of the O'Maddens, who occupied the district now represented by the barony of Longford, co. Galway.

<sup>4</sup> Calraighi.—There were several tribes named Calraighi, one distinguished from the other by some word indicating local situation. See the Index to O'Donovan's ed. of the Four Masters. The Calraighe above referred to were of the sept called Calraighe-an-chala, whose name is still remembered, and applied (in the form Calry) to the parish of Ballyloughloe, in the barony of Clonlonan, county of Westmeath. Down to the 17th century this territory was the patrimony of the Magawleys; but the name of Magawley (Mac Amhalghaidh) is seldom met there now. See O'Donovan's ed. of O'Dugan, note <sup>46</sup>.

<sup>5</sup> Sinnachs (pron. Shinnaughs).—This was an offensive name (sinnach meaning 'fox') given to the family of O'Catharnaigh (or, as the name would be now written, O'Kearney), from the tradition that they were the murderers of the poet Cuan Ua Lochain. See note <sup>1</sup>, p. 554 supra, and the Chron. Scot. (ed. Hennessy), note <sup>3</sup>, p. 264. The author of the version in Clar. 49 has "Cuan O'Lochain, Archpoet of Ireland, killed treacherously by the men of Tehva, ancestors of the Foxes. They stunk afterwards, whereby they got the name of Foxes."

<sup>6</sup> M[oon] 15.—The age of the moon is set down as xx. in A., but this is wrong. B. has xv., which is correct.

<sup>7</sup> Son of Buatan.—The Ann. of Tigernach, and the Four Mast., have "Faelan, son of Bratan." The author of the version in Clar. 49 has "Maelbruadar mac Brick," which seems corrupt.

Kal. Jan. Tuesd.; m. 15<sup>6</sup>. A.D. 1051. Muirchertach, [1051.] son of Brec, King of the Desi-Mumhan, was burned by the Ui-Faelain. The son of Buatan,<sup>7</sup> son of Brec, was killed in the 'daimliac' of Lis-mor by Maelsechlainn,<sup>8</sup> grandson of Brec. Amalgaidh son of Cathal, King of the West of Connaught, was blinded by Aedh Ua Conchobair. Laidhgnen son of Maelan,<sup>9</sup> King of Gailenga, with his queen, i.e., the daughter of the Got,<sup>10</sup> went to Rome in pilgrimage, and died.<sup>11</sup> Mac Lochlainn was expelled from the kingship of Telach-og, and Aedh Ua Ferghail was made king.

Kal. Jan. Wednesd.; m. 26. A.D. 1052.<sup>12</sup> Domnall [1052.]<sup>Bis.</sup>

<sup>11</sup> Died.—The translator in Clar. 49 states that the pilgrims "died by the way." In the Annals of Tigernach it is stated that Laidhgnen died "in the east, after coming from Rome." But the Four Masters represent Laidhgnen and his wife as having died on their return journey.

<sup>12</sup> A.D. 1052.—A note in an old hand in B., in the space between the last entry for 1051 and the first entry for 1052, has ip e pa pi ulao anno 1052 Niall mac nEochoda, qui uenit ipso anno go hOrpaige. Ri Gall .i. Echmarcach mac Ragnaill ap na innarba o pu[5] laigen .i.

Διαρματο mac Mail na m-bo, 7 in piçe do fein de pu. "The King of Ulidia in 1052 was Niall, son of Eochaidh, who came in the same year to Ossory. The King of the Foreigners, i.e. Echmarcach, son of Ragnall, was expelled by the King of Leinster, i.e. Diarmaid, son of Mael-na-mbo, who had the kingship [of Dublin] thereby." See Todd's Cogadh Gaedhel, &c., p. 291, note (<sup>22</sup>). The learned author does not seem to have been acquainted with the entry just given, which is not in the Clar. 49 version of this Chronicle, or in Dr. O'Connor's edition of MS. B., although it seems of sufficient interest to be reproduced. The record of the expulsion from Dublin of the Danish King Echmarcach, as it appears in the Ann. of Tigernach and the Four Masters, would represent him merely as going on a voyage "over the sea."

<sup>1</sup> Domnall Ban Ua Briain.—Domnall O'Brien "the Fair." The third son of Donogh, son of Brian Borumha, according to Dr. O'Brien. See Valancey's Collect. de Rebus Hibernicis, Vol. I., p. 552.

<sup>2</sup> Colanea.—Cologne, on the Rhine. The history of the famous Irish monastery of Cologne has not been sufficiently examined. See Colgan's Acta SS., p. 107; O'Connor's Rer. Hib. Script., vol. 4, p. 327, and Lanigan's Ecel. Hist., vol. 3, p. 406.

name, not a Christian name, and means "son of the night," applied to him, probably, in allusion to his having been frequently engaged in nocturnal forays.

Ban Ua Briain<sup>1</sup> was slain by Connaughtmen. Domnall, son of Gillachrist, son of Cucual[n]ge, was killed by the King of Fera-Rois. Braen son of Maelmordha, King of Leinster, died in Colanea.<sup>2</sup> Macraith, grandson of Donnchad, King of Eoghanacht-Caisil, died. Echtigern Ua h-Aghrain, comarb of Ciaran and Coman, Muiredach Ua Sinachan, steward<sup>3</sup> of Munster, 'fell asleep' in peace. Gillapatraic son of Domnall, vice-abbot of Ard-Macha, was killed by the son of Archu Ua Celechain, in treachery.

Kal. Jan. Frid., m. 7. A.D. 1053. Mac-na-haidche<sup>4</sup> [1053.] Ua Ruairc, royal-heir of Connaught, was killed by Diarmait Ua Cuinn, in an island of Loch-arbhach.<sup>5</sup> Muiredach son of Diarmait, herenagh<sup>6</sup> of Ros-cre; Ua Ruadrach, herenagh of Termon-Fecin;<sup>7</sup> Flaithbertach Ua Maelfabhaill, King of Carraic-Brachaidhe;<sup>8</sup> Doilgen, noble priest of Ard-Macha; Domnall Ua Cele, herenagh of Slane, [and] Murchadh Ua Beollain, herenagh of Druim-eliabh—all 'fell asleep' in peace. A depredation [was committed] by MacLochlainn and the men of Magh-Itha<sup>9</sup> on the Cinel-Binnigh of Loch-Drochait,<sup>10</sup> when they carried off 300 cows, and killed Dubhemna son of Cinaedh, vice-abbot of Cluain-Fiachna,<sup>11</sup> and Cu-Macha son of Clairchen, steward of Dal-Cais.<sup>12</sup> Maeldistrict corresponding to the southern half of the present barony of Raphoe, co. Donegal. See Reeves's ed. of Colton's Visitation, p. 69, note <sup>a</sup>, and other references given in the Index to that work, under Magh-Itha.

<sup>10</sup> Cinel-Binnigh of Loch-Drochait. —There were at least four distinct families of the Cinel-Binnigh (descendants of Eochaidh Binnech, son of Eoghan, son of Niall Nine-hostager), each of which was distinguished by its 'local habitation.' The territory occupied by the several branches of the Cinel-Binnigh is supposed to have comprised the northern part of the present barony of Loughinsholin, co. Londonderry. See Reeves's Colton's Visitation, pp. 73-4. But the mention of Cluain-Fiachna (Clonfeakle, barony of Dungannon, co. Tyrone) in connection with this raid would seem to indicate that the territory of the Cinel-Binnigh extended further south.

<sup>12</sup> Steward of Dal-Cais. —Dal-Cais was the tribe-name of the O'Briens of Thomond and their correlatives. The Translator in Clar. 49, renders moep by "serjeant." It is not easy to conceive what could

Donlchadh, descendant of Cellachan Caisil, King Cashel [or Munster], whose obit is given at the year 958
supra.

See notes <sup>10</sup>, p. 447, and <sup>14</sup>, p. 575,
supra.

<sup>3</sup> Cochlan. — This entry, which is added by a later hand in A., is not in B. The Cochlan here mentioned was the progenitor from whom the MacCoghlan, of Delvin MacCoghlan (now represented by the barony of Garrycastle, King's county), derived their name.

<sup>4</sup> Telach-og. — See note 7, p. 429,

<sup>5</sup> Ua Celechain. — See note 7, p. 573,
supra.

<sup>6</sup> Finnmagh. — O'Donovan alleges this place to be the same as "Finvoy, in the county of Down." (Four Mast., A.D. 1054, note r). But there seems to be no place called Finvoy in the co. Down; though there are a townland and parish of the name in the barony of Kilconway, co. Antrim.

<sup>7</sup> Uachtar-tirḡ. — For the situation of this territory, and the meaning of the name, see Reeves's Down and Connor, p. 351, note w.

<sup>8</sup> Donnchuan. — This Donnchuan (ob. 948, Four Mast.), was the eldest brother of King Brian Borumha. His cron son of Cathal, King of Bregha, was killed by Ua Riagain. Donnchad Ua Cellachain,<sup>1</sup> royal heir of Caisel, was killed by the Osraighi. Niall Ua hEignigh, King of Fera-Manach, was killed by the Fera-Luirc.<sup>2</sup> Cochlan,<sup>3</sup> King of Delmna, was treacherously slain by his own people.

Kal. Jan. Saturd.; m. 18. A.D. 1054. Imhar son of [1054.] Aralt, King of the Foreigners, died. Aedh Ua Ferghail, King of Telach-og,<sup>4</sup> and the son of Archu Ua Celechain,<sup>5</sup> King of the Ui-Bresail, were slain by the men of Fernmhagh. Dubhgal Ua hEdacain, King of Ui-Niallain, was killed by Ua Laithein. The victory of Finnmagh<sup>6</sup> over the Ui-Meith and Uachtar-tirè,<sup>7</sup> by the Ui-Echach, where the Croibderg, royal heir of Uachtar-tire, was slain. Aedh, son of Cennedigh, son of Donnchuan,<sup>8</sup> steward of Clann-Tairdelbaigh,<sup>9</sup> was killed by Connaughtmen. A battle between the men of Alba and the Saxons, in which there were slain 3,000 of the men of Alba, and 1,500 of the Saxons, including Dolfinn son of Finntur. The lake of Suidhe-Odhrair<sup>10</sup> in Sliabh-grandson Aedh, whose death is above recorded, is described as muirín 7 opóran (the "delight and glory") of the Dal-Cais (Four Mast. 1054). O'Connor translates the term muirín ("steward") of this chronicle "Maritimus dux;" probably thinking that muirín was the same as muir, the Irish word for "sea" (Lat. mare).

<sup>9</sup> Clann - Tairdelbaigh; i.e. the family of Tairdelbach (Torlogh, or Terence), son of Tadbh (sl. 1023, supra), son of Brian Borumha. He was the progenitor of the principal branch of the O'Brien race. Tairdelbach, who was King of Munster (and "of the greater part of Ireland," according to some authorities), died in 1086. In giving his obit at that year infra, this Chronicle describes him as King of Ireland, as he is also described in the Ann. Loch-Cé. But in the Chron. Scotorum (1082=1086), Tairdelbach is called King of the "greater part" (urmoir) of Ireland; while the Four Masters term him King of Ireland co rreparáir ("with opposition").

<sup>10</sup> Suidhe-Odhrair. — The name of this lake is now represented by that of the townland of Seeoran, in the parish of Knockbride, barony of Clankee, co. Cavan, (where there is no trace of a lake). This is one of the mirabilia Hiberniæ. See Todd's Irish Nennius, p. 213. .

<sup>2</sup> Ua hEidhin.—He was King of Ui-Fiachrach-Aidhne (according to the Four Masters); which territory seems to have been co-extensive with the diocese of Kilmacduagh, in the south of the county of Galway. See O'Donovan's ed. of O'Dubhagáin's Topogr. Poem, note 356. The family name Ua hEidhin, represented as "O'Heyn" in Clar. 49, is now generally anglicised "Hynes."

<sup>6</sup> Murchadh.—He was the son of Donogh, son of Brian Borumha, and first cousin of Torlogh, who was the son of Tadhg the brother of Donogh.

Guaire stole away in the end of the night of the festival of Michael, and went into the Fabhall,<sup>1</sup> a thing that had not been heard of from ancient times.

Kal. Jan. Sund.; m. 29. A.D. 1055. Domnall Ruadh [1055.]
Ua Briain was killed by Ua hEidhin.<sup>2</sup> Maelmartain son of Assidh, comarb of Comghall;<sup>3</sup> Colum Ua Cathail, herenagh of Ros-ailithir;<sup>4</sup> Odhor Ua Muiredaigh, herenagh of Lusca; Gillapatraic, King of Osraighi, [and] Fiachra Ua Corcraín—all 'fell asleep' in the Lord. A victory by Tairdelbach Ua Briain<sup>5</sup> over Murchad<sup>6</sup> Ua Briain, in which 400 men were slain, along with fifteen chieftains. The battle of Martartech,<sup>7</sup> by Dubhdaleithe, comarb of Patrick, over the son<sup>8</sup> of Loingsech Ua Mael-sechlainn, i.e. the comarb of Finnen<sup>9</sup> and Colum-Cille,<sup>9</sup> in which many were slain.

Kal. Jan. Mond.; m. 10. A.D. 1056. Cathasach son [1056.]

He obtained<sup>11</sup> great fame whilst he lived—

Aedh Ua Forreidh, the old sage—;

Gormgal, chief soul-friend, of the Island of Darciargrenn,<sup>12</sup>

the lower margin of fol. 59b in A., with a mark of reference to the place where it might be introduced into the text.

<sup>12</sup> Darcaiargrenn.—This is probably the genit. form of Darcaiargriu. But no island of that name is known to the Editor; nor does the name appear in any of the other Irish chronicles. See under the year 1018 supra, where the obit is given of a "Gormghal of Aird-aílen, chief soul-friend of Ireland," and the note regarding "Ard-aílen" (or "High Island"), p. 541, note <sup>11</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> Manachs.--In the Ann. Four Mast. (id. an.) the name of the sept is written "Monachs" which seems the more correct form. See O'Donovan's Four Masters, A.D. 1171, note x, and the authorities there cited.

co. Louth]. Flann was Lector of the Monastery (not Abbot, as O'Reilly says, Ir. Writers, p. lxxv., q. v.) See O'Curry's Manners and Customs, Vol. II., pp. 149-169.

<sup>7</sup> Tree.--bile. Meaning a sacred tree. Written mtoile (for in bile, "the tree"), in Ann. Loch Cé at A.D. 1056, where see note (in Hennessy's Etru son of Lobraidh, chief of the Manachs,<sup>2</sup> pillar of the glory of Ulidia, died in penitence. A predatory expedition by Niall, son af Maelsechlainn, against the Dal-Araidhe, when he brought away 2,000 cows, and sixty persons as prisoners. Gillamura,<sup>3</sup> son of Ocan, steward of Telach-og,<sup>4</sup> died. Flann Mainistrech,<sup>5</sup> the chief lector and historical sage of Ireland, rested in eternal life. Lightning came and killed three persons at Disert-Tola,<sup>6</sup> and a student at Sord, and broke down the tree.<sup>7</sup> Eochaidh Ua Flaithen went on a predatory expedition on Christmas night into Magh-Itha, when he brought 500 cows to a water, i.e., to the river of Magh-Uatha;<sup>8</sup> and they<sup>9</sup> left the cows in the river;<sup>10</sup> and forty-eight of them were drowned, along with Cuilennan son of Dergan.

ed.) In MS. B. the words are in mīle (which O'Connor prints in inile, and translates "et confregit arcem"). The original reading of MS. A. was also in mīle; but the old scribe added a "punctum delens" under the letter m, and substituted a b, to correct the text to in bīle.

<sup>8</sup> Magh-Uatha.—O'Donovan states that the name of this river is written abainn Māge nītha (i.e. the River of the Magh-Itha), "in the Annals of Ulster. (Four Mast., A.D. 1056, note n.) But he must have been misled by the version in Clar. 49, which has "River of Magh-Itha," as the name is Meighi [genit. of Magh-]hUatha in A., and M-Ua ha in B. Regarding Magh-Itha, see O'Donovan's ed. of the Ann. Four Mast., A.D. 1177, note o.

 MSS., followed by the Annals of Loch Ce (ad an.), have Murchadh. To correspond therewith, son must be changed into grandson; as Murchadh was slain in the battle of Clontarf, but Donnchadh had a son named Murchadh.
 As this was apparently a general en-gement, it seems more probable that the mistake of the transcription took place in the proper name. The Four Masters solve the difficulty by omitting this portion of the entry. O'Conor saw nothing that required correction.

<sup>2</sup> Royal-heir.—Literally *royal ma-

ANNALS OF ULSTER.

KALENDs of Jan. on 4th feria, 21st of the moon, [1057]
 A.D. 1057. Niall Ua hEicnechain, King of Cenel-Endai, was slain by his own [kinsmen].—
 Dungal Ua Donnchadha, King of the Eoganacht of Cashel, fell by Murchadh [Donnchadh]<sup>1</sup>, son of Brian [Boruma], along with many others.—Finngüne Ua Finngüne, royal heir<sup>2</sup> of Munster, fell by Mael-Sechlainn<sup>3</sup> Ua<sup>4</sup> Bric.— Echmarcach, son of Cernach, herenagh<sup>5</sup> of Dun-leth-glais, went on his pilgrimage<sup>6</sup>.—A defeat [was inflicted] by Ruaidhri Ua Ruadhacain with the Airrthir upon Gilla-Crist Ua Faelchon and upon the Ui-Eachach.—Maelruanaidh Ua Focarta, king of the South of Eili, fell by Donnchad, son of Brian [Boruma].—Muircertach Ua Tresaich, king of Ui-Barrce, died.—Dubdalethe Ua Cinaedha, herenagh of Cork and Robartach<sup>7</sup>, son of Ferdomnach, successor of [St.] Colum-cille, slept in the Lord.—Domnall Ua Ruairc was killed by Domnall, son of Maelruanaigh, king of Fir-Manach.

<sup>3</sup> Mael-Sechlainn. Devotee (lit. tonsured) of (St.) Sechlainn (or Sechnall), disciple of St. Patrick. By omission of the infected s, the name was Maelechlainn (Melaghlin); which, in turn, in disregard of the origin, became Malachias and Malachy. See Vol. I., p. 8.

<sup>4</sup> Ua.—The reading of B (son) is also found in the Annals of Loch Ce (ad an.) But Ua (grandson), the lection of A, is given in both of them at the year 1059, where the killing of Mael-Sechlainn is entered. C follows A.

of this term, see O'Donovan, Four Masters, iii., p. 47 sq.

<sup>7</sup> Robartach.—Abbot of Kells, which at that time (Adamnan, p. 399) was apparently the official seat of the successor of St. Columba. He succeeded Mael-Muire, A.D. 1040 (supra). Dr. Reeves suggests (loc. cit.) that he was son of Ferdomnach, who died 1007 (=1008), supra.

the items respecting Lulach and Mac-Beathadh (the Macbeth of Shakespeare) should be reversed. Marianus Scotus, who had his information from a pilgrim that came straight from Scotland, writes in two autograph notes in his Chronicle (ad an. 1070 [=1058]): Macfinlaeg occiditur in Augusto. Lulag successit et occiditur in Martio: cui Moel-Coluim successit . . . Macfinlaeg regnavit annis xvii., ad missam

1059. <sup>1</sup>Along with.—The original is co (with), which the Four Masters changed into do (of). O'Donovan, accordingly, has "[one] of the Cinel-Eoghain;" which a native annalist would deem it superfluous to apply to a king of that clan.

Great war in Ard-Macha between Cumuscach<sup>1</sup> Ua Erodhain and Dubdaleithi, successor of [St.] Patrick, respecting the abbacy.—Cenannus was burned entirely, with its stone church.—Lethglenn was burned entirely, except the oratory.—Domnall Deisech [i.e., of the Desi], chief soul-friend of Ireland and Conn-na-mbocht<sup>2</sup> of Cluain-mac-Nois, were called to Christ:

Two years [and] ten ended,<sup>3</sup>
Five thousand without any defect—

They further add that this individual was smothered in the cave along with Ua Bric. The improbability of a Roscommon chief taking part in a South Waterford clan feud doubtless never occurred to them.

1060. <sup>1</sup> Cumascach.—In the list of the successors of Patrick (L. L. p. 42, and L. B. [Lebar Brec], Litho. ed. p. 220), he is given next after Dubdaleithi. The Annals of Innisfallen (ad an.) say the latter was deposed in favour of the former. See infra, A.D. 1064.

hUidri (Book of the Dun [cow]), an 11th cent. MS. in the Royal Irish Academy, and published in facsimile.

For his epitaph (Oroít do Chunn—a prayer for Conn) and a notice of his family, see Christian Inscriptions (fig. 147, p. 65 sq.).

<sup>3</sup> Ended.—Lit., in their excision. The preposition i with the possessive forms a native idiom, expressing state or condition. (See O'Donovan, Irish Grammar, p. 291; Windisch, Wörterbuch, p. 608–9). The computation (5012), including the current year, gives the Hebrew reckoning, A.M. 3952.

was burned entirely.

<sup>7</sup> Died in his pilgrimage.—That is, probably, in a religious house situated outside his own territory.

A.D. 1061. <sup>1</sup> Tigernach of Bairree.—The abbot under whom Marianus Scotus says he lived before his departure for the Continent (Chron. ad an. 1065=1043). He presided over the monastery of St. Finnian of Magh-bile (Moville), County Down.

Deputy-herenagh.—Literally, servant-herenagh ; one acting under (and doubtless nominated by) the herenagh.

rently, that official functions had been laid aside, the better to prepare for death. Herein it differed from dying in pilgrimage, that monks remained in their own, and clerics and laics entered local, establishments.

<sup>5</sup> Broke down.—Meaning, very probably, that he razed the royal residence and the fortifications.

1063. <sup>1</sup> Cathal.—Slain, according to the F. M., by his own son. The items of this entry are too discrepant to be included in one formula. Cuduiligh is said (in the F. M.) to have died a natural death. Suis inimicis can mean their enemies, with reference to all three. I have followed the gloss in restricting it to Mael-Sechlainn.

<sup>6</sup> On the Ides.—The Four Masters say that Niall and his son, Eochaidh, died on Thursday, Nov. 13, 1062. But Tigernach agrees with these Annals in placing the obit of Eochaidh at 1062, and that of his father at this year. Furthermore, what is decisive on the subject, in 1062, Nov.

13 fell on Wednesday; but in 1063, as the text states, on Thursday.

With regard to the lunar reckoning, it is worthy of note that its accuracy is confirmed by the old rule in Bede (De rat. temp. xxii.) “November in the Ides, 317.” Deduct the current day and add the January epact (as given above), 27=343. Divide by 59 (two consecutive lunations) and from the remainder, 48, subtract 30. This gives the 18 of the text. New Moon accordingly fell on Oct. 27.

Kalends of Jan. on 5th feria, 9th of the moon, A.D. [1064] Bis 1064. Dolghen Ua Sonai, herenagh of Ard-sratha; the Blind Ua Lonain, chief poet of the Men of Munster; Gilla-arrai Ua Maelmithigh, died in penance.—Cormac, herenagh of Ard-Breacain; Eochaidh Ua Doireid, herenagh of Domnach-mor of Magh-Itha, slept in the Lord.—Muircertach Ua Neill, king of Telach-og, was slain by the Ui-Cremtainn.—Donnchadh, son of Brian [Boruma], arch-king of Munster, (was deposed and) died in Rome in his pilgrimage.—Dubdaleithi (son of Mael-Muire), successor of Patrick, died on the Kalends of September [Sep. 1] in good penance.<sup>1</sup> Mael-Isu, son of Amalgaidh, took the abbacy.—Diarmait Ua Lorcaín, royal heir of Leinster, was killed by the Cenel-Eogain in Ulster.—Airdgar Mac Hereby are to be corrected the Calendars (e.g. Nicolas, Chron. of Hist.; Hampson, Med. Aevi Kal.) that place the Golden Number XIX. (1063 was the last year of the Cycle.) at October 26. It is accurately indicated in the Calendar, Embolismal Computus and Decemnovennal Tables appended to the printed editions of the above-named work of Bede.

O'Donovan queries whether "the 18th" refers to the reign of Niall. But at 1016 he had given the slaying of Niall's predecessor from these Annals. In the list of Kings of Ulidia in L. L. (p. 41 d) "42 or 50" years are assigned to Niall.

Marianus Scotus has: A.D. 1087 [=1065], Nial mac Eochada, rex Ulad, obiit Id. Nov. This postdates the obit by two years.

1064. <sup>1</sup>In good penance.—This perhaps signifies that Dubdaleithe acquiesced in his deposition (A.D. 1060), and devoted his remaining years exclusively to religious exercises.

<sup>2</sup> Mausoleum of the kings.—Called the cemetery of the kings, supra, A.D.
934 (=935). See Reeves, Ancient Churches of Armagh, p. 18.

<sup>3</sup> The son of Llywelyn.—Called Gru-fud in the Brut y Tywysogion (A.D.
1061), and Grifin in the Annales Cambriæ (A.D. 1063). In both he is stated to have fallen by the treachery of his own men.

<sup>4</sup> Echmarcach.—See Vol. I., p.
591, note 12. According to Marianus Scotus, he died in Rome. Donnchad, filius Briain, de Hibernia atque Ech- marcach, rex innarenn (? perhaps, in Manenn, of Manann), viri inter suos non ignobiles, Romam venientes obierunt (1087=1065).

<sup>5</sup> Eleventh.—This Cycle has been discussed in the Introduction.

<sup>6</sup> Third.—The second so-called Dionysian Great Cycle commenced
A.D. 532 (531 of text), supra.

<sup>7</sup> Four.—The reading in A is uii.
Concurrentes. The scribe, namely, not understanding the text, mistook
the two first letters of uii. for u.
O'Donovan (F. M., p. 887) gives Kal. 4 as the lection of C: meaning that New Year's Day fell on Wednes-

Lochlainn, king of Ailech, died in Telach-og and was [1064] buried in Ard-Macha, in the mausoleum of the kings.<sup>2</sup>—The son of Llywelyn,<sup>3</sup> king of the Britons, was killed by the son of James.—Echmarcach<sup>4</sup>, king of the Foreigners [of Dublin], died.

This is the first year of the eleventh<sup>5</sup> great Paschal Cycle from the formation of the world; but the commencement of the third<sup>6</sup> great Paschal Cycle from the Incarnation of the Lord. And it hath four<sup>7</sup> bissextile Concurrents and is the second year of the Indiction.

Kalends of Jan. on 7th feria, 20th of the moon, A.D. [1065] 1065. Dubtach, the Scotsman, chief soul-friend of Ireland and Scotland, rested in Ard-Macha:

For him there will be a dwelling roomy, noble,
Heaven the soul-friend found, it is seen,

Donnchadh Ua Mathgamna, king of Ulidia, was killed<sup>2</sup> in Bennchar by his own [subjects].—Domnall, herenagh of Lughbadh and the Herenagh of Druim, their death<sup>3</sup> [took place].—Aedh Ua Ualghairg took the kingship of day in 1064. But, as shown in the text, it fell on Thursday. Habet (not Kal.) is the word in the C. MS.

The Calendar use of Concurrents is explained in text-books of Chronology.

Bissextile also distinguishes this (the 9th) year from the 4th, 15th and 26th years of the Solar Cycle of 28. These three years (in the Old Style) have four Concurrents, but are not bissextile. The Indiction is correct.

1065. <sup>1</sup> Dubhtach —His connexion with Ireland is told in the Breviary of Aberdeen: In qua utriusque Veteris et Novi Testamenti precepta et leges accuratissime didicit (quoted in Ad-aman, p. 401). He probably died on a pilgrimage to Armagh.

The last line of the quatrain I am unable to translate. Thir may be for th[s]ir, continued, constant. O'Donovan renders it: "[In exchange] for his fair, thin-boarded domicile." His text is: ar a thir clár tana coemh (p. 886-7).

<sup>2</sup> Was killed.—Marianus Scotus, A.D. 1088 [=1066], says: in templo Bennchuir, verno tempore, occiditur. His slayer is given by name in the third next entry.

<sup>3</sup> Their death.—O'Connor reads Droma-Anec and gives the equivalent as Dromanecensis; taking a n-ec (their death) to be a factor in a local name. He adds (obierunt), to find a verb to complete the imaginary sense. Domnall and Herenagh, according to native idiom, are nominatives absolute.

<sup>4</sup> Enemy of [St.] Comgall.—The murder within the church was regarded as a personal affront to the patron, St. Comgall.

<sup>5</sup> Domnall Ua Loingsigh.—Marianus Scotus (ubi sup.) writes: i fel Tigernaeg Cluana eius occisus—slain on the feast of Tigernach of Cluain-eois (Clones, co. Monaghan). That is, (Monday) April 4. This corresponds with the verno tempore (p. 15, note 2, supra) of Donnchad's assassination. Strange, that no local chronicle noted the date.

<sup>6</sup> Another book.—This other book is probably the Annals of Boyle, which state that Donnchadh went to Rome on a pilgrimage in this year. Marianus Scotus (p. 14, note 4, supra) also says that he went to Rome in 1087 [= 1065].

Cenel-Eogain.—Brodur, the enemy of [St.] Comgall,<sup>4</sup> who [1065] slew the king [Donnchadh] in Bennchor, was killed by the king of Dal-Araidhe.—The son of Tadhg Ua Ceallaigh, king of Ui-Maine and Ua Flaithbertaigh, king of the West of Connacht, were slain by Aedh Ua Conchobair.—Domnall Ua Loingsigh,<sup>5</sup> king of Dal-Araidhe and Muircertach Ua Maelfhabaill, king of Carraic-Brachaidhe were killed by the Ui-Meith of Menna-Tire.—Leocan, son of Laidgnen, king of Gailenga, was killed by Conchobur Ua Mael-Sechlainn.—Echmhiledh Ua Ateidh, king of Ui-Echach, was killed by the Cenel-Eogain.

(Or it may be [that it is] on this Kalend [i.e. year] it were right for Donnchadh, son of Brian Boruma, to be, according to another book<sup>6</sup>. He seems, however, to have died in the past year, according to this book.)

Kalends of Jan. on 1st feria, 1st of the moon, A.D. [1066] 1066. Aed Ua Ruairc, king of Ui-Briuin, died straightway after rifling the Shrine of Patrick.<sup>1</sup>—Ceallach, son of Muircertach Ua Ceallaigh; Gilla-Braiti [Ua Ruairc], king of Ui-Briuin, the son of Senan [Ua Leochain], king of Gailenga; Gilla-Moninne,<sup>2</sup> son of Aedh great grandson of Ualgarg [Ua Ruairc], were slain.—Great nutcrop in all Ireland, so<sup>3</sup> that it impedes the rivers.—The successor

A.D. 519 (=520): Quies Darercae, quae Moninne nominata est. The Saint's name possesses a literary interest. In the so-called Chronicon Scotorum, Mac Firbis gives his original thus: Quies Darerca . . . . quae Moninne, Aninne sanatho postea nominata est (Marginal A.D. 514). The reading is: quae Moninne a Ninne sanato, etc. The explanation is given in the Book of Leinster (p. 271 c): "fili balb rathroisc aicce, ar cotissad a erlabra dó. Ocus issed toesech rolabair, idon: Nin, Nin. Unde dicebatur Moninne. Ocus Ninnine éices ainm in fhíled—A dumb poet fasted with her, in order that his speech might come to him. And what he first said is this, namely: Nin, Nin. Whence she was called Moninne (My Ninne). And Ninnine the sage (was) the name of the poet." He was the author of a beautiful poetical invocation of St. Patrick in the native tongue, preserved in the Book of Hymns.

<sup>3</sup> Both cess and donations.—Literally, between scruple and offerings. That the Screpal (from the Latin Scripulum) was coined money, can hardly be inferred from the distinction here made between itself and the offerings in kind. Compare the passage in the Confession of St. Patrick: Forte autem, quando baptizavi tot milia hominum, speraverim ab aliquo illorum vel dimedio [lege—ium] scriptule? Dicite mihi et reddam vobis. Also the expression in the sixth Canon of the Irish Synod published by Wasserscheleben (Die Bussordnungen der abendlandische Kirche, p. 141): duodecim discipuli [lege scripuli] usque viginti.

More likely, to judge from the Brehon Laws, the word represented a standard of value. The meaning, accordingly, would be that the sum was made up of the proceeds of a rate, supplemented by voluntary contrithe first time, so that he took away his full circuit [1068]Bis. Kalends of Jan. on 6th feria, 15th of the moon, A.D. [1070] 1070. Cathusach, son of Cairpre, herenagh<sup>1</sup> of Mungarit, died.—Murchadh, son of Diarmait,<sup>2</sup> king of Leinster and of the Foreigners, died<sup>3</sup> and was buried in Ath-cliath.—Ua hEochaiden, king of Dal-Araidhe, was slain by his own [tribesmen].—Fergal Ua Laidhgnen, herenagh of [F]othan, died.—Gilla-Patraic Ua Maelchothaigh perished by a premature death.—The abbot of Ia, namely, butions. This is confirmed by the entry under 1106 (infra), in which the apportionment of the levy is set forth.

1069. <sup>1</sup> Priest of Cell-dara.—That is, Chaplain of the monastery of the nuns of St. Brigit, Kildare.

1070. <sup>1</sup> Herenagh.—But the Annals of Innisfallen, which in Munster affairs are far more reliable than the Annals of Ulster, state that Cathusach was successor of Deacon Nesson; that is, abbot of Mungret, co Limerick.

<sup>3</sup> Died.—The Four Masters say his death took place “precisely on Sunday, the festival of Mary in winter.” But in this year Dec. 8 fell on Wednesday.

Kalends of Jan. on 7th feria, 26th of the moon, A.D. : [1071] 1071. The king of Ulidia, namely, Ua Flathrai,<sup>1</sup> was deposed by Ua Maelruanaigh<sup>2</sup> and by the Ulidians; but that [same] Ua Maelruanaigh was killed immediately in battle by Donnsleibhe Ua Eochadha.—Gilla-Crist Ua Clothocain, lector of Ard-Macha, rested in Christ.—Cell-dara and Glenn-da-locha and Cluain-dolcain were burned.

Kalends of Jan. on 1st feria, 7th of the moon, A.D. [1072] Bis. 1072. Mael-Muire Ua Muiregain, herenagh of Tuidhnigha, rested.—Gilla-Crist Ua Longain, steward of Munster, died.—Dubdil, successor of Brigit [i.e., abbess of Kildare], name, as given in the following year, was Cu-Uladh—Hound of Ulidia.

His predecessor, Ua Mathgamna, was slain in 1065, supra. This agrees with the regnal list in L.L. (p. 41), which assigns six years to Ua Flathrai.

1072. <sup>1</sup> Tuesday.—Marianus Scotus says he was slain on Monday, the 6th. Diarmait, rex Layen, viii. Idus Februarii, feria secunda, occisus (A.D. 1094=1072).

<sup>3</sup> The Franks.—That is, William the Conqueror and his forces. The Anglo-Saxon Chronicle (A.D. 1072) says that when William crossed the Tweed, Malcolm gave him hostages. Amongst these, we learn from a subsequent entry, A.D. 1093, was Donnchad (called Duncan in the Chronicle). He lived for twenty-one years at the English Court.

1073. <sup>1</sup> Bebinn. “Bevin ny [=ingen (daughter), a form retained in the present language] Brien in her pilgrimage died, in Rome, id est, Ardmagh,” C.

rested in Christ.—Diarmait, son of Mail-na-mbo, king of [1072] Bis. Leinster and of the Foreigners, fell in battle (the battle of Odhbha) by Conchobur Ua Mael-Sechlainn, king of Tara, and slaughter of Foreigners and of Leinstermen [was inflicted] around him (namely, on Tuesday<sup>1</sup> and on the 7th of the Ides [7th] of February).—Cu-Uladh Ua Flathrai<sup>2</sup> and Mac Assidha, king of Ui-Gobla, were killed by the [people of the] South of Bregha.—Ua Focarta, king of Eili, was killed by Ua Briain.—Ruaidhri Ua Canannain, king of Cenel-Conaill, was killed by Ua Maeldoraidh (namely, Oenghus).—The Franks<sup>3</sup> went into Scotland, so that they took away the son of the king of Scotland with them in hostageship.

Kalends of Jan. on 3rd feria, 18th of the moon, A.D. [1073] 1073. Bebinn,<sup>1</sup> daughter of Brian [Boruma], died in pilgrimage in Ard-Macha.—Concobhar Ua Mael-Sechlainn,<sup>2</sup> king of Tara, was killed by the son of Fland Ua Mael-Sechlainn in violation of the honour of the Staff of Jesus,<sup>3</sup> in presence of the Staff.<sup>3</sup>—Domnall, grandson of Ualgarg, chief of Ui-Duibhinnracht; Cuchaille Ua Finn, king of Fir-Rois; Cormac Ua Clothagain, steward of Munster, died in penance.—A hosting by Tairrdelbach [Ua Briain] into the Half of Conn, so that he carried off<sup>4</sup> countless spoil from<sup>5</sup> the Gailenga and killed Maelmordha Ua Cathusaigh, king of Bregha.—Sitriuc, son of Amhlam, [King of Dublin] and two grandsons of Brian [Boruma] were killed in [the Isle of] Manann.

<sup>2</sup> Staff of Jesus.—A crozier traditionally believed to have been given by our Lord to St. Patrick. At first preserved in Armagh, it was brought to Dublin at the end of the twelfth century, where it was destroyed by the Reformers in 1538. See O'Curry, MS. Materials, p. 606.

<sup>3</sup> In presence of the Staff.—From this expression it may be inferred that the assassination took place during Divine Service. The Annals of Innisfallen state that the son of Fland wrested the Staff from Conchobar and struck him with it, thereby causing his death. Being a relic, it was probably being borne at the time by the king in the procession of the Palms.

 the battle of Tara, 979 (=980), supra. Hereby is removed the “uncertainty” (arising from the A—MS.) which caused Dr. Todd (War of the Gaidhill, etc.,

 1075. Godfrey, son of Amhlam, son of Ragnall, king of Ath-cliath; Cinaeth Ua Conbeathad, chief of Cenel-Binnigh, died.—A hosting by Tairrdelbach and by the Half of Mogh<sup>1</sup> into the Half of Conn, till they reached Ath-fhirdeadh, so that the Airgialla inflicted the defeat of Ard-Monain upon Muircertach Ua Briain, a place where whole of the city. Armagh consisted of the Fort, or Close (locum in alto positum, Book of Armagh, fol. 20 d), and suburbs (suburbana ejus, ib.) The latter were called Thirds from their number. See Reeves, Ancient Churches of Armagh, p. 14.

1075. <sup>1</sup> Half of Mogh.—The Southern half of Ireland. So called from Mogh Nuadat (whose first name was Eogan Taidlech), father of Ailill Olum, the father of Eogan Mor (named from the grandfather), eponymous head of the Eoganachts. (L.L. p. 319 b).

<sup>2</sup> Nights.—Night, the context shows, in these Annals and elsewhere, sometimes signifies by synecdoche the νοχθήμερον, period, from nightfall to nightfall (cf. se'n-night, fortnight). Festiva sancti Columbae nox et solemnis dies nos invenit valde tristificatos (Adamnan, Vita Col., iii. 45). Here the singular shows that nox and dies are taken collectively. The Tripartite Life of St. Patrick mentions the forty nights of Lent (Part ii). The same expression glosses forty nights in the Senchas Mor (i. 196). The Book of Armagh (folio 18 c) has three nights (that is, nights and days). See Ideler, Handbuch der math. u. tech. Chronologie, Berlin, 1825, vol. i. p. 79 sq.

<sup>2</sup> Daughter of the abbot.—O'Donovan (p. 910) equates Aillbe and the successor of St. Moninne (of Newry), and infers that this is an instance of a married woman being an abbess. But the text of the Four Masters does not necessarily mean this. It can signify that Colcu, Aillbe and the abbess died. This is put beyond doubt by the present entry, where the meaning is clearly that Aillbe and the abbess and Gilla-Patraic, all in fact.

Kalends of Jan. on 3rd feria, 24th of the moon, A.D. [1079] 1079. Ceallach<sup>1</sup> Ua Ruanadha, chief bardic professor of Ireland; Cu-Midhe,<sup>1</sup> grandson of Lorcan, king of Fern-magh; the son of Gilla-Digde<sup>2</sup> Ua Lorcain, vice-abbot of Ard-Macha; [Mael-Chiarain]<sup>3</sup> the son of Conn, head of the poor of Cluain-mac-Nois, rested in peace.

Kalends of Jan. on 4th feria, 5th of moon, A.D. 1080. [1080 Bis.]
 Donn Ua Lethlobuir, king of Fern-magh, was killed by the Ui Lathen on Sliab-[F]uait.<sup>1</sup>—Ua Ciardai, king of Cairbri, died.—Ceallach [Celsus], successor of Patrick, was born.—Derbfhorgaill, daughter of the son of Brian [Boruma], wife of Diarmait, son of Mail-na-mbo, died in Imlech.—Eochaidh Ua Merligh, king of Fern-magh, was killed through treachery.<sup>2</sup>—Donnsleibhe Ua Eochada went into Munster with the nobles<sup>3</sup> of Ulidia along with him for the sake of stipend.<sup>4</sup>—The defeat of the Ford of Ergal by the side of Clochar [was inflicted] upon the Fir-Manach by Domnall Ua Lochlainn and by the Men of Magh-Itha, wherein fell the persecutors<sup>5</sup> of Ard-Macha, namely, Sitriuc Ua Coemain and the son of Niall Ua Serraiigh and others:

(The Ford of Ergal [it is],
 Wherein heroes cause<sup>6</sup> the dispersing;
 A multitude shall be without delight
 From the conflict of the Ford of Ergal.)

The Annals of Innisfallen, at 1078, state that Donnsleibhe was dethroned and went to O'Brien, his place being taken by (Aed) Meranach Ua Eochadha.

<sup>5</sup> The persecutors (ingrinntide[-i]).—O'Connor, to whom nothing apparently presented any difficulty, reads in grainntide Ard, and translates by Granarii custos Armachanus! The translator of C. taking his text to be = i n-glinntib, renders it: "in the valleys."

<sup>6</sup> Wherein heroes cause.—In the original, i n-diongnat laeich; which the Four Masters, according to O'Donovan, transcribe in drong naittlaic. The editor, however, renders the words [?] by "people shall hereafter be there (dispersed)!" Furthermore (to judge from the printed text), they give the verse in two lines, ending respectively in aterb-haid and Erghail. But it is a quatrain in Rannaihacht bec gairet,—heptasyllabic lines ending in dissyllables. The metre is called gairet (short), at variance with the Ulidian regnal list (L.L., p. 41), in making Ua Mathgamna king. The correct version is probably that of the Annals of Innisfallen, in which it is stated

Kalends of Jan. on 6th feria, 16th of the moon, A.D. [1081]
 1081. Mac Ingerree, king of Conaille, was killed by the Men of Fern-magh.—Ma[c] Craith Ua Ocain, steward<sup>1</sup> of Cenel-Fergusa; Maelmithigh Ua Maelruanaigh, king of Ui-Tuirtri, by the Cenel-Binnigh of the Glen; Ua Uathmarain, king of Fir-Li, were slain.—Ua Mathgamna,<sup>2</sup> king of Ulidia, was killed by Ua Eochadha in Dun-da-lethglas.—Gilla-Crone,<sup>3</sup> eminent priest of Ard-Macha; Ua Robartaigh, herenagh of Condere; Flann Ua Lorcaín, eminent priest of Lughbaid,<sup>4</sup> slept in penance.—Cork with its churches and Cell-da-lua were wasted by fire.

Kalends of Jan. on 1st feria, 9th of the moon, A.D. [1082]
 1082. Gilla-Crist Ua Maelfhabaill, king of Carraic-Bracaidhe; Finnochadh, son of Amhalgaidh, chief of Clann-Bresail; Domnall, son of Conchobur Ua Briain; Cathal, son of Aedh Ua Conchobair; Flaithbertach Ua Maeladuín, king of Lurg; Uidhrin, son of Mael-Muire, chief of Cenel-Feradhaigh, were all slain.

Kalends of Jan. on 1st feria, 9th of the moon, A.D. [1083]
 1083. Domnall Ua Canannain, king of Cenel-Conaill, was slain by his own [tribesmen].—Aedh Ua Mael-that Gall-na-gorta Ua Mathgamna was slain in Downpatrick by Donn-sleibhe Ua Eochadha.

The Four Masters reverse the order of this and the preceding obit, and state (doubtless by an error of transcription) that Ua Robartaigh (O'Roarty) was herenagh of Louth.

1082. <sup>1</sup> Domnall; Cathall.—These two bracketted items are found in Tigernach and the Annals of Boyle.

<sup>2</sup> Fell in battle.—The so-called Annals of Loch Ce (adan.) state that O'Connor died a natural death (mortuus est).

shows that Aed, like Donn̄sleibhe, was in the service of O'Brien.

made by a king after his inauguration.

Sechlainn, king of Ailech; Muircertach Ua Cairill, [1083] herenagh of Dun, doctor of jurisprudence and of history; Tadhg Ua Taidhg, herenagh<sup>1</sup> of Cell-da-lua, rested in peace.—Gilla-Moninne, herenagh of Lughbaidh, was slain.—Aedh Meranach<sup>2</sup> was drowned at Limerick.—The king of Cenel-Ennai was killed by Donnchadh Ua Mael-Sechlainn, [that is] by the king of Ailech.—Domnall Ua Lochlainn took the kingship of Cenel-Eogain. A royal foray<sup>3</sup> [was made] by him upon Conaille, so that he took away great cattle-spoil and gave stipend out of that foray to the Men of Fern-magh.

<sup>5</sup> The 14th.—The Four Masters (ad an.) say the 4th of the Kalends [Oct. 29]. They overlooked x. in the xiiii. of their original (MS. A).

<sup>6</sup> Gilla-Patraic.—Devotee of [St.] Patrick. He was consecrated in London in 1073 by Lanfranc, Archbishop of Canterbury, in accordance with the request of the Dublin clergy. He made a profession to Lanfranc, from whom he received letters dignas valde memoriae (Appendix to Anglo-Saxon Chronicle), to be delivered to the kings of Ireland.

1085. <sup>1</sup> Superior.—Literally, successor; but employed here and elsewhere in the secondary sense of superior (abbot, or bishop, or both). Gormgal was an abbot.

numerous (on the 14th<sup>5</sup> of the Kalends of November [Oct. 19].—Domnall Ua Gailmredhaigh was killed by Domnall Ua Lochlainn.—Gilla-Patraic,<sup>6</sup> bishop of Ath-cliath, was drowned.

Kalends of Jan. on 4th feria, 1st of the moon, A.D. [1085]

1086. Mael-Isu Ua Brolcain,<sup>1</sup> master of wisdom and of as grantor of land to [St.] Drostan, in the second Gaelic charter in the Book of Déar (a ninth cent. Evangelistarium in the Public Library, Cambridge). His obit was thus doubtless recorded in the Columban Annals; whence it passed into the present Chronicle.

1086. <sup>1</sup> Mael-Isu Ua Brolcain.—Of Mael-Isu's poems in the native tongue, that in the Book of Hymns, with the rubric Mael-Isu dixit, may perhaps be reckoned as one. It consists of three quatrains, praying to the Holy Ghost through Christ. The final distich embodies well the Filioque clause of the Nicene Creed:

A Isu, ronnoeba, Rensœra do Spirit.

"O Jesus! may Thy Spirit us sanctify, us save."

Another is contained in the Yellow Book of Lecan (a MS. in the Library of Trinity College, Dublin, classed H. 2, 16), col. 336, with the heading Mael-Isu [MS. form is Ihu.] h Ua Brolchain cecinit. It is an invocation of the Archangel Michael in nine stanzas.

A third is given in Lebar Brecc (Lith. ed., p. 101), with the inscriphowever, not of a heavy severe fit"). Thus misled, Colgan perpetuated the error: Nulla tamen infirmitate correptus (AA. SS., p. 108). His version has been adopted by O'Connor (note at A.D. 1086 in his edition of the Annals of Ulster).

<sup>5</sup> Lay-brother.—Literally, ex-laic. The athloech was the laicus, or frater conversus, of the Latin Monastic Rules: a monk who was neither in Holy Orders, nor bound to recitation of the Office.

The (Penitential) Commutations (in Rawlinson B. 512, a MS. in the Bodleian Library, Oxford) have: Arra na n-athlaech ocus na n-athlae- ces cetumus.—The commutation of lay-brothers and lay-sisters (is to be set forth) first (folio 42 d). As Ua Foelain (O'Phelan) was member of a ruling family, his humility appeared remarkable in the selection of the lowest grade in the monastery.

<sup>6</sup> Tuesday.—July 14 fell on that day in 1086. For night, see 1075, note 2, supra. La (day) being monosyllabic, aidchi was employed here and in the preceding quatrain to produce a line of seven syllables.

<sup>7</sup> On the feast of James.—The incidence of the festival is taken perhaps from the Calendar of Oengus (where the saint is called a bishop).

 The Four Masters read Iar ndó fichet
adbath “after two (and) twenty died.”
 But the change can be detected with certainty. The metre is Debide (consisting, namely, of heptasyllabic lines). The syllable short in the reading of the Four Masters accordingly betrays the line in question. The 29th of the July moon coincided in 1086 with the 14th of the solar

<sup>4</sup> Translation, etc.—The relics of St. Nicholas of Myra were carried off from the church of Myra by some merchants of Bari, in Italy and placed in the church of St.
Stephen at Bari, on the 9th of May,
in this year.

Lent].—O'Conor, by an inexcusable blunder, renders this by Dominica in Quinquagesima. In 1088, Easter fell upon April 16. Quinquagesima was, accordingly, Feb. 26. The first Sunday of Lent, as the text correctly states, coincided with the feast of St. Ciaran, March 5th.

O'Donovan's Shrovetide Sunday
(F. M. p. 931), which is the same as O'Conor's Quinquagesima, was doubtless taken from C.

Kalends of Jan. on 7th feria, 4th of the moon, A.D. [1088] Bis.
1088.—Cathalan Ua Forreidh, master of wisdom and of piety, on the third of the Nones [5th] of March rested in peace, in Imlech-ibhair, the Sunday of the beginning [of Lent]:<sup>1</sup>

Cathalan, the devotee just,
He was a community elder<sup>2</sup>, he was a senior;<sup>2</sup>
To heaven, into its sunny mansion bright,
He went on the feast [March 5] of Ciaran of Saighir.—

A hosting [was made] by Domnall, son of Mac Lochlainn, [namely] by the king of Ailech, into Connacht, so that Ruaidhri gave the pledges of Connacht to him and they went, both of them, into Munster, until they burned Limerick and the plain as far as Dun-ached [and] carried away with them the head of the son of Cailech<sup>3</sup> [Ua Ruairc] and razed Cenn-coradh and so on<sup>4</sup>.—Tighernach Ua Broein,<sup>5</sup> herenagh of Cluain-mac-Nois, rested in Christ.—Great slaughter [was inflicted] upon the Foreigners of Ath-cliath and of Loch Carman and of Port-lairgi by the Ui-Eachach of Munster, on the day they designed to pillage Cork.—Mael-Isu Ua Mael-Ghiric,<sup>6</sup> archpoet of Ireland died.

played to eke out the line. The sruth was the senior of the Latin Rule: a monk who acted as counsellor to the abbot and spiritual director to the brethren.

<sup>3</sup> Son of Cailech.—That is, Donchad, son of Cailech O'Rourke, who was slain in the battle of Monecro-nock, co. Kildare (supra, A.D. 1084). Tigernach (sub eod. an.) states that his head was carried to Limerick.

<sup>4</sup> And so on.—This expression signifies that the account which the compiler had before him was more diffuse.

<sup>5</sup> Tighernach Ua Broein.—The well-known compiler of the Annals of Tigernach. It seems strange that a curt obit like this is all that was devoted to him in the present Chronicle.

1089. <sup>1</sup> Were burned.—They had probably fled to the church for protection.

<sup>2</sup> Some of the nobility.—Literally, a lordly portion. The Four Masters state that twelve tanists of noble tribes fell. (For the noble and free tribes, see O'Donovan, Book of Rights, pp. 174-5.)

O'Connor misreads the text Cuit Gernaide for Fernmuighe and translates: Praedium Gernadiense contra Fernmoyenses. C. has "the battle of Gernaide"; but the battle was fought at Sliab-Fuait (the Few mountains, co. Armagh).

<sup>3</sup> Grandson.—He was son of Domnall, who died 1087 (supra).

1090. <sup>1</sup> Ogdoad.—O Conor translates Ogdada by novae numerationis, with a reference to A.D. 963 (=964), supra. At the place referred to, he renders lan tadchoir by plenaria numeratio poetica; because, according to him, the Irish poets numbered 500 years from St. Patrick's advent in 432 down to the year 963! This is scarcely worth refutation. Tadchoir is a well-authenticated word, meaning reversion, return (ni fil taidchur—there is not return: na bid taidchur—let there not be return. Würzburg Codex Paulinus, fol. 3a). Hence, in a secondary sense, it signifies Cycle. The full Cycle means the great Paschal Cycle of Kalends of Jan. on 2nd feria, 15th of the moon, A.D. [1089] 1089.—Lusk was burned and nine score persons were burned<sup>1</sup> in its stone church by the men of Munster.—Cell-dara was burned thrice in this year.—Donnchadh, son of Domnall the Fat, king of Leinster, was slain by his own [kinsmen].—Muircertach Ua Laithen, king of Sil-Duibhthire, died.—Some of the nobility<sup>2</sup> of the men of Fern-magh and a multitude besides were killed by the Ui-Echach and by the Ulidians on Sliab-[F]uait.—Donnchadh, grandson<sup>3</sup> of Gilla-Patraic, king of Ossory, was slain by his own [kinsmen].—Gilla-Patraic Ua Celecain, vice-abbot of Ard-Macha, died on the night of great Christmas.

532 years, as distinct from the solar and lunar cycles of 28 and 19 respectively. It is fancifully employed A.D. 963 (=964), supra, to denote that a period equal thereto elapsed from the coming of St. Patrick, in 432, down to that year.

Ogdoad (ὀγδοάς) signifies the eight first years of the Cycle of Nineteen. (The remaining eleven were called Hendecad, ἐνδεκάς.) The last year thereof being sufficiently designated by the epact, xxvi., this formal identification was superfluous. It was taken apparently from the margin of a Paschal Table. (See

of the method in which these Annals were compiled. By omission of the respective means and of the persons whereby death was inflicted, four independent items, given as such in the Four Masters, are included in one formula. It also well illustrates the liability of such summaries to serious error. For the Annals of Innisfallen, an authority beyond question in Munster affairs, state that Mac Carthy was killed in the preceding year.

king of the Eoganacht of Cashel, died.—Flaithbertach, [1092] son of Ruaidhri Ua Ruadhacain, was slain by the Ui-Echach.—Domnall, son of Amhalghaidh, successor of Patrick, [went] upon circuit of Cenel-Eoga in, so that he took away his due.—The Close of Ard-Macha<sup>2</sup> with its church was burned on the 4th of the Kalends of September [Aug. 29] and a street of the Great Third and a street of the Third of the Saxons.—Enna, son of Diarmait, king of Ui-Ceinnselaigh, was slain by his own [kinsmen<sup>3</sup>].—Conn-mac Ua Cairill, archbishop of Connacht, rested.—Mael-Isu Ua hArrachtain, successor of [St.] Ailbe,<sup>4</sup> rested in peace.

Kalends of Jan. on 7th feria, 29th of the moon, A.D. [1093] 1093.—Donnchadh Mac Carthaigh,<sup>1</sup> king of the Eoganacht of Cashel; Trenair Ua Ceallaigh, king of Bregha; Aedh Ua Baighellain, king of Fern-mhagh; Aedh, son of Cathal Ua Conchobair, royal heir of Connacht, all were slain.—Aedh, herenagh of Daimliac-Ciannain; Ailill Ua Niallain, successor of [St.] Ciaran<sup>2</sup> and of [St.] Cronan and of [St.] Mac Duach; Fothud,<sup>3</sup> archbishop of Scotland, rested in Christ.—The Sil-Muiredaigh were expelled from Connacht by Muircertach Ua Briain.—Aedh Ua Canannain, king of Cenel-Conaill, was blinded by Domnall Ua Lochlainn, [that is] by the king of Ailech.—Mael-Coluim, son of

Of the four persons here mentioned, the two Aedhs are given in the Annals of Loch Ce. Ua Baighellain, they say, died a natural death. To Ua Conchobair is appended omnes occisi sunt! This affords strong presumption that their compiler had the Annals of Ulster before him. If so, it is a clear proof that he did not understand his original.

and of [St.] Mac Duach.—That is, Abbot-bishop of Clonmacnoise, Tomgraney and Kilmacduagh. O'Donovan (p. 945) erroneously takes the F. M. to mean three different persons.

from noi, nine. According to the Anglo Saxon Chronicle, A.D. 1093, when the queen heard of the death of her husband and son, she went with her priest to the church, received the last rites and prayed God that she might give up the ghost.

In the Brut y Tywysogion (A.D.
1091), it is stated she prayed that she might not survive and God heard her prayer, for by the seventh day she was dead.

<sup>5</sup> Into Connacht.—Their expulsion by O'Brien forms the second entry of this year.

Donnchadh, archking of Scotland and Edward, his son, [1093] were killed by the Franks (namely, in Inber-Alda, in Saxonland). His queen, moreover, Margaret, died of grief therefor before the end of a novena.<sup>4</sup>—The Sil-Muiredaigh again [came] into Connacht<sup>5</sup> without permission [of Ua Briain].—Great crop in this year.

Kalends of Jan. on 1st feria, 10th of the moon, A.D. [1094] 1094.—Flaithbertach Ua Ateidh, king of Ui-Eachach, was blinded by Donnchadh Ua Eochadha, [namely] by the king of Ulidia.—A hosting by Muircertach Ua Briain to Ath-cliaith, so that he expelled Geoffrey Meranach from the kingship of the Foreigners and killed Domnall Ua Mael-Sechlainn, king of Tara.—Slaughter of good persons of the Airthir (that is, including Ua Fedecain and including Donn, son of Oengus) was committed by Ulidians.—Ruaidhri Ua Donnacain, king of Aradh; Concobur Ua Conchobhair, king of Ciannachta, died in penance.—A defeat [was inflicted] by the Sil-Muiredaigh upon Thomond, wherein fell three hundred, or a little more.—Domnall,<sup>1</sup> successor of [St.] Patrick, [went] upon circuit of Munster for the first time, so that he took away his full circuit [-dues] of cess, along with donations.—Donnchadh,<sup>2</sup> son of Mael-Coluim, king of Scotland, was killed by his own brothers (namely, by Domnall and by Edmond) in treachery.—Great severity of weather in all Ireland, whereof arose dearth.

1094. <sup>1</sup> Domnall, etc.—This visitation is not mentioned in the Annals of Innisfallen.

<sup>2</sup> Donchadh, etc.—He had, according to the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, taken forcible possession of the throne, on the death of his uncle, in the preceding year. The same Chronicle says (A.D. 1095) that he was slain at the instigation of his uncle, Dufenal [Domnall], who (A.D. 1094) thus succeeded him. As this agrees with the Innisfallen Annals, which omit mention of the brothers, it is more likely to be correct.

for the exercise of episcopal funcbility, a layman, perhaps a monk.

 His place apparently remained vacant until 1109 (infra), when it was assumed by Caincomrach O'Boyle.

<sup>2</sup> Great fear.—See 771 (=772), 798 (=799), supra. The Four Masters state that the fear arose because the Feast (Decollation) of John the Baptist (August 29) fell on Friday in 1096. But this is puerile; every festival must fall four times on the same day within the solar Cycle of 28 years. According to the so-called Vision of Adamnan (L.B., p. 258b-259b), great havoc of the men of Ireland was to be wrought by a fiery ploughshare, when the anniversary in question should fall on Friday, in a Bissextil and Embolismal year, at the end of a Cycle. The three first-named conditions were literally verified in the present year. The year was also to-

Colum Ua Anradhain, herenagh of Ros-ailithir ; Flann Ua Muirecain, herenagh of Aentruim, slept in Christ.—Mathgamain Ua Segdhai, king of Corcoduibhne ; Conchobur Ua Anniaraidh, king of Ciannachta and Ua Cein, king of Ui-mic-Cairthinn, mutually fell in combats.—Great fear [fell] <sup>2</sup>upon the men of Ireland before the feast of John of this year, until God spared [them] through the fastings of the successor of Patrick and of the clergy of Ireland besides.—Ua Maelchothaigh, son of Dubhgall, was killed by Ua Inneirghi.<sup>3</sup>—Muircertach Ua Dubhdai, king of Ui-Amhalghadha, was killed by his own [kinsmen].—Mottadhan Ua Mottadhain, king of Sil-Anmchada, died.—Cu-Uladh Ua Celecain (namely, royal heir of Airgialla) was killed by the Fifth of Ireland (that is, by Ulster).—Gilla-Ossen,<sup>4</sup> son of Mac Corten, king of Delbna, was slain.—Ua Cathail, herenagh of Tuaimgrene, rested in Christ.—Eogan Ua Cernaigh, herenagh of Daire, rested on the nineteenth<sup>5</sup> of the Kalends of January [Dec. 14].

Kalends of Jan. on 5th feria, 13th of the moon, A.D. 1097.—Lerghus Ua Cruimthir, successor of [St.] Comgall,<sup>1</sup> died after most excellent penance.—Tadhg, son of Ruaidhri Ua Concobair, royal heir of Connacht, was slain by his own [kinsmen].—Flannacan the Red, herenagh of Ros-Comain, rested in peace.—The belfry of Mainister wards the end, being the fourteenth, of the Cycle of Nineteen. Assuming that the prophecy was well-known, these coincidences were sufficiently striking to account for the popular terror.

17). Ossan is given in the List of Deacons in L. L. (p. 366e).

<sup>5</sup> Nineteenth.—The F.M. say the eighteenth. But against them are to be placed A, B, C (which last has 19 Kal. Jan.; not, as O'Donovan, loc. cit., says, 9 Kal. Jan.) and the Annals of Loch Ce (ad an.).

1097. <sup>1</sup> Successor of [St.] Comgall.—That is, Abbot of Bangor, co. Down.

<sup>4</sup> Superior.—Literally, successor (of St. Fechin of Fore, co. Westmeath). The Four Masters render religiosus by riaghloir ("moderator," O'Donovan, ii. 959)! The meaning is that Ronan laid aside the abbacy and became a simple monk (presumably in the same monastery).

of Cashel, see Lanigan, Eccl. Hist. of Ireland, Vol. iii., p. 455, sq.

<sup>8</sup> Mac Marais.—Very probably, he who wrote the second charter of the Book of Kells; Oraid do Mac Maras tróg ro scrib, etc., “A Prayer for Mac Maras, the wretched, who wrote,” etc.

note. See Reeves, Adamnan, p. 400.

The Annals of Loch Ce (ad an.) omit the obit of Mac Marais and retain obierunt.

Both [forces] went to the Plain of Ard-Macha (namely, to Cell-na-Conraire), so that they were a week in leaguer against Ard-Macha. Domnall Ua Lochlainn with the North of Ireland [was] during that space in Ui-Bresail-Macha, face to face<sup>2</sup> against them. Howbeit, when the Men of Munster were tired out, Muircertach went to Aenach-Macha and to Emhain and around to Ard-Macha, so that he left eight ounces of gold upon the altar and promised eight score cows. And he turns into Magh-Cobha again (namely, not having obtained [his request<sup>3</sup>]) and leaves the Fifth of Leinster and a detachment of the Men of Munster therein. But he applied himself to pillaging in Dal-Araidhe, so that he lost<sup>4</sup> there Donnchadh, son of Toirrdelbach and the son of Ua Conchobuir, King of Ciaraidhe and Ua Beoain and others most excellent<sup>5</sup>. <sup>3</sup>Received Holy Orders.—Literally, went under degrees. Cellach (usually called by the meaningless Latin alias, Celsus) was, it thus appears, one of the eight intruded laymen mentioned in St. Bernard's Life of St. Malachy. In addition, he was ordained per saltum and, being but 26 years old, under the canonical age, which in the Irish Church, according to the Collectio Canonum Hibernensis (III. 11), was 30 years for the priesthood. As a set-off, perhaps, to those irregularities, the Orders were not conferred until Quarter-Tense Saturday, which fell on September 23 in 1105. By Men of Ireland are accordingly to be understood the immediate adherents of the person thrust into the succession.

alive, it will follow that the present event, though recorded in connexion with the Munster visitation, took place after the death of O'Boyle.

In addition, Ceilach's assumption of the primacy had, according to the present Annals, been acquiesced in by the southern moiety of Ireland.

<sup>6</sup> Bishop of Ard-Macha.—That is, without territorial jurisdiction. He had been consecrated as suffragan of Domnall on Whitsunday, 1099 (supra).

<sup>2</sup> Wednesday.—The date is thus fixed, because the feast of St. Patrick fell on Sunday in this year.

Ireland.—Caincomruc Ua Baighill, eminent bishop of [1106] Ard-Macha,<sup>6</sup> rested in peace.—Etgair, king of Scotland, died.

(“Donell<sup>7</sup> Mac Rory O’Conor deposed by Murtagh O’Bryan and put Tirlagh, his cossen, in his place to be king.”)

Kalends of Jan. on 3rd feria, 4th of the moon, A.D. [1107] 1107. Snow of a day and a night fell<sup>1</sup> [on] the Wednesday<sup>2</sup> [March 13] before the feast of Patrick, so that there ensued destruction of cattle in Ireland.—Cenn-coradh was burned (by lightning) between the two Easters<sup>3</sup> [April 14–April 21], together with sixty vats of mead and bragget.—Conchobur, son of Donnsléibhe [Ua Eochadha], royal heir of Ulidia, was killed by the Men of Fern-Magh.—A defeat [was inflicted] by the Ui-Bresail upon the Ui-Meith, wherein fell a slaughter of them, including their king, namely, Aedh Ua Innreachtaigh.—Cathusach Ua Tuammain, king of the Ui-Briuin of Archaille, was wounded by the Ui-Cremhthainn, so that he died thereof. Eogan, son of Mac Riabaigh, was killed in revenge of him.—Excessive wet bad weather in this year, so that it destroyed the crops.—Mael-Patraic Ua Drucaín took the lectorship of Ard-Macha on the day of the feast of [St.] Ailbe and of [St.] Molaisse of Daimh-inis [Sep. 12]. Mael-Coluim Ua Brolchain received episcopal consecration<sup>4</sup> after the morrow.—Peace of a year was made by Cellach, successor of Patrick, between Murchadh Ua Briain and Domnall, son of Mac Lochlainn.

Kalends of Jan. on 4th feria, 15th of the moon, A.D. [1108 Bis.] 1108. Limerick was burned by lightning.—Domnall Ua Anbeith, king of Ui-Meith; Domnall Ua Ruairc, king of Ui-Briuin, were slain.<sup>1</sup>—Ceallach, successor of Patrick, <sup>3</sup> Two Easters.—That is, Easter Sunday and Low Sunday. The latter was called in Irish Minchaisc, little Easter (1109 infra).

formula is retained with only one of the two names in the Annals of Loch Ce; proving that the compiler did not understand the original.

Adbur with the genitive signifies idiomatically one qualified by descent, or otherwise, for an office. After the death of his father, Dubdaleithe, in 1064 (supra), Aedh's claim was successively set aside in favour of Mail-Isu and Domnall, sons of Amalgaid. He was too old for election when Domnall died.

1109. <sup>1</sup> Second day.—In diebus. O'Connor. Little Easter he translates by Pentecostes. But this was an oversight, as at 1107 he gives Dominica in Albis. The same criteria are noted at 918 (=919), supra.

[went] upon circuit of Connacht the first time, so that he [1108] took away his full demand.—Oengus Ua Cleirichen, steward of Dal-Cais; Ceallach Ua Coemórain, successor of [St.] Cainnech,<sup>2</sup> died.—A gust of wind came<sup>3</sup> on the 3rd of the Nones [3rd] of September.—A house was seized by Ua Mathgamna and by Ua Maelruanaigh<sup>4</sup> upon Goll Garbhraidhe (namely, Eochaidh, son of Donnsluibhe Ua Eochadha), that is, the king of Ulidia and he was beheaded by them.—Aedh, son of Dubdaleithi (namely, deputy-herenagh of Ard-Macha), one eligible to be successor<sup>5</sup> of Patrick, died.—Great oak-crop throughout all Ireland.—A sappy year with good weather and abundance of corn and of fruit [was] this year.—Inis-Ua-Labradha was razed by the Fir-Manach.

Kalends of Jan. on 6th feria, 26th of the moon, A.D. [1109] 1109. And Easter [fell] upon the 7th of the Kalends of May [April 25] and little Easter [upon] the 2nd day<sup>1</sup> of Summer [May 2] and the feast of Mochoemoc of Liath upon the Saturday of the Beginning [of Lent,<sup>2</sup> March 13].

Gilla-Ailbe Ua Ciarmaic, king of Aine-Cliach, died.—Mael-Isu Ua Cuilen, eminent bishop of the North of Ireland; Oengus Ua Domnallain, chief soul-friend of the Community of Colum-cille, died.—Slaughter of the Ui-Bresail [took place] around their king, that is, around <sup>2</sup> Beginning [of Lent].—It was the Saturday before the first Sunday in Lent. All these data, which are so valuable for determining the year, have been omitted by the Four Masters.

The equivalence of Init (gen. initi, —e), Initium and Lent is shown in the following excerpts from Calendars:

Viii. Id. [Feb.]—Primus dies forsa m-bi prim [uathad] esc[a]i Init—[Feb.] 6. First day on which is the first [day] of the moon of Lent (L. B. Cal. of Oengus, p. 80).

Vi. Id. [Feb.]—Primus dies forsa m-bi Init—[Feb.] 6. First day on which is Lent (ib.)

Vi. Id. [Feb.]—Initii principium (Cal. appended to Bede's works).

Vi. Id. [Feb.]—Primitus incepit ieiunandi tempus adortum (Metrical Cal. Galba, Brit. Mus., Hampson: Med. Aevi Kal., p. 399).

Vi. Id. [Feb.]—Prima Quadragesima[e] Dominica (Cal. Vitellius, ib., p. 423).

In the Calendar, the Golden Number XVI. stands opposite Feb.

<sup>3</sup> To attack. — Literally, upon

<sup>5</sup> Malediction.—According to an entry in the F.M., Murchad had pillaged Fir-Rois and killed the king, in violation of the Staff of Jesus and the successor of Patrick the same year.

Dartin and the Ui-Echach were overthrown by the Ui- [1109]
Meith and by the Men of Fern-magh.—A hosting by Muircertach Ua Briain in aid of Murchadh Ua Mael-Sechlainn, so that he harried some of Ui-Briuin.—A hosting also by Domnall Ua Lochlainn with the North of Ireland to Sliab-[F]uait, until Cellach, successor of Patrick, made peace of a year between Ua Briain and Ua Lochlainn : so that the North of Ireland went after that to the Plain of Ui-Bresail, to attack<sup>3</sup> the Ulidians who were in Magh-Cobha, until the Ulidians gave up to them the three pledges they themselves chose.—Cocrich, superioress<sup>4</sup> [of the Community] of [St.] Samhthainn of Cluain-Bronaigh, rested.—Aedh Ua Ruairc went twice into the camp of Murchadh Ua Mael-Sechlainn, so that he inflicted slaughter through the malediction<sup>5</sup> of the Community of Patrick.—
Slaughter of the Ui-Meith [took place] around their king, namely, Goll Bairche and some of the Men of Fern-Magh fell by the Ui-Bresail and by the Ui-Echach.—Domnall Mac Gilla-Patraic the Red, king of Ossory, was killed by another youth in playing a game.—Donnchadh Ua Duibdirma died.

(Gilla-Patraic<sup>6</sup> Ua Selbaigh, herenagh of Cork, dies.)

Kalends of Jan. on 7th feria, 7th of the moon, [1110]
A.D. 1110. Echtigern Ua Ferghail, a very select lay-brother,<sup>1</sup> rested in peace.—Gilla-Coluim Ua Maelmuaidh, king of Fir-Ceall, was strangled.—Cormac, son of Mac Ulcha, herenagh of Cuil-rathain, died in penance.—(The Ulidians pillaged Mucnom to its centre.—)Flann Ua Aedha, successor of [St.] Eine of Ara, died.—Maelruanaigh
Ua Machainen, king of Mughdoirn, was slain.<sup>2</sup>—Murchadh, <sup>6</sup> Gilla-Patraic, etc.—Given in C.; also in the Annals of Innisfallen (ad an.; where he is called successor of Barr, that is, bishop of Cork).

1110. <sup>1</sup> Lay-brother.—See 1086, note 5. C. renders the word athlaech “old champion”!

tuguriis jejunantium. But oes with the genitive is a living idiom, denoting a class, or description of persons. According to the Tripartite Life (Part II.) and the Book of Armagh (fol. 13 c, d), St. Patrick Dunain, eminent senior of Ireland, with 50 bishops, or a little more, together with 300 priests and with 3000 ecclesiastics, around Muircertach Ua Briain (Muircertach O'Briain the Great), together with the nobles of the Half of Mogh, to enjoin rule and good conduct upon every one, both laic and cleric.—Donnchadh Ua Anluain, king of Ui-Niallain, was killed by his kinsmen in treachery. These same kinsmen were killed by the Ui-Niallain in revenge thereof, before the end of twenty nights.—A meeting [took place] between Domnall Ua Lochlainn and Donnchadh Ua Ua Eochadha at the Cuan, so they made plenary peace and the Ulidians gave hostages of his own choice to Domnall Ua Lochlainn. [1111]

Kalends of Jan. on 2nd feria, 29th of the moon, A.D. 1112. [1112 Bis.] The Close of Ard-Macha, with its church, was burned on the 10th of the Kalends of April [March 23] and two streets of Massan-Third and the third street of the Great Third.<sup>1</sup>—Congalach, son of Mac Conchaille, herenagh of Daire, rested in most excellent penance, in the 94th year of his age.—A foray by Domnall Ua Lochlainn over Fine-Gall, so that he took away great cattle-spoil and many captives.—Gormlaith, daughter of Murchadh Mac Diarmata, namely, successor of [St.] Brigit,<sup>2</sup> died in good penance.

Kalends of Jan. on 4th feria, 10th of the moon, A.D. 1113. [1113] Connla Ua Flainn, successor of [St.] Molaise of Leithglenn, rested.—A thunderbolt come on [Monday, March 17] the night of the feast of Patrick upon Cruachan-Aighle, so that it destroyed thirty of the fasting folk<sup>1</sup>.—

fasted during a Lent on Cruachan-Aighle (Croagh-Patrick, co. Mayo). The observance of the fast by pilgrims, it appears from the present entry, had become customary there at this time.

<sup>2</sup> The [two Saints] Ui Suanaigh.—There were two grandsons of Suanach, who were likewise abbots of Rahen, King's Co.,—Fidmuine, whose obit is given supra, A.D. 756 (=757) and who is commemorated in the Calendar of Oengus at May 16 and Fidairle (not given in the Calendar), whose festival was Oct. 1.

or primatial, cess (1106, supra). In explanation of the term, it is to be noted that in the Annals of Innisfallen (ad an.) O'Longan is called superior (comarba) of Ard-Patrick (cō. Limerick). This church is mentioned in the Tripartite as founded by St. Patrick. In the Chronicon Scotorum he is called herenagh of Ard-Patrick. It is added that he was killed by lightning on Croagh-Patrick, a statement that hardly agrees with the quievit in Christo of the provincial Chronicle.

Dal-Araidhe, however, and Ui-Echach [were reserved] to himself. A hosting by Muircertach Ua Briain with the men of Munster and with the Leinstermen and Connacht to Magh-Cobha, in aid of Donnchadh. A hosting also by Domnall Ua Lochlainn with the hosts aforesaid to Magh-Cobha too, in aid of the Ulidians: so that there was imminence of battle between them, until Ceallach, successor of Patrick, separated them under guise of peace. Nevertheless, Donnchadh Ua Eochadha was blinded<sup>5</sup> by Eochaidh Ua Mathgamna and by the Ulidians.—A hosting by Muircertach Ua Briain and by the Half of Mogh, both laic and cleric, to Grenoc. But Domnall, son of Mac Lochlainn, [came] with the nobles of the North of Ireland to Cluain-cain of Fir-Rois, so that they were for the space of a month facing each other, until Ceallach, successor of Patrick and the Staff of Jesus also made peace of a year between them.—A courageous skirmish [was fought] between the men of Kalends of Jan. on 5th feria, 21st of the moon, A.D. 1114. Flann, son of Mac Flannchadha, successor of [St.] Molaise of Daim-inis; Mael-Coluim Ua Cormacain, successor of [St.] Eine of Ara; Diarmait Ua Flannchua, successor of [St.] Ailbe of Imlech-ibhair, archbishop and lector, bestower of treasure and of food, of hospitality and of charity; Ferdornach Ua Clucain,<sup>1</sup> successor [of St. Columba in the monastery] of Cenannus, rested in peace. —A fit of heavy illness seized Muircertach Ua Briain, king of Ireland, so that he became a skeleton<sup>2</sup> and parted with his kingship. But Diarmait took the kingship of Munster in his presence, without permission. —A hosting by Domnall Ua Lochlainn to Rath-Cennaigh, so that there came into his house Eochaidh Ua Mathgamna with the Ulidians and Donnchadh Ua Loingsigh with the Dal-Araidhe and Aedh Ua Ruairc with the men of Breifne and Murchadh Ua Mael-Sechlainn with the men of Meath. They went after that, both [hosts], past Ath-Luain to Dun-Leodha, so that Tairrdelbach Ua Concobhair with the Connachtmen and Niall Ua Lochlainn, his own son, with the Cenel Conaill, came into his assembly. They all moreover went after that to Telach-Ua-Dedhaigh in Dal-Cais, so that they and the men of Munster made a truce of a year. Thereupon Domnall Ua Lochlainn went throughout Connacht to his house. —Aedh,<sup>3</sup> son of Donnchadh<sup>4</sup> Ua Eochadha, royal heir of Ulidia; Donnchadh Ua Loingsigh, king of Dal-Araidhe; Ua Canannain (namely, Ruaidhri), [1114] abrachta, O'Connor (by overlooking the contraction-marks, and misreading and dividing the last word) has condna an bhabrasa—ita ut surdesceret! But O'Donovan, who was not bothered by the term, aptly quotes (F. M., ii. 997-8) from

Cormac's Glossary to prove that anfabrachtai meant a person wasted by disease.

Kalends of Jan. on 6th feria, 2nd of the moon, A.D. 1115. Very hard weather of frost and snow from the 15th of the Kalends of January [Dec. 18] to the 15th of the Kalends of March [Feb. 15], or a little longer; so that it caused destruction of birds and cattle and people: whereof grew great dearth throughout all Ireland and in Leinster beyond every [place].—Diarmait Ua Briain, king of Munster, was taken prisoner by Muircertach Ua Briain. —An attack was made by the sons of Aedh, son of Ruaidhri, upon Tairrdelbach Ua Conchobair, [that is,] upon the king of Connacht (namely, in Ath-bo), so that they injured him and dangerous illness<sup>1</sup> resulted to him. —A defeat [was inflicted] by Domnall Ua Briain and by the Foreigners of Ath-cliath upon the Leinstermen, wherein fell Donnchadh, grandson of Mail-na-mbo, king of Ui-Ceinnselaigh and Conchobur Ua Conchobuir, king of Ui-Failghi, with their sons and a multitude besides (“and Murtagh<sup>2</sup> O’Teg, king of Ferlii, [was] killed”).—Domnall, son of Tadhg Ua Briain, royal heir of Munster, was killed by the Connachtmen.—(“Mahon<sup>2</sup> Mac Maoilmaii, King of O’Neachaii in Munster; Maoilsechlain O’Fogartai, king of Eli [died].”—) Muircertach Ua Briain took his kingship again<sup>3</sup> and went on a hosting into Leinster and into Bregha.—(“Murtagh<sup>2</sup> O’Ciarmaic, king of O’Hane; O’Conor Kyerry; Donell [Mac ?] Murcha O’Flainn; Mac Flanchaa, king of Muskrai, all killed.”—) The stone church of Ard-Brecain, with its complement of people, was burned by the Men of Munster and many churches besides in Fir-Bregh.—Great foray<sup>4</sup> by Tairrdelbach Ua Conchobuir and have been contained in A. (See textual note a, 1117 infra.) Most of them relate to Munster, and of these the Annals of Innisfallen pass over the greater part. It thus follows that there existed a chor-

 (F. M. ii., p. 1002) says it was at seemingly there. According to the Annals of Innisfullen, Ua Brolchain died at Lismore. But, it is safe to infer that he retired to that establishment to prepare for his end; whilst the present entry cannot be construed to signify that he erected any building in Lismore. The oratory, it is most probable, was in Armagh;

Mac Ronain,<sup>2</sup> superior of Cenannus—and slaughter of the Community of Cenannus [took place] along with him— [1117] was killed by Aedh Ua Ruairc and by the Ui-Briuin on the Friday<sup>3</sup> before the Sunday of Crom-duban. The countenance<sup>4</sup> of the Lord is against those who do these evil things, to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth [Cf. Ps. xxxiii. 17].—A battle (namely, the battle of Lecan) was fought by Brian, son of Murchadh and by the grandsons of Cathal Ua Conchobair and the Connacht-men along with them against Tairrdelbach, son of Diarmait and against the Dal-Cais, so that defeat was inflicted upon the Dal-Cais and slaughter of them ensued.—Slaughter of the Cenel-Eogain of the Island was inflicted by the Cenel-Conaill and many nobles fell there.—Cathusach<sup>5</sup> Ua Cnaill, archbishop of Connacht; Flann Ua Sculu, bishop of Connere; Mael-Muire, bishop of Dun-da-lethglas; Gilla-Mochua Mac Camchuarta, bishop of Daimliacc; Ceallach Ua Colmain, bishop of Ferna; Anmchadh Ua Anmchadha, bishop of Ard-ferta of [St.] Brenann; Muiredhach Ua hEnlainge, bishop of Cluain-ferta of [St.] Brenann; Maelruanaigh Ua Ciflichain, successor [of St. Fechin] of Fobar for a long time, all slept in Christ.—Mael-Muire Ua Dunain, learned bishop of the Goidhil and head of the clergy of Ireland and steward of the almsdeeds of the world, consummated the most excellent course of his great religious life in the 77th year of his age, on the 9th of the Kalends of January [Dec. 24].

1119. 1 The 3rd.—This is a typical instance, showing the value of the ferial and luration. The Dominical Letter was E and the Golden Number XVIII. March 10 of the text would accordingly be Monday, moon 25. On the other hand, Thursday, moon 25, are a double proof that the date was March 13.
Consequently, the scribe, by the most frequently recurring of all errors, mistook ii. for u., thereby changing 3 (iii.) into 6 (ui.).

From C. it may be inferred that ui. was likewise the reading of A.

The Four Masters followed the ui. of the MS. and omitted, as in most of the similar instances, the week-day and luration. Whereupon, O'Donovan corrects sixth into fourth, noting that O'Clery's Irish Calendar gives March 12 as the feast of Mochoemoc. This is, however, a mistake. All the native authorities, including O'Clery's Martyrology of Donegal, assign the festival to the 13th. The same error of sixth for third occurs in the Annals of Loch Ce (ad an.)

<sup>6</sup> Ferghail.—The Annals of Innisfallen give the obit under the year 1120; which, more probably, is the correct date.

The Ruaidhri item is placed immediately before this in C., which omits the two final entries.

<sup>7</sup> Three Innocent Children.—The week-day and moon’s age are correct; but I have not found the feast in native authorities. According to the Annals of Innisfallen, Niall was killed in the year following. But the data here given are too precise and too much in accord to be erroneous.

<sup>2</sup> Mochuaroc of the Wisdom.—He is thus designated in the Calendar of Oengus also. Mochuaroc signifies my little (literally, young) Cuar. In a Würzburg Latin MS. of the 8th century in Irish character, he is said to have committed to writing, lest it should lapse from memory, a Paschal Computus which his master, Mosinu (or Sillan, third abbot of Bangor: ob. 609=610, supra), had learned by rote from an erudite Greek (Schepss: Die ältesten Evangelienhandschriften der Würzburger Universitätsbibliothek, p. 27). The introduction of the Decemnovennial Cycle into his monastery would thus account for the epithet "of the Wisdom."

Another appellation of affection is Cuaran (little Cuar), under which title he is patron of Kilcoran (Cell Cuarain, Church of Cuaran—perierunt etiam ruinae), about a mile west of Youghal. He is locally remembered in a native couplet as Cuaran of the Nine. The reason is given in a bilingual and partially corrupt gloss in the L. B. Calendar of Oengus. Is aise atberar 'Mochuaroc na Nona' friss, ar is e toisech rodelig ceilebrad Nóna: quia cum media vel ora [pro vel ora lege Hora] apud antiquos celebra[ba]tur—"It is for this Mochuaroc of the Nine is applied (lit. said) to him, because he is the first that separated the celebration of Nine: for by the ancient [monks] it used to be celebrated along with the Middle (Canonical) Hour [Sext]."

This is explained by the Rule of the 38 Abbots: A prima hora usque ad horam tertiam Deo vacent fratres; a tertia vero usque ad nonam quidquid iniunctum fuerit . . . faciant (Cap. x.). Sext was thus deferred from the sixth hour (12 noon) until the ninth (3 p.m.) and joined to None. In the Benedictine Rule, this deviation was followed from Sep. 15 to Lent: Hora secunda agatur Tertia et usque ad Nonam omnes in opus suum laborent. The change effected by St. Cuaran consisted in replacing the celebration of Sext at the proper Canonical hour, thus leaving None to be recited separately.

Colgan (AA. SS. p. 302) gives the purport of the L. B. gloss as follows: Vocatur Mochuarocus de Nona, ideo quod sit primus qui curavit celebra- tionem Missae fieri seorsim, quia cum media Nona apud antiquos celebrabatur. This is typical of Colgan's work of the kind. The original, needless to say, makes no mention of Mass; cum media Nona is meaningless; whilst the ancient monks celebrated Mass after Prime, Tierce, Sext and None respectively, according to the different seasons of the liturgical year.

1123. <sup>1</sup> Eighty houses.—"Eight of his household servants"! C.

The reading in B affords a natural explanation of this apparently inexplicable error. The translator took uii.moḡa to be two words (uii.=ocht=eight; moḡa, pl. of mogh=servant) and tighi to be gen. sing. of tech=house. Whence "eight [of his] household ser-

<sup>6</sup> Cilla-caech. — Purblind gillie.
The soubriquet supplies a probable motive for the outrage. Owing to the visual defect, the bishop had refused to confer the Order of priesthood. Thereby Ua Ciarmhaic (O'Kirby) was effectually debarred from the preferment which lay open to him as a member of the reigning family.

Kalends of Jan. on 2nd feria, 1st of the moon, A.D. 1123. [1123]
 The Gailenga captured a house in Daimliac of [St.] Ciannan upon Murchadh Ua Mael-Sechlainn, king of Tara, so that they burned the house and eighty houses<sup>1</sup> around it and killed a number of his people. Murchadh, however, escaped by protection of [St.] Ciannan, without being killed or burned.—An unprecedented attack<sup>2</sup> was made upon the successor of [St.] Ailbe<sup>3</sup> (namely, Mael-Mordha, son of Mac Clothna): to wit, a house was seized upon him and upon the son of Cerball Ua Ciarmhaic (that is, the king of Aine), in the centre of Imlech itself, so that seven<sup>4</sup> were killed therein. Howbeit, the noble persons escaped therefrom, through favour of [St.] Ailbe and of the church. There was likewise burned the Gapped [Bell]<sup>5</sup> of [St.] Ailbe. Now, he who seized the house was killed before the end of a novena, namely, the Gilla-caech<sup>5</sup> Ua Ciarmhaic—and the same person was a deacon<sup>6</sup> by profession<sup>7</sup>—and his head was cut off, because of<sup>8</sup> the profanation of [St.] Ailbe and of the Lord.—Oenghus Ua Gormain, successor of [St.] Comgall of Bangor, died in pilgrimage in Lis-mor of [St.] Mochutu.—Flann<sup>9</sup> Ua Duibhinnsi, herenagh of Lughmagh; Cu-Caisil Ua Cerbaill, king of Fernmagh; Mael-Muire Ua Condubhain, herenagh of Daire-Lubrain; Donnsluibhe Mac Cathalain, the prosperity and happiness of all Ulidia, died.—Donnchadh Mac be plural and read radsat (they gave). The editor accepts this and improves upon it by taking eli (another) to be the local name, Eli! (He omits to say whether the territory of the name in Tipperary, or that in the King's Co., is intended.) He ought to have known that the legitimate successor of Eana was Diarmait Mac Murchadha, who brought over the English. But he was probably misled by the translator of C., who has: "his (O Conor's son) deposed by Leinster and Galls, through misdemeanours of Danyell O'Eylan, king of Ely." O'Donovan (p. 1027) also took the verb as plural, signifying that the Leinstermen and Foreigners "elected another king over them."!

Kalends of Jan. on 1st feria, 26th of the moon, A.D. 1128. [1128 Bis.] A Bissextile and Embolismal<sup>1</sup> year. The Men of Magh-Itha (namely, Domnall Ua Gailmredaigh and the Cenel-Maien) seized a house upon the king of Fir-Manach, that is, upon Faelan Ua Duibhdhara; and he fell by them, and a number of the nobles of Fir-Manach around him.—Gilla-Patraic, son of Tuathal [Ua Tuathail], successor of [St.] Coemhgen, was killed by the Ui-Muiredaigh in the centre of Glenn-da-locha.—A defeat [was inflicted] by the horse-host of Conchobar, son of Mac Lochlainn, upon the horse-host of Tigernan Ua Ruairc, wherein fell Ua Ciardhai, king of Cairpri

[μην ἐμβόλιμος]; thus giving thirteen moons to the year in the luni-solar reckoning. The present is the third Embolism of the Decemnovennial Cycle: Epact 26, Golden Number VIII. (See Todd Lectures, Series III, No. IV.)

Its place in the Calendar is indicated in a marginal gloss in the L. B. Cal. of Oengus, opposite

March 6: Tertius Embolismus cicli decinnovenalishic incipit et conturbat regulum [-am]. For the disturbance, see Bede, De temp. rat., c. xx.

This Embolism is of historical interest. It was the proof assigned in his reply to Pope Leo the Great by Paschasinus, bishop of Lilybaeum, why the Easter of 444 should be celebrated on the Alexandrine date, April 23, in preference to the Roman, March 26.

<sup>2</sup> In charge of the sacredrequisite and relics—Literally, under a Culebadh. This expression, according to the Irish idiom, implies an office. In the Carlsruhe (Irish) Codex of St. Augustine (No. cxcv. fol. 19c), culebath glosses flabellum. But the context (quo etiam muscas abigentes aerem commovemus) shows that here the word is taken literally, gnat-destroyer. The employment of the flabellum, or fan, at Mass, as in the Greek Church, was too striking a ceremony to escape incidental mention in native hagiography. A Culebadh was among the Columban relics at Kells. According to the Seafaring of Snedgus and Mac Riagail (Adamnan, p. 323), it consisted of a leaf as large as the hide of a great ox. It was to be placed upon the altar. This description appears to identify it with the veil, or Coopertorium quo altare tegitur cum oblationibus, of Gregory of Tours and Cathal Ua Rogheallaigh, and Sitriuc Ua Mael-Brighte, [1128] the son of Aedh Ua Dubhdai, king of Ui-Amalghadha, and many others.—Muirghis Ua Nioic, herenagh of Tuaim-da-ghualann for [a long] space, died in Inis-in-Ghaill.—A deed ugly, unprecedented, ill-issuing, that deserved the curse of the Men of Ireland, both laic and cleric, whereof the like was not found in Ireland before, was done by Tigernan Ua Ruairc and by the Ui-Briuin: namely, the successor of [St.] Patrick was stark dishonoured in his own presence: that is, his retinue was waylaid, and some of them were killed; and a student of his own household, who was in charge of the sacred requisites and relics<sup>2</sup> was killed there.—Now the result that grew out of this ill deed is this, that there is no protection which is secure for a person henceforth, until this evil is avenged by God and by men. For this disrespect that was put upon the successor of Patrick, it is the same as disrespect of the Lord; since the Lord himself said in the Gospel: “He that despiseth you, despiseth Me; he that despiseth Me, despiseth Him who sent Me” [Luke x. 14].—A foray-hosting by Tairrdelbach Ua Concobhuir into Leinster, until he reached Loch Carman: herefrom, around Leinster to Ath-cliaith, and he wrought great destruction of cattle on that route; from Ath-cliaith, to his house again. But the ill-fame of that hosting is upon Tigernan Ua Ruairc.—A foray by Maghnus and by the men of Fern-magh into Tir-Briuin, so that (De Vitis Patr., viii.. Cf. The Stowe Missal, Trans. R. I. A., vol. xxvii. p. 169). That veil had enough in common with the muscifugium to have the Irish equivalent of flabellum applied thereto. Thence, in a secondary sense, culebadh would come to signify the requisites for Mass and for administration of the Sacraments; fo culebadh designating the custodian thereof.

The circumstances of the present outrage suggest a more comprehensive meaning. When engaged upon a visitation, the primate always had the insignia (=Irish minna; for which see the Stowe Missal, ubi sup., p. 174) of St. Patrick carried about with him. These are divided into consecrated (insignia consecrata) and other (aliorum insignium) in the Liber Angeli (Book of Armagh, fol. 21c). The former are intended in a passage of they took great captures. Tigernan [Ua Ruairc], with [1128] the Ui-Briuin and with another large force, comes up with them at Ath-Fhirdeadh. Battle is then fought between them, and defeat inflicted upon Tigernan and upon the Ui-Briuin; and three hundred, or four hundred of them are killed, as a first reparation<sup>3</sup> to Patrick.—A hosting by Conchobur Ua Lochlainn and by the Cenel-Eogain and by the Dal-Araidhe and by the Airgialla into Magh-Cobha, so that they took away the pledges of the Ui-Echach. They turn after that on their left hand into Fir-Bregh, until they lost a party of their people there and did a great crime before God and before men: namely, the burning of Ath-truim with its churches and a multitude underwent violent death in them. They marched back, without having obtained the peace of God, or of men.—Peace of a year and a half, or a little longer, was made by the successor of Patrick between the Connachtmen and the Men of Munster.

Londonderry, the saint here intended was one of the two SS. Mochonna venerated in Derry on March 8 and May 13, respectively.

<sup>2</sup> Ard-Patraic.—The obit of O'Longan (1113, supra), the authorities cited in the note there given and two entries of a similar kind in these Annals explain the presence of Cellach at Ardpatrick. O'Longan belonged to one of the tribes (mentioned in note 4, infra) that, by a perversion of the principle regulating succession in endowed churches (Senchas Mor, Brehon Laws, i. 73 sq.; Book of Armagh, fol. 16d, 17a), temporarily diverted the primacy into lay hands. The head of the name, Gilla-Crist (Book of Leinster p. 334a, l. 39; Book of Ballymote, p. 115 b, l. 34) and Ua Sinachain of the kindred sept, the Ui-Sinaich, who died respectively in 1072 and 1052 (supra), are called stewards of Munster. Whence it can be inferred that they were likewise incumbents of Ardpatrick. That church consequently was immediately subject to Armagh: its superiors were the stewards, or custodians, of the primatial cress in Munster and were selected from the families in question.

Cellach had accordingly arrived there, either to visit, whether officially, or through courtesy; or, it may be, in connection with the truce between Munster and Connaught mentioned under the preceding year.

<sup>3</sup> Tomb of the bishops.—Colgan, who was advised by the F. M., translates: in sanctuario episcoporum vulgo appellato! (Tr. Th., p. 301). The error, as was to be expected, has been copied by O'Connor.

"His [Latin] name [Celsus] is in the Roman Martyrology at the 6th of April. . . Its being placed at 6 April is owing to another mistake of Baronius [the first mistake, Note to Rom. Mart., Ap. 6, was assigning the death to 1128], who was the first to insert it in the Roman Martyrology, which he revised by order of Gregory XIII. It was already in Molanus' Additions to Usuard, published in the year 1568. . . . As his interment was marked iv. April., this notation was probably mistaken angels and archangels, in Ard-Patraic<sup>2</sup> in Munster, on the Kalends [1st] of April, on the 2nd feria, and in the 24th year of his abbacy and in the 50th year of his age. His body was then carried on the 3rd of the Nones [3rd] of April to Lis-mor of Mochutu, according to his own will and it was waked with psalms and hymns and canticles. And it was buried with honour in the tomb of the bishops, on the 2nd of the Nones [4th] of April, on the 5th feria. Muircertach, son of Domnall, was instituted<sup>4</sup> [recte, intruded] into the succession of Patrick on the Nones [5th] of April. —The house of Colum-cille in Cell-mic-nEnain<sup>5</sup> was seized [1129]

for vi. April., and thus adding a confusion of said day with that of his death, this error seems to have originated" (Lanigan, E. H. iv. 89-91).

<sup>4</sup> Instituted.—As the time was too short for the news to reach Armagh, much less for a canonical election to take place, between Monday and Thursday, the "institution," there can be little doubt, was performed in Lismore. The chief members of the family to which Cellach belonged thus accompanied him to Munster. In the Liber Angeli, or Book of primatial privileges, the ordinary retinue is set down as fifty. Receptio archiepiscopi, heredis cathedrae meae urbis, cum comitibus suis, numero quinquaginta (Book of Armagh, fol. 206).

Feidlimid, who belonged to the sixth generation from Conn of the Hundred Battles (2nd cent. A.D.), had amongst his five sons two named Bresal and Echaid: eponymous heads of the Ui-Bresail and the Ui-Echach, whose respective territories were the baronies of Oneilland East and Armagh (co. Armagh).

Sixteenth in descent from Bresal was Cumuscach, great grandson of Erudan, who held forcible possession of the primatial see from 1060 to 1064 and died in 1074 (supra).

In the fourth degree from Echaid was Sinach, eponymous head of the Ui-Sinaich. This was the sept that supplied almost all the lay succession in Armagh, as appears from the following table (Book of Leinster, pp. 334b, 338c; Book of Ballymote, pp. 113-4). The genealogy appears defective by comparison with that of the Ui-Bresail; but, for the present purpose, this is immaterial.

From the foregoing and the notices in the Annals we see that the plebilis progenies (the tribe in whose territory Armagh stood) usurped the position and discharged by deputy the sacred functions of the ecclesiastica progenies (Book of Armagh, fol. 16d).

crate is omitted in O'Donovan's translation.)

The wonder is to find Lanigan (E. H. iv. 164) led astray thereby. He adds however: "This synod, or assembly, was held for the mere object of consecrating a church; and in fact very little more seems to have been done by it" (p. 167).

<sup>3</sup> The Legate.—Christian Ua Condoirche, bishop of Lismore. The F. M. omit his name, and also those of Ua Osein (archbishop of Tuam) and of Grenne (archbishop of Dublin).

The omission is accordingly repeated in the hitherto published accounts of the transaction.

O'Donovan (p. 1126) gives the reading of C. as "the Legat Ui Conorchi and the bishops also." But it is: "the Legat, U Osen, Grene and the bishops also."

<sup>4</sup> Eight.—The F. M. give seven (score): whence Colgan has centum et quadraginta (loc. cit.).

 Ua hOissein,<sup>1</sup> archbishop of Connacht, passed to Christ.—The circuit of Ossory was made by the successor of Columcille, namely, by Flaithbertach Ua Brolcha[i]n: that is, seven score oxen [were given]: but it is their value that was presented there,—namely, four hundred and twenty ounces of pure<sup>2</sup> silver: to wit, three ounces for<sup>3</sup> every ox.—Goeffrey Ua Raghallaigh [lord of Breifni] was killed.<sup>4</sup>—A hosting by Muircertach Ua Lochlainn into Tir-Briuin: the way<sup>5</sup> they went [was] past the Confluence of Cluain-Eois, through the length of the country, until Tigernan [Ua Ruairc] abandoned his camp to them. From that to the Well of Messan. The Airgialla and Ulidians [came] to that place to him and Mac Murchadha with the Leinstermen and a battalion of Foreigners [came], so that they all went into the Plain of Tethbha. Then Ua Conchobuir came from the west, across the Shannon and gave pledges to Ua Lochlainn and thereupon Ua Lochlainn gave his entire Fifth [i.e. Province] to him.—A house was seized by Cathal Ua Raghallaigh upon Mael-Sechlainn Ua Ruairc in the centre of Slane, so that Muircertach Ua Ceallaigh, king of Bregha, was killed there, with a party of nobles around him. 1162. <sup>1</sup> Centre.—From this account it can be inferred that the churches of Derry stood in proximity. On the removal of the adjacent houses, a circular wall was built, to mark off the space thus acquired as one to which the right of asylum attached. (Cf. the Collectio Canonum Hibernensis, xxviii. De civitatibus refugii; xlv. 2: De debito termino circa omnem locum sanctum.) The Four Masters change churches into church, being followed in the error by Colgan (Tr. Th., p. 505).

Kalends of Jan. on 2nd feria, 12th of the moon, A.D. 1162. [1162]
Total separation of the houses from the churches of Daire was made by the successor of Colum-cille (namely, Flaithbertach) and by the king of Ireland, that is, by Maircer-tach Ua Lochlainn; where were demolished eighty houses, or something more. And the stone wall of the Centre<sup>1</sup> was likewise built by the successor of Colum-cille and malediction [pronounced] upon him who should come over it<sup>2</sup> for ever.—Imblech-ibhair with its church was burned.—A Synod of the clergy of Ireland [was held] around the successor of Patrick, to wit, around Gilla Mac Liach, son of Ruaidhri, at Cloenad, wherein were six [and] twenty bishops, with many abbots, enjoining rule and good conduct. And it is on that occasion the clergy of Ireland assigned<sup>3</sup> the Orders of archbishop of Ireland to the successor of Patrick, as it was before<sup>3</sup> and that no one should be lector in a church in Ireland, except an alumnus of Ard-Macha.—A hosting by Muircertach Ua Lochlainn along with very large portion of the Half of Conn to Magh-Fitharta, so that they were a week therein, burning the

was enacted that henceforth no layman be intruded into the Armagh succession. (Cf. A.D. 1129, note 4, supra.) The deep-rooted abuse connected with the primacy was thereby formally eliminated. It is characteristic of the Four Masters

 levy.) The Donnleibhe from whom the family name took its origin was slain in 1091, supra.
 Eochaid mentioned in the text
 according to the Ulidian regnal list (L. L. 41d), was son of Conchobur, son of Cu-Ulad Ua Flathrai (killed 1072, supra).

<sup>4</sup> Donnsleibhe.—There can be little doubt that he was the same as the Donnleibhe mentioned in the second entry of the following year. The Four Masters omit this portion.

<sup>5</sup> For the space of half a year.—

“Half a yeare bickering and battering and yet could not prevayle,” C. Brut y Tywysogion states (ad an).
 that the king remained many days in camp at Caerleon, until ships from number of them, including Echmarcach, son of Mac Gilla-espuic and including Ua Lomanaigh and they expelled Eochaidh Mac Duinnsleibhe<sup>5</sup> [Ua Eochadha] from Ulidia. And Ua Lochlainn gave the kingship to Donnsluibhe [Mac Duinnsleibhe Ua Eochadha] and all the Ulidians gave their pledges to Ua Lochlainn, through the might of his regal power.—Diarmait Mac Artain, chief of Clann-Fogartaigh, hospitality and benefaction of all Ui-Echach, died.—An expedition of the Saxons and of the Foreigners of Ath-cliaith [set out] with the son of the Empress, to subjugate the Britons and they were all for the space of half a year<sup>5</sup> attacking them and they availed not. And they returned without peace backwards.—Mael-Coluim Great-head, son of Henry, arch-king of Scotland, the best Christian that was of the Gaidhil [who dwell] by the sea on the east for almsdeeds, hospitality and piety, died.—Eochaidh [Mac Duinnsleibhe Ua Eochadha] again attempts to obtain the kingship of Ulidia; but the Ulidians expelled him through fear of Ua Lochlainn and he was fettered by Donnchadh Ua Cerbaill, arch-king of Airgialla, by order of Ua Lochlainn.—Another hosting by Muircertach Ua Lochlainn along with the Cenel-Eogain to Inis-lachain,<sup>6</sup> so that they burned the Island [Inis-lachain] and razed it. And all Ulidia gave their pledges to Ua Lochlainn. After that, the Cenel-Eogain around Ua Lochlainn come to their houses with great triumph and with many ships and numerous treasures beside. From here Ua Lochlainn [goes] to Ard-Macha. After that, Donnchadh Ua Cerbaill, arch-king of Airgialla and Eochaidh Mac Duinnsleibhe Dublin and other cities in Ireland came to him. Finding these forces insufficient, he gave them presents and dismissed them; himself and his army returning to England.

<sup>7</sup> Sword.—O'Donovan (p. 1155) says this was evidently won by Mac Duinnisleibe from the Danes of the Hebrides. But he gives no authority for the statement.

<sup>8</sup> Domnall, etc.—Given in the Annals of Boyle. The first is a replica of the initial item in the second entry of this year. The Annals of Boyle, in agreement with the original text, state that he was slain.

<sup>9</sup> King of Ciarraidhe Luachra.—Lord (tigherna) of Ciarraighe-Luachra, Four Masters. O'Donovan, by an oversight, has "lord of Conchobhair" (ii. p. 1156).

The Annals of Boyle, according to O'Conor's text, have: Gilla-Crist U[a] Mail-Brenaind and M[ae] Craith Ua Cnehubur Chiarraigi (O'Conor Kerry) die.

Mail-Brenaind signifies devotee of [Ua Eochadha] come into the presence of Ua Lochlainn, [1165] to ask for the kingship for [Eochaidh] Mac Duinnsleibhe, so that Ua Lochlainn gave the entire [kingship] to Mac Duinnsleibhe, in return for the pledges of all Ulidia. So that Mac Duinnsleibhe gave the son of every chief of Ulidia and his own daughter in pledge to O'Lochlainn. And there were given to him [Ua Lochlainn] many treasures, including the sword<sup>7</sup> of the son of the Earl and he [Mac Duinnsleibhe] gave Bairche to Ua Lochlainn [and] Ua Lochlainn gave it to [Donnchadh] Ua Cerbaill. And, moreover, there was given a townland to the clergy of Saball, by reason of the prosperity of the reign of Ua Lochlainn.

(Domnall<sup>8</sup> Mac Gilla-Patraic, king of Ossory; Maghnus Ua Canannain, king of Cenel-Conaill and Gilla-Crisd Ua Mael-Brenaind, chief of Clann-Conchobuir and Ma[c] Craith Ua Concobuir, king of Ciarraide-Luachra,<sup>9</sup> died.)

Kalends of Jan. on 7th feria, 26th of the moon, A.D. [1166] 1166. Domnall<sup>1</sup> Mac Gilla-Mocholmoic was killed by the Lagenians themselves.—Cucuach Mac Gilla-espuic was killed by Donnsluibhe, grandson of Eochaidh<sup>2</sup> [Ua Eochadha].—Aedh Ua Maelfabhaill, king of Carraic-Bracaidhe, was killed by Muircertach Ua Lochlainn in treachery.—Ard-Macha was burned the day of the feast of [St.] Senan<sup>3</sup> and Wednesday in the incidence<sup>4</sup> of the day of (St.) Brenann (of Clonfert, county Galway).

1166.<sup>1</sup> Domnall.—His name is the last in the genealogy (L. L. 337d) of the kings of the Ui-Dunchadha (a sept that inhabited the portion of Dublin county through which flows the Dodder). He was fourth in descent from the eponymous head, Gilla-Mocholmoic (devotee of St. Mocholmoc—my young Colum— of Terryglas, co. Tipperary, whose feast was Dec. 13). In the pedigree given by O'Donovan (F. M. ii. 846), insert "son of Cellach" (L. L. loc. cit.) before "son of Dunchadh."

From this, [he marches] to Ath-cliath, so that he received the pledges of the Foreigners and of Mac Murchadha and of ail Leinster. (namely, [on Monday] the Kalends son of Dondchadh Mac Murchadha, king of the Lagenians and Foreigners, to be expelled by the Men of Ireland. Alas! alas! O God, what shall I do?

and with the Ui-Briuin and the Conmaicni, into Tir-Eogain, [1166] to attack Ua Lochlainn, by direction of the Cenel-Eogain themselves, in consequence of Ua Lochlainn, arch-king of Ireland, being abandoned by them. So that [Ua Lochlainn] came, with a small party of the Cenel-Eogain of Telach-og, to deliver an assault upon them at Fidh-O-n-Echtach. And even those very men, they abandoned him. So there fell in that place Muircertach (son of Niall) Ua Lachlainn, arch-king of Ireland. And he was the Augustus of all the North-West of Europe for valour and championship. And a few of Cenel-Eogain were killed there, namely, thirteen men. A great marvel and wonderful deed was done then: to wit, the king of Ireland to fall without battle, without contest, after his dishonouring the successor of Patrick and the Staff of Jesus and the successor of Colum-cille and the Gospel<sup>9</sup> of Martin and many clergy besides [by blinding Mac Duinnisleibhe Ua Eochadha]. Howbeit, his body was carried to Ard-Macha and buried there, in dishonour of the successor of Colum-cille with his Community and Colum-cille himself<sup>10</sup> and the head of the students of Daire fasted<sup>10</sup> regarding it,—for his being carried to [Christian] burial.<sup>11</sup>—Diarmait Mac Murchadha, chief of Muinnter-Birn, was slain by his kinsmen.—A hosting by Ruaidhri Ua Conchobair and by Tigernan Ua Ruairc to Essruadh, so that the Cenel-Conaill came into his house [and] gave their pledges to Ua Conchobair [and] he gave them eight score cows, besides gold and clothing.

of Derry. C. has: “Kolum Kille himself fasted;” not, “the Coarb of Colum Kille,” etc., as O’Donovan (F. M. ii. 1161) reads.

1167. Muircertach, son of Lagmand Ua Duibhdirma, king of Fordruim, tower of principality of all the North of Ireland, was killed in treachery by Donnchadh Ua Duibhdirma and by the Bretach in the centre of Magh-bile and two sons of his were killed on the morrow and a son was blinded.—A hosting by Ruaidhri Ua Concobair with the nobles of Ireland about him to Ard-Macha. From this [they marched] to Belach-grene and from this to Fernach-na-mebhla, until the Cenel-Eogain collected a fighting force around Niall Mac Lochlainn, to deliver a camp attack upon the men of Ireland. Howbeit, God prevented that, through the benediction of Patrick and through the felicity of Ruaidhri Ua Concobair and of the Men of Ireland likewise. For [lit., so that] the Cenel-Eogain closed around a sallow brake that appeared like<sup>1</sup> the [opposing] forces, so that each [of them] proceeded to slaughter the other there, except that persons were not killed. of the Cenel-Eogain came into his house and gave hostages to him. And they went after that, through the length of Fir-Manach and to Ess-ruadh, safe to their home[s].—Mael-Michel Mac Doithechain, eminent priest and lector in Ard-Macha, felicitously finished his life.—Muiredhach Mac Canai was killed by the sons of Mac Lochlainn in reparation<sup>2</sup> to Patrick and the Staff of Jesus, by direction of his own kinsmen. Kalends of Jan. on 2nd feria, 18th of the moon, A.D. [1168 Bis.] 1168. Muircertach, son of Toirrdelbach Ua Briain, king of Dal-Cais, was killed at Dun-na-sciath by the son<sup>1</sup> of Murchadh Mac Carthaigh, king of Desmond. The grandson of Conchobar [Ua Briain] was killed immediately in revenge of him by Diarmait the Fair and by Ua Faelain and seven sons of kings with their retinues [were killed].—Flannacan Ua Dubhtaich, bishop of the Tuatha (Sil-Muiredaigh) [Elphin], the master of wisdom and history in [lit., of] all the West of Ireland, died in pilgrimage at Cunga.—A hosting by Ruaidhri Ua Concobuir to Ath-luain, so that Ua [recte, Mac] Gilla-Patraic, king of Ossory, came into his house and gave four hostages to him on the occasion. slayer was Conchobar, grandson of Conchobar Ua Briain. This agrees also with the next assertion of the present entry.

<sup>3</sup> Died.—Not immediately. According to the entry in the Four Masters, O'Carroll died "after victory of Uinction and penance and after granting three hundred ounces of gold for love of the Lord to clerics and to churches." His death is given in the Annals of Innisfallen under the following year.

This, most likely, is the true date. For according to a eulogistic obit in the Antiphonary of Armagh, he Lena, to meet the Men of Ireland, until they reached Grian-eliach, so that Mac Carthaigh came into his house and gave nine hostages to him on the occasion. And Munster was divided in two, between the sons of Cormac [Mac Carthaigh] and Domnall Ua Briain and thrice twelve score cows were levied upon Munster in honour fine [of the killing] of Muircertach Ua Briain. <sup>4</sup> The defeat, etc.—This item is given in substance in the Annals of Boyle, and more circumstantially in the Four Masters. The other entry is given in both and in the Annals of Innisfallen.

Ath-cliath<sup>5</sup> was destroyed by Diarmait Mac Murchadha and by the transmarine men he brought with him from the east to destroy Ireland, in revenge for his expulsion over sea out of his own land and of the killing of his son. Howbeit, they inflicted slaughter upon the Foreigners of Athcliath and Port-lairgi and, on the other hand, many slaughters were inflicted upon themselves. Moreover, Leinster and the country of Meath, both churches and territories, were destroyed by them and they took Athcliath and Port-lairgi.

A great, unbecoming deed was done by the monk, namely, by Amlaimh, son of the successor of [St.] Finnian of Magh-bile and by Maghnus Mac Duinnsleibhe [Ua Eochadha], king of Ulidia, along with the chiefs of Ulidia and with the Ulidians besides, except the bishop, Mael-Isu and Gilla-Domanghairt<sup>7</sup> Mac Cormaic, successor of [St.] Comgall and Mael-Martain, successor of [St.] Finnian, with their communities: that is, the Congregation of Canons Regular, with their abbot, whom Mael-Moedoic Ua Morgair, Legate of the successor of [St.] Peter, instituted in Saball of [St.] Patrick, were expelled out of the

The meaning was probably in substance that Mac Murrough was expelled from Ireland for the abduction of O'Rourke's wife and engaged Fitz Gerald and Fitz Stephen to aid him in recovering his kingdom.

The textual entry displays considerable confusion. The order of the events is as follows: (1) East Leinster laid waste; (2) Dublin submits to Mac Murrough; (3) Waterford taken with great loss of life; (4) Dublin taken, followed by slaughter of the citizens; (5) Meath laid waste; (6) Mac Murrough's son (and the other hostages) slain by O'Conor.

monastery they themselves built and were despoiled completely, both of books and furniture, cows and persons, horses and sheep and all things they had collected therein from the time of the Legate aforesaid to then, save the tunics and the capes which were upon them at that hour,—through carnal jealousy and self-love and desire of honour for himself. For the monks of Drochait-atha<sup>8</sup> deposed him from the abbacy [of Saball] for just causes. Alas! alas! alas! in sooth. Woe who did and woe the country wherein was done the deed. But it went not without vengeance from the Lord; for<sup>9</sup> the chiefs who did it were killed at one and the same time by a few enemies and the king was wounded and killed unhappily a little while after, in the place wherein that unrighteous counsel was decided upon, namely, in Dun. Now, on Tuesday the Congregation was expelled; on Tuesday, at the end of a year, the nobles of Ulidia were killed and the king was wounded; on Tuesday, a little after, he himself<sup>10</sup> was killed by his brother in Dun.—Diarmait Ua Ainbfheith, king of Ui-Meith and leader of the horse-host of the king of Ailech, was killed by a fleet that came from the Islands of Orce to the Island that was built by himself upon Loch-Ruidhe, namely, upon Inis-Lachain. [1170]

Kalends of Jan. on 6th feria, 21st of the moon, A.D. 1171. [1171] Diarmait Mac Murchadha, king of the Fifth of Leinster, after destroying many churches and territories, died in Ferna without Unction,<sup>1</sup> without Body of Christ, without penance, without a will, in reparation to Columcille and Finnian and to the saints besides, whose churches he destroyed.—Ascall,<sup>2</sup> son of Torcall, king of Ath-cliath in the 61st year of his age and the 46th of his reign, after victory of Unction and penance. The compiler of the List adds: Saxain

And Maghnus himself was wounded. And moreover that Maghnus was killed shortly after in Dun by Donnleibhe, that is, by his own brother and by Gilla-Oenghusa Mac Gilla-espuic, namely, by the lawgiver of Monaigh,<sup>5</sup> after great evils had been done by him,—namely, after leaving his own wedded wife and after taking his wife from his fosterer, that is, from Cu-maighi Ua Flainn and she [had been] the wife of his own brother at first, namely, of Aedh; after inflicting violence upon the wife of his other brother also, that is, of Eochaidh; after profanation of bells and croziers, clerics and churches. There were also killed there five chiefs of the Men of Fern-magh [and two others], namely, Mael-Mochta Mac Confhebla and Conchobhur, his brother,—two chiefs of Cenel-Feradhaigh.—Fenidh Ua Conghaile, candle of the championship and hospitality of Oirghialla, died.—Ragh-nall Ua Tuathchair, chief of Clann-Ruadhrach; Gilla-geimridh Mac-in-Ghaband, chief of Fir-Darcacha and a number of others along with them died not long after the aforesaid events, on the 16th of the Kalends of November [Oct. 17].—There came into Ireland Henry (son of the Empress<sup>8</sup>), most puissant king of England and also Duke of Normandy and Aquitaine and Count of Anjou and Lord of many other lands, with 240 ships. (So that that was the first advent of the Saxons into Ireland.) And he came to land at Port-lairgi and received the pledges of Munster. He came after that to Ath-cliaith and received the pledges of Leinster and of the Men of Meath and of the Ui-Briuin and Airghialla and Ulidia.—Peter (Ua Mordha), bishop of Ui-Maine of Connacht (otherwise,<sup>9</sup> bishop of Cluain-ferta of [St.] Brenann), a devout monk and authoritative man, was drowned in the Sinand (namely, at Port-da-Chaineg), namely, on the 6th of the Kalends of January [Dec. 27].

Kalends of Jan. on 7th feria, 2nd of the moon, A.D. [1172 Bis.] 1172. The king<sup>1</sup> of the Saxons (namely, Henry, son of the Empress) went from Ireland on Easter Sunday [April 16], after celebration of Mass.—Tigernan Ua Ruairc, king of Breifni and Conmaicni, a man of great power for a long time, was killed by the same Saxons and by Domnall, son of Annadh [Ua Ruairc] of his own clan along with them. He was beheaded also by them and his head and his body were carried ignominiously to Ath-cliath. The head was raised over the door of the fortress,—a sore, miserable sight for the Gaidhil. The body was hung in another place, with<sup>2</sup> its feet upwards.—Tigernach Ua Mael-Eoin,<sup>3</sup> successor of Ciaran (of Cluain-mac-Nois), rested in peace.—Inis-Eogain was wasted by the Cenel-Conaill and slaughter inflicted upon its inhabitants.—Defeat [was inflicted] upon the Cenel-Eogain by Flaithbertach Ua Maeldoraidh and by the Cenel-Conaill and great slaughter was put upon them. A marvel [wrought] by the saints of God [was] that thing: namely, by Patrick and by Colum-cille and by the saints besides, whose churches they destroyed.—Mael-Muire Mac Murchadha, chief of Muinnter-Birn and chief and king of the Ui-Echach, was killed by Aedh Mac Oenghusa and by the Clann-Aedha of the Ui-Echach of Ulidia.—The full circuit [cess] of the Fifth of Connacht [was carried] for the fourth time by Gilla Mac Liac, successor of Patrick, namely, by the Primate of Ireland, to Ard-Macha.—Domnall Ua Fergail, arch-chief of Conmaicni, was killed by the people of the king of the Saxons.—Gilla-Aedha,<sup>4</sup> bishop of Cork, a man full of the grace of God, rested in good old age.

Cf. Appendix to Report on Rymer's Foedera, Supplement, Pl. XVI.; Reeves, Proc. R.I.A. v. 62-3), he is called grand-son of Ruaidhri. According to an interlinear gloss in the original hand he was son of the poet of the Ui-Birn—mac ino [p]ir ðana do [U]ib-ðirp (a Tyrone sept whose territory bounded part of Monaghan). In the list of Successors of Patrick (L. L. 42d), he is likewise styled son of the poet.

<sup>3</sup> March 27th, the Wednesday after Easter.—The F.M. copy these data and, nevertheless, place the obit under 1173,—a year in which the Wednesday in Easter week fell on April 11! O'Donovan left the error uncorrected (iii. 13).

Gelasius is given in the Martyrology of Donegal at March 27.

According to the colophon, he was in the succession of Patrick, when the Mael-Brigte Codex was written: namely, in the year of the sixteenth Epaet [falling] upon Jan. 1—1000, 1 m-bliadain dano reirde deac for Kalann Enair.

For the battle of Thurles (which is also found in the Annals of Innisfallen), see the masterly note of O'Donovan (F. M. iii. 16 sq.).

To the Synod of Birr is perhaps to be referred the transfer of Westmeath to the See of Clonmacnoise, recorded by the F. M. at this year.

Kalends of Jan. on 5th feria, 16th of the moon, A.D. [1176 Bis.] 1176. The Saxons<sup>1</sup> were expelled by Domnall Ua Briain from Limerick, by a leaguer being made against them.—Bean-Midhe<sup>2</sup>, daughter of Donnchadh Ua Cerbaill, wife of Cu-maighi<sup>3</sup> Ua Flainn, queen of Ui-Tuirtri and Fir-Li, died.—The daughter of Ruaidhri Ua Conchobair, wife of [F]laithbertach Ua Maeldoraidh, was killed by the sons of Ua Cairella[i]n.—Fabor and Cenannus were wasted<sup>4</sup> by the Foreigners and by the Ui-Briuin.—Niall, son of Mac Lochlainn, was killed by Muinnter-Branain.—Lughmadh was wasted by the Saxons.—A castle<sup>5</sup> of the Foreigners

Strongbow, Raymond Le Gros set out for Dublin, having committed Limerick to Donald (O'Brien), as baron of the king and received hostages and multiplied oaths respecting its safe custody and restitution and the preservation of peace. But, no sooner had the English left than Donald, with the characteristic infidelity of his nation, set the city on fire in four places! Giraldus took no trouble to enquire what motive could have prompted O'Brien to burn a place that thus peaceably reverted to his possession.

<sup>2</sup> Bean—Midhe.—Woman of Meath. "It was very common as the proper name of a woman among the ancient Irish, as was also Bean-Muman, meaning woman, or lady, of Munster" (O'Donovan, F.M. iii. 24).

<sup>3</sup> Cu-Maighi.—Hound of the plain; Cu-Midhe.—Hound of Meath.—Both these names were employed amongst the family of O'Flynn (O'D. F.M. iii. 25).

<sup>5</sup> A castle.—The compiler of the Annals of Loch Ce makes this into "The castles of the Foreigners and of Cenannus were a-building" (Caislen Gall ocus Cenannus ag a n-denum)! The editor takes Gall for a local name and gravely says that

And three castles in Meath were razed on the morrow for fear of the Cenel-Eogain, namely, the castle of Cenannus and the castle of Calatruim and the castle of Daire of [St.] Patrick.—Cu-maighi<sup>3</sup> Ua Flainn, king of Ui-Tuirtri and Fir-Li and Dal-Araidhe, was killed by Cu-Midhe<sup>3</sup>, his own brother and by the Fir-Li.

(Diarmoid,<sup>8</sup> son of Cormac Mac Carrthaigh, king of Desmond, was taken prisoner by his own son, that is, by Cormac the Gray.)

Kalends of Jan. on 7th feria, 27th of the moon, A.D. [1177] 1177. Dun-da-lethglas was destroyed by John De Courcy<sup>1</sup> and by the knights that came with him, and a castle<sup>2</sup> was made by them there, wherefrom they twice<sup>3</sup> inflicted defeat upon Ulidia and defeat upon Cenel-Eogain and upon Airgialla; where was killed Couchobur Ua Cairella[i]n Dunlevy (who succeeded his brother, Roderick in the kingdom of Ulidia in 1171, supra), having taken to flight.

<sup>3</sup> Twice.—Giraldus states (loc. cit.) that the first defeat was inflicted after the Purification (Feb. 2), upon a force of 10,000; the second, on the Nativity of St John (June 24), upon 15,000.

<sup>4</sup> Milo Cogan, etc.—In the Exp. Hib. (ii. 19) no mention is made of Murchadh O'Conor. De Cogan is said to have had 40 knights and 500 men. The Connaughtmen burned cities, towns, churches and such provisions as they were unable to conceal. They likewise cast down crucifixes and images of Saints in presence of the enemy. The invading force advanced as far as Tuam. There it remained (namely, chief of Clann-Diarmata) and Gilla Mac Liac Ua [1177] Donngaille, chief of Fir-Droma, and wherein was wounded with arrows Domnall Ua [F]laithbertaigh—and he died of those wounds in the monastery [of Canons Regular] of Paul [and Peter] in Ard-Macha, after partaking of the Body of Christ and after his anointing—and wherein were killed many other nobles. Now, Conchobur Ua Cairella[i]n before that (namely, in the Spring) inflicted defeat upon the Cenel-Eogain and upon Ua Maeldoraidh; where a great number of the Cenel-Eogain were killed, around the son of Mac Sherraigh and around many nobles besides.—Milo Cogan<sup>4</sup> with his knights was taken by the son of Ruaidhri (namely, Murchadh) Ua Conchobhuir to Ros-Comain to destroy Connacht, for evil<sup>5</sup> towards his father. The Connachtmen, however, immediately burned Tuaim-da-gualann and the churches of the country besides, for evil<sup>5</sup> towards the Foreigners and they inflicted defeat upon the Foreigners and drove them by force out of the country. Moreover, Ruaidhri Ua Conchobuir blinded that son (namely, Murchadh) afterwards, in revenge of that expedition.—Aedh Ua Neill (namely, “The lazy youth”<sup>6</sup>), king of Cenel-Eogain for a time and royal heir of all Ireland, was killed by Mael-Sechlainn, son of Mac Lochlainn and by Ardgall, son of Mac Lochlainn (that is, son to that Mael-Sechlainn). But Ardgall himself was killed by Ua Neill at his [Ua Neill] being killed there.—The Timpanist<sup>7</sup> Ua Coinnecen, arch-ollam of the North of Ireland, was eight days; but, finding the land void of sustenance, returned to the Shannon. In a wood close by the river, King Roderick was encountered at the head of three large armies. A fierce conflict ensued. The English lost three, slew many of the enemy and escaped safe to Dublin! Credat Judæus.

<sup>7</sup> Timpanist.—For the Timpanist, see O'Curry (Manners and Customs, etc., iii. 364 sq.) For the stringed instrument, the Timpan, see ib., 359 sq., and i. dxxviii—ix.

Moreover, John went during the same expedition into Ui-Tuirtri and into Fir-Li, until Cu-Midhe Ua Flainn burned Airthir-Maighi before him and they [John's forces] burned Cuil-rathain and many other churches.—Niall Ua Gailmredhaigh, king of the Men of Magh-Itha and of Cenel-Ennai, was killed by Donnchadh Ua Cairella[i]n and by the Clann-Diarmata, in the centre of Daire of Colum-cille: and [it happened thus:] a house was burned upon him there, so that he came out from it [and] was killed at the door of the house. However, Donnchadh Ua Cairella[i]n, chief of Clann-Diarmata, made peace with Colum-cille and with the Community of Daire then, on behalf of himself and his son and his grand sons,—to wit, the monastic service<sup>9</sup> of himself for ever and of his son and of his grandsons and of his posterity to doom unto Colum-cille and unto the Community of Daire and [to give] a bally-betagh<sup>10</sup> in the neighbourhood of Domnach-mor. And “The Gray Son,” that is, the best goblet that was in Ireland, was given to the Community of Daire, in pledge for three score cows. And [he agreed] to make a house for the cleric whose house was burned upon Ua Gairmledhaigh and to pay him all the chattel that they burned about him. The Clann-Diarmata also made peace on their own behalf.

St. Stephen on the Coelian Mount and Papal Legate. Hoveden (in agreement with Benedict of Peterborough) states that he spent the Christmas of 1176 in Man with Guthred, the king. After the Epiphany he set sail for Ireland and landed at Down. On his way thence, along the coast, to Dublin, he was arrested by the army of De Courey (and apparently brought back to Down). John, however, allowed him to proceed and, at his request, liberated the bishop of Down, who had been taken prisoner in the first battle of Down.

Maenmhaidhe was taken prisoner by his father, namely [1177]
by Ruaighri Ua Conchobhair.)

Kalends of Jan. on 1st feria, 9th of the moon, A.D. [1178]
1178. Namely, the 1st year<sup>1</sup> of the Decemnovennal [Cycle]. Conchobur, son of Conallach Ua Luinigh, took the chieftaincy of Cenel-Maien and Domnall, son of Domnall Ua Gailmredhaigh, was expelled from Magh-Itha into Inis-Eogain, to Donnchadh Ua Duibdirma. The Cenel-Maien, however, in the same year, namely, before the end of one quarter, deposed the son of Conallach and gave the chieftaincy to Domnall, son of Domnall.—The people of Domnall Ua Gailmredhaigh, that is, the son of “the blind gillie” Ua Eiderla and Ua [F]lannacain, killed the son of Conallach Ua Luinigh in the centre of the house of Domnall Ua Gailmredhaigh, in treachery and the herenagh of the Ernaidhe [was] with him, protecting him. However, Domnall Ua Gailmredhaigh was deposed and Cenel-Maien gave the chieftainship to Ruaidhri Ua [F]laithbertaigh. Nevertheless, a treacherous attack was made by the three sons of Ua [F]laithbertaigh and the Clann-Domnall also upon the Cenel-Moien. Howbeit, Domnall, son of Domnall Ua Gailmredhaigh, was killed in that same [attack] and Tighernan, son of Raghannall, son of Domnall [was killed] and eight full biatachs of the nobles of Cenel-Moien along with them [were killed].—

<sup>13</sup> A Synod.—Of bishops, held in Dublin, according to Cambrensis (Exp. Hib. ii. 11). The Legate (ib.) proclaimed the right of the English king over Ireland and the papal confirmation thereof, and commanded clergy and laity to submit, under threat of anathema. And, it being customary (in time of war) for the Irish to carry provisions for safety to churches, he empowered an English expeditionary force, when victuals were not otherwise obtainable, to extract those found in churches, on payment of a fair price!

1178. <sup>1</sup> 1st year.—The Epact, ix., sufficiently denoted the initial year of the Decemnovennal Cycle.

Raghnall, son of Echmarcach Ua Catha[i]n, was killed by [1178] the Cenel-Maien in the beginning of that summer. So, in revenge of that, fell Galach Ua Luinigh and Muircertach Ua Peatain and it is in revenge of it the treacherous attack of the sons of Domnall was made upon the Cenel-Moien.—It is in that year also there came a wonderful, violent wind which prostrated a very large portion of woods and forests and very great oaks full flat on the ground. It prostrated also six score oaks, or a little more, in Daire of Colum-cille.—It is in that year likewise went John [De Courcy], with his knights, pillaging from Dun to the Plain of Conaille, so that they took many preys therein and were a night in camp in Glenn-righi. Howbeit, Murchadh Ua Cerbaill, king of Airgialla, and Mac Duinnsleibhe [Ua Eochadha], king of Ulidia, with the Ulidians came up with them that night and made an onset upon them.<sup>2</sup> Thereupon defeat was inflicted<sup>3</sup> upon the Foreigners and stark slaughter was put upon them. The same John, notwithstanding, went for preys into Dal-Araidhe and into Ui-Tuirtri. But Cu-Midhe Ua Flainn, king of Ui-Tuirtri and Fir Li<sup>4</sup>, made an onset upon them<sup>2</sup>. That battle also went against the Foreigners and slaughter of them was inflicted.

 1179. Namely, the 2nd of the Decemnovennal [Cycle], the 3rd year above a Bissextile. Peace was made by Donnchadh Ua Cairella[i]n and by all Clann-Diarmata with the Cenel-Moien and Ua Galmredhaigh: namely, with Amlaim, son of Menman, that is the brother of the wife of Donnchadh Ua Cairilla[i]n, in the centre of the church of Ard-sratha, upon the relics of Domnach-mor and of the Ernaidhe and of Ard-sratha. Thereupon Ua Galmredhaigh came on the morrow, to receive additional sureties, to the house of Donnchadh Ua Cairilla[i]n. Inhospitable treachery<sup>1</sup> was committed in the midst of the assembly,<sup>1</sup> at the door of the house of Ua Cairilla[i]n, in the presence of his [Amlaim's] own sister, namely, the wife of Donnchadh: that is, three<sup>2</sup> of his [Amlaim's] people were killed along with himself, namely, Cinaeth (that is, a full Biatach), son of Art Ua Braca[i]n and the son of Gilla-Crist, son of Cormac Mac Reodain, to wit, the very foster-brother to Donnchadh Ua Cairella[i]n.—Ard-Macha was burned for the greater part: that is, all the houses of Canons Regular and all the churches that were in it, all were burned, save the house of the Canons Regular of Brigit and the church of the Relics.<sup>3</sup>—Ua Ruadhacain, king of Ui-Echach, died after three nights' illness, after his expulsion and after his profanation<sup>4</sup> of the Canon of Patrick a short time before.—The churches of Tir-Eogain from the mountain southwards were desolated through war and through dearth in that year.—Gilla-Domnaigh<sup>5</sup> Ua Faranna[i]n, herenagh of <sup>2</sup> The Order, etc. — This entry (which likewise occurs in Clyn's Annals, ad. an.) is a strange jumble of errors. The Order of Templars was confirmed by the Council of Troyes in 1128. Arnaud de Toroge, the eighth Grand Master, ruled from 1179 to 1184.

The Order of the Hospitallers of St. John (the Baptist) of Jerusalem was confirmed by Pope Paschal II. in 1113. Roger des Moulins, the seventh Grand Master, governed from 1177 to 1187.

The earliest notices of the Orders in Anglo-Irish documents are perhaps the grant by King John (July, 1199) of possessions in Ireland to

[was inflicted] by Ruaidhri Ua Conchobuir and by Concobur Maenmuighi upon Donnchadh, son of Domnall the Midian and upon Ua Maeldoraidh, where many fell.) [1182]

Kalends of Jan. on 1st feria, 15th of the moon, A.D. 1184. Thirty houses of the principal members<sup>1</sup> of the Community of Ard-Macha were pillaged by the Foreigners of Meath.—Mael-Isu Ua Cerbaill [bishop of Clogher] took the succession of Patrick, after it was laid aside by Tomaltach Ua Conchobair.—Art Ua Mael-Sechlainn, king of the West of Meath, was killed by direction of the Foreigners. Mael-Sechlainn the Little took the kingship in his stead.—A castle<sup>2</sup> was built by the Foreigners in Cell-fair.—Another castle was destroyed by Mael-Sechlainn and by Conchobur Maenmaighi Ua Conchobair, with a large number of Foreigners therein. [1184 Bis.]

the Knights Templars and a grant by the same (June, 1200) of a charter of liberties to the Knights Hospitallers (Calendar of Documents relating to Ireland, Vol. I. Nos. 85, 123).

Donnchadh ; Gilla-Isu ; Great war.
—These three items are erroneously inserted in this place. See them under next year.

1184. <sup>1</sup> Principal members.—Literally, good (men). For maithibh the Four Masters have roighnibh cumhdaighthi, which seems meaningless. O'Donovan translates it "of the best houses," which is not the sense of the original.

<sup>3</sup> Donnchadh, etc.—These items (with the exception of the third and son-Concobair of the fourth) are given in the Annals of Boyle under this year. Observe the capricious variants in the transcription of the three entries that are also placed under the preceding year: Midigh-Midig, Isu-Isa, Muighi-Maighi, Concobhair-Conchobuir.

<sup>4</sup> Great war.—According to the Annals of Boyle, Ruaidhri gave up the kingship to his son in 1183 and “reigned again” in 1184. The present entry (if it be not misplaced; Cf. the first additional item of 1185) will thus signify that he re-took possession by force.

 1185. Great crop (namely, oak-crop) generally in this year.—Philip<sup>1</sup> of Worcester, with the Foreigners of Ireland along with him, [stayed] in Ard-Macha for six days and six nights in the very middle of the Lent.—Amhlaim Ua Muirethaigh, bishop of Ard-Macha and Cenel-Feradhaigh, the shining lamp that used to illuminate laity and clergy, rested in Christ in Dun-Cruthnai. And he was carried honourably to Daire of Colum-cille and buried at the feet of his father, namely, the bishop Ua Cobhthaigh<sup>2</sup> (that is, beside the small church), in the 86th year of his age.

Elapsa vero hieme, convocato exercitu magno, circa Kalendas Martii Archmatiam profectus sacro quadragesimali tempore, a clero sacro auri tributum execrabile tam exigens quam extorquens, cum suis per urbem Lugdunensem [Louth] Dubliniam indemnis est reversus (Exp. Hib. ii. 25). The same is given in substance in the Top. Hib. dist. ii. c. 50.

<sup>2</sup> Ua Cobhthaigh.—"It looks very odd," O'Donovan observes, (Four Masters, iii. p. 69) "that a bishop O'Murray (Ua Muirethaigh) should be the son of a bishop O'Coffey." His mother, the editor of the Annals of Loch Ce suggests, may have been of the family of O'Murray and he may have adopted her name. He succeeded Ua Cerball (O'Carroll).

"[540?]." This would date the foundation half a century after the son of "the stooping gillie," chief of Ui-Brana[i]n, was killed by Domnall Ua Lochlainn, by direction of the Muinnter-Brana[i]n themselves. [1186]

(A)

Ugo De Lacy was killed by O'Miadhaigh<sup>1</sup> of Tebtha (that is, the destroyer and the dissolver of the sanctuaries and churches of Ireland—he was killed in reparation to Colum-cille, whilst building a castle namely, in Dermagh).

(B)

Hugo De Lacy, destroyer [and] dissolver of the churches and sanctuaries of Ireland, was killed by Ua Miadhaigh of Breghmuna,<sup>2</sup> by [direction] of the "Fox" Ua Catharnaigh, in reparation to Colum-cille, whilst building a castle in his church, namely, in Dermagh, in the 640th<sup>3</sup> year since the church of Dairmagh was founded.

And seven hundred, or something more, both men and women, were burned and drowned in the space of one hour therein.—Druim-cliabh was pillaged by the son of Mael-Sechlainn Ua Ruairc (namely, by Aedh), king of Ui-Briuin and Conmaicni and by the son of Cathal Ua Ruairc and by the Foreigners of Meath along with them. But God wrought a wonderful deed for Colum-cille therein,—that is, the son of Mael-Sechlainn Ua Ruairc (namely, Aedh) was killed (in Conmaicni) before the end of a fortnight thereafter. And the son of Cathal Ua Ruairc, with whom came the hosting into the house of Ua Maeldoraidh, was blinded in reparation to Colum-cille. And six score of the minions of the son of Mael-Sechlainn were killed throughout the length of Conmaicni and Cairpri of Druim-cliabh, through miracle of Colum-cille. [1187]

 1188. Ruaidhri Ua Cananna[i]n, king of Cenel-Conaill for a time and royal heir of Ireland, was killed by Flaithbertach Ua Maeldoraidh through treachery, at the Bridge of Slicech, after decoying him out from the centre of Druim-cliabh. And a brother of his was killed along with him and a party of his people. Ua Gairb (namely, Maghnus), chief of Fir-Droma, who laid [violent] hands on Ua Cananna[i]n, was killed by the people of Echmarcach Ua Dochartaigh in revenge of Ua Cananna[i]n.—Domnall Ua Cananna[i]n laid open his foot with his own axe, whilst cutting a faggot of firewood in Daire and he died thereof, by miracle of Coluim-cille.—Martin Ua Brolaigh, arch-sage of all the Goeidhil and arch-lector of Ard-Macha, died.—Amhlaim Ua Daighri came to I[ona] on his pilgrimage and he died in I[ona] after choice penance.—The Foreigners of the castle of Magh-Coba and a party of the Ui-Echach of Ulidia came on a foray into Tir-Eogain, until they reached to Leim-mic-Neill<sup>1</sup> and seized cows there. And Domnall Ua Lochlainn went against them with a force of his own party, until he overtook them at Cabhan of the High Trees. They gave them battle and it went against the Foreigners and slaughter of them was inflicted. And a thrust of a foreign spear was given to the king alone, so that he fell there in the conflict: that is, Domnall, son of Aedh Ua Lochlainn, king of Ailech and [worthy to be] royal heir of Ireland for form and for sense and for excellence and for prudence. And he was carried that very day to Ard-Macha and buried there honourably.—A hosting by John De-Courcy and by the Foreigners of all Ireland into Connacht, along with Con-

 of C., having forgotten apparently that he had translated from this to the end of the year under 1179, renders it thus in this place: “and O'Moyldoray were at Drunkliew, they burnt Esdara all and turned to Connaght againe and into camp [“their houldings,” 1179: recte

 the Seghdais]. And Connaght

cobur Ua Diarmata. Concobar Maenmhaighi (namely, [1188] king of Connacht) musters the Connachtmen and Domnall Ua Briain, king of Munster, comes with a party of the Men of Munster into the force of the king of Connacht. And they burn some of the churches of the country on their march<sup>2</sup> and some they allowed to escape them [intact]. Howbeit, the Foreigners turn back to Ess-dara to come into Tir-Conaill. But, when they heard that the Cenel-Conaill and Ua Maeldoraidh<sup>3</sup> were at Druim-cliaabh, they burned Ess-dara completely and turn again into Connacht and come into the Seghdais. And the Connachtmen and Men of Munster deliver an attack upon them and the Foreigners are killed with slaughter and leave the country by force without a whit of triumph.—Etain, daughter of Ua Cuinn, queen of Munster, who was on her pilgrimage at Daire, died after victory over<sup>4</sup> the world and over<sup>4</sup> the demon.

(Muircertach<sup>5</sup> Ua Concheanainn, son of Uathu, king of Ui-Diarmata, died.—Domnall, son of Lochlann Ua Maeilruanaidh and Fearghal Ua Taidhg “of the [hospitable] household” and Flaithbertach, Ua Finnachta, son of Riucc, were slain.—Muircertach Ua Brain, king of Breghmhuine, was slain.—Ua Mailruanaidh<sup>6</sup> was slain, A.D. 1188.)

Kalends of Jan. on 1st feria, 10th of the moon, A.D. [1189] 1189. Domnall, son of Muircertach Ua Lochlainn, was killed by the Foreigners of Dal-Araidhe, [whilst] amongst themselves.—Murchadh Ua Cerbaill, arch-king of Air-and Mounster came upon them and slaughtered them and left the country by force, without much fight [“with some bickering,” 1179].—Edyn, O’Cuyn’s daughter that was pilgrim at Dyry, died.”

In B they are assigned to 1195 and 1196. <sup>c-c</sup> All the entries are given under the preceding year (1195), B, C.

<sup>3</sup> Florence.—This and the Domnall obit are given in the Annals of Boyle, 1195. The second entry is in the Annals of Loch Ce and the Four Masters.

The Annals of Boyle state that Florence was third abbot of Boyle and equate 1195 of his death with the (Eusebian) Mundane year 6394.

<sup>4</sup> Successor.—Comarba. So called

Mac Fachtna died in the Penitentiary of Daire.—The arch-priest<sup>2</sup> of I[on]a died.—The son of the Cleric Ua Cathala[i]n [1195]

The house of the Canons Regular of Paul and Peter [in Ard-Macha] with its churches and a large portion of the Close was burned.—A hosting by Ruaidhri Mac Duinnsleibhe [Ua Eochadha] with the Foreigners and with the sons of the kings of Connacht to Cenel-Eogain and the Airthir. Howbeit, the Cenel-Eogain of Telach-oc and the Airthir came to the Plain of Ard-Macha and gave them battle and defeat was inflicted upon Mac Duinnsleibe and stark slaughter of his people took place there, namely, twelve sons of the kings of Connacht.— Muircertach, son of Muircertach Ua Lochlainn, king of Cenel-Eogain and royal heir of all Ireland, namely, tower of championship and valour of the Half of Conn, dissolver of the Foreigners and of castles, upholder of churches and dignities, was killed by Donnchadh, son of Bloscadh Ua Catha[i]n, by counsel of all Cenel-Eogain: that is, after pledging the three Shrines<sup>1</sup> and the Canon of Patrick<sup>2</sup> to

The Annals of Innisfallen have abbatis. Whence it may be inferred that he was abbot and bishop.

Kalends of Jan. on 6th feria, 1st of the moon, A.D. 1199. Ruaidhri Ua Concobair (that is, son of Toirrdhealbhaich Ua Conchubair), king of Ireland, rested in penance.<sup>1</sup> —Cathalan Ua Maelfhabaill, king of Carraic-Brachaidhe, was killed by O'Derain and O'Derain was killed at the same time.—A hosting by John De-Courcy into Tir-Eogain throughout the churches: namely, Ard-sratha and Rath-both were destroyed by him, until he reached Daire, so that he was there two nights over a week, destroying Inis-Eogain and the country besides. And he would not have gone therefrom for a long time, had not [lit. until] Aedh Ua Neill, [with] a force of five ships, reached Cell [ruadh<sup>2</sup>] in Latharna, so that he burned a part of the town and killed twenty, wanting two, therein. Then the Foreigners of Magh-Line and Dal-Araidhe were, three hundred [strong], both in mail<sup>3</sup> and without mail,<sup>3</sup> in front of him and they [the Irish] noticed not, until [the Foreigners] poured against them, burning the town. Thereupon they gave battle in the centre of the town and it went against the Foreigners. And [the Irish] gave five defeats to them thenceforward, until they went into their ships and only five of the people of Ua Neill were lost. Thereafter John went away, when he heard that.—Great war between [Cenel-]Cona[i]ll and [Cenel-]Eoga[i]n, so that Cenel-Conaill gave the kingship to Ua Eicnigh. Then he came to meet them to the Termonn of [St.] Dabeoc. Ua Neill with the Men of Magh-Itha came against him, to prevent him, so that each of them saw the other. And Ua Eicnigh was defeated and left pledges. From here Aedh Ua Neill and the Cenel-Eogain [went] on the same day, until they harried Cenel-Conaill around the Plain of Magh-Itha and took countless cattle-spoil away with them. And it is on that foray Niall Ua Duibhdirma was killed on a surprise party. After that, a hosting [was made] by Aedh Ua Neill and by the Cenel-Eogain to the Plain of Magh-Itha, to give battle to the Cenel-Conaill, so that the Cenel-Conaill abandoned the camp and they made a kind of peace then. [1199]

(Peace<sup>4</sup> was made between Cathal Red-Hand Ua Conchubair with Cathal Carrach, son of Conchubar Maenmaighe and [Cathal] was brought into the country and land given to him.)

Kalends of Jan. on 2nd feria, 24th of the moon, A.D. [1201]
1201. Ruaidhri Mac Duinnsleibhe [Ua Eochada], king of Ulidia and candle of championship of all Ireland, was killed by the Foreigners, to wit, through the miracles of Paul and Peter and Patrick whom he dishonoured.<sup>1</sup>—Tomaltach Ua Conchobair, successor of Patrick and arch-primate of all Ireland for wisdom and piety, rested in peace.—Expulsion of Cathal Red-hand Ua Conchobuir and coronation of Cathal Carrach in his stead (Or perhaps it is in this [preceding] year above the expulsion of Cathal Red-hand comes.).—A hosting by Aedh Ua Neill in aid of Cathal Red-hand with the Men of Magh-Itha and with the Airghialla, until they came to Tech-Baithin of Airtech. They turned there until they came to Es-dara and Cathal Carrach with the nobles of Connacht and William [de] Burgh with the Foreigners of Limerick along with him overtook them. And the North of Ireland was defeated and Ua Eicnigh, arch-king of Airghialla and many others were lost.—A hosting by John De Courcy with the Foreigners and the son of Ugo De Lacy with the Foreigners of Meath in aid of Cathal Red-hand, until they reached Cell-mic-

And he made a foray into Tir-Ennai, so that he took away cows innumerable and killed people. Then came Eicnechan Ua Domnaill with the fleet of Cenel-Conaill and with their host on land, so that they formed a camp at Gaeth-in-cairrgin. Thereafter came the Clann-Diarmata to Port-rois on the other side, to act against the fleet. After that, there were sent against them the thirteen ships full of the host, so that [the battle] went against the Clann-Diarmata. Thereupon Mac Lachlainn (namely, Conchubhur the Little) came to their aid, until his horse was wounded and he fell of that fall by the Cenel-Conaill, in reparation of [St.] Colum-cille and of his successor and of his Shrine that he dishonoured.<sup>3</sup> And through the same miracle Conchobur killed Murchadh Ua Crichain, king of Ui-Fiachrach.

day in the present year. This goes to prove that the Annals of Loch Ce (followed by the F. M.) err in assigning the obit to 1202; in which the 27th fell on Saturday, a day of no particular note. For Ua Brochain, see Adamnan, p. 409, note o.

enclosure of Iona, without any right, in dishonour of the Community of Iona, so that he wrecked the place greatly. A hosting, however, was made by the clergy of Ireland, namely, by Florence Ua Cerballain, bishop of Tir-Eogain and by Mael-Isu Ua Dorig, that is, bishop of Tir-Conaill and by the Abbot of the Monastery of Paul and Peter in Ard-Macha and by Amalgaidh Ua Fergail, abbot of the Monastery of Doire and by Ainmire Ua Cobhthaigh and a large number of the Community of Doire and a large number of the clergy of the North, so that they razed the monastery, according to the law of the Church. That Amalgaidh aforesaid took the abbacy of Iona by selection of Foreigners and Gaidhil. [1204] of the North of Ireland, rested in peace. As the poet original. The egregious mistake of easpadh, loss, for espor, bishop, is specially significant. (In the MS.

 the lines and verses are written continuously.)

"Mael-Peter O'Calman, coarb of Caynech, a man full of liberality and goodnes of all the North [of Ireland], in pace quievit. Ut poeta dixit :

Ἐαυπαρῶν, etc. : in English :

 To which I compare noe other evil ;
 There is a sanctuary which that hurteth,
 That this night there is noe prayer in his citty.

[Ἐαυπαρῶν, etc. :] signifying :

Co[m]arba, etc. : thus :

The coarb of Caineagh of churches,
 A want to all in common,
 Giveth lamentacion to all the poore,

The author of D merely gives the substance of the first quatrain (in which he shews he understood the meaning of easpadh) : De quo dictum fuit, quod eo deficiente, relligio defuit in eius ciuitate.

<sup>6</sup> Successor of [St.] Patrick.—The archbishop of Armagh. This was Echdonn (latinized Eugenius) Mac Gille-uidhir. On May 4, 1203, King John granted the see of Armagh and primacy of Ireland (cf. A.D. 1202, note 3, supra) to Humphrey of Tikehull. On the 22nd of the same month, he notified the suffragans and subjects of the archdiocese that Eugene, "called the elect of Armagh," had, against the king's consent and after the king's appeal to the Pope, gone to Rome to secure his promotion and commanded them, if he should return, not to receive him as archbishop. Humphrey having died,

De Lacy into Ciannachta, so that he burned the churches of all Ciannachta and seized cows to a countless number.—The successor of [St.] Patrick<sup>6</sup> went to the court of the king of the Saxons to succour the churches of Ireland and to accuse the Foreigners of Ireland. [1207]

Kalends of Jan. on 5th feria, 21st of the moon, A.D. 1209. [1209]
A foray-hosting by Aedh Ua Neill into Inis-Eogain and Ua Domnaill overtook him, so that they gave battle, wherein were killed a countless number of persons on each side. Here was killed Domnall Mac Murchadha of the Cenel-Eogain; also Ferghal Ua Baighill and Cathbarr Ua Domnaill and Cormac Ua Domnaill and David Ua Dochurtaigh, with a multitude of the nobles of Cenel-Conaill along with them.—A battle was fought by the sons of Ragnall, son of Somurlech, against the Men of Sciadh, wherein slaughter was inflicted upon them.<sup>1</sup>

the king (Feb. 10, 1204) approved of Ralph, archdeacon of Meath, and commanded the clergy and laity to consider him elected and obey him (Doc. Irè., 177, 178, 200).

These letters were disregarded: perhaps, never reached their destination. Echdonn was confirmed by Innocent III. and obtained peaceable possession of the See. We next find the king availing of his services. On July 19 of the present year, he informs the custodians of the See of Exeter that he sends Eugene, archbishop of Armagh and primate of Ireland, to execute the episcopal office in that diocese and commands them to find him suitable maintenance with six horses (ubi sup., 331).

The visit here mentioned may have been one of the reasons that influenced John to go to Ireland three years later.

 centuries. The authors of the Histoire littéraire de la France (Tome xvi., p. 188-9. Paris, 1824) allow it no merit.

The Biblical Leonine verses attributed to him and which deserve the censure given by the Benedictines (loc. cit.) are spurious, according to some. See Joecher:

(Finghin,<sup>2</sup> son of Diarmaid, son of Cormac Mac Carthaigh, king of Desmond, was slain by his own [people].—Ualgharc Ua Ruairc was dethroned and Art, son of Domnall, son of Fearghal Ua Ruairc, was made king in his stead.—In the year [of our Lord] one thousand two hundred and nine, Alexander,<sup>3</sup> reverend Doctor [of Theology] and Master [of Arts], then [first] delivered his Doctrinal to be read.) [1209]

Kalends of Jan. on 6th feria, 2nd of the moon, A.D. 1210. Gilla-Crist Ua Cernaigh, bishop<sup>1</sup> of Conderi, rested in good penance.—The king<sup>2</sup> of the Saxons [John] came into Ireland with a fleet hard to count, namely, seven hundred ships. [1210]

(Art,<sup>3</sup> son of Domnall, son of Ferghal Ua Ruairc, king of Breifni, was killed through treachery by Cormac, son of Art Ua Mail-Seachlainn.—Ceile Ua Dubhthaigh, bishop of Magh-Eo of the Saxons, rested in Christ.—Flaithbertach Ua Flainn, namely, successor of [St.] Dachonna<sup>4</sup> of Eas-mic-Eirc, died.)

<sup>4</sup> Dachonna.—O'Donovan (F. M. iii., p. 162) and Reeves (Adamnan, p. 281) fell into an unaccountable error in making Dachonna the son of Erc. According to the Genealogies of Saints (L. L., p. 348b) and the Nemsenchas (versified Genealogies: L. Be. [Book of Ballymote], p. 230a ll. 40, 41), Dachonna and Lugaid and bishop Cormac were sons of Echaid, son of Illand, son of Eogan [a quo Cenel-Eogain] (son, L. L., loc. cit., adds, of Niall of the Nine Hostages).

The son of Erc, from whom the Cataract (Ess: at present, Assylyn, on the Boyle, about a mile west of the town) took its ancient name, was probably Echaid, the last of the Firbolgic kings, who was slain in the battle of Magh Tuired, near Cong.

 1211. The Foreigners came to Narrow-Water, until Aedh Ua Neill assembled [Cenel-]Conaill and [Cenel-]Eogain and the Airghialla, so that they [the Foreigners] were killed by him.

(Toirrdhealbach,<sup>1</sup> son of Ruaidhri Ua Conchubhair, made a foray into Magh-Luirg, until he brought the spoil with him into the Seghas to Diarmod, his kinsman. And Aodh, son of Cathal, followed him, until [Toirrdhealbach] went into the North, fleeing before him.—The hostages<sup>2</sup> of Connacht came [back] to Ireland: namely, Diarmaid, son of Conchubhar [Mac Diarmata], Conchubhar Ua Eaghra and Finn Ua Carmacan and Toibear, son of a Foreign-Gaidhel.<sup>3</sup>—Aireachtach Mac Donnchaidh [was slain].)

Kalends of Jan. on 1st feria, 24th of the moon, A.D. [1212 Bis.]
 1212. Sitriuc Ua Laighenain, successor of [St.] Comgall [of Bangor], died and Oengus Mac Cormaic was instituted in his stead.—The castle of Cluain-Eois was built by the Foreigners (and by the Foreign bishop<sup>1</sup>) and a foray-hosting was made by them into Tir-Eogain (And the Fir-Manach inflicted great slaughter upon them there.)—Aedh Ua Neill, king of [Cenel-]Conaill and of [Cenel-]Eogain and of the Airghialla overtook them and defeat [was inflicted] upon the Foreigners, wherein were killed a countless number of them.—Thomas, son of Uchtrach with the sons of Ragnall, son of Somarle, came to Daire of [St.] Colum-cille with six and seventy ships and the town was greatly destroyed by them and Inis-Eogain was completely destroyed by them and by the Cenel-Conaill.

However, the Gilla Riabhach Ua Taircheirt, namely, royal chief of Clann-Sneidhghille and Clann-Finghin, is killed in defence of [those under] his protection.—Druim-cain with its church was burned by the Cenel-Eogain without permission from [the king] Ua Neill.—Ferghal Ua Cathain, king of Ciannachta and Firna-craibhe, was killed by the Foreigners.—Domnall Ua Daimin was killed by the sons of Mac Lachlainn at the door of the Monastery of Daire of [St.] Colum-cille.

(The castle<sup>2</sup> of Cluain-Eois was burned.—Gillibert Mac Coisdealbh was killed in the castle of the Narrow [-Water] and the castle was also burned at the time.—Donnchadh Ua Eidhin was blinded by Aedh, son of Cathal Red-Hand [Ua Conchubair].—The defeat of the Wood of the [High] Trees was given by Cormac, son of Art Ua Mail-Seachlainn, to the Foreigners.)

The original celloir is the equivalent of the Latin cellarius, whose duties are thus defined in the Rule of St. Isidore: Iste prebebit heb-

But God and [St.] Colum-cille wrought a great miracle therein: the man that assembled and mustered [the force], namely, Mathgamain Mag Aithne, was killed in reparation to Colum-cille immediately, at the door of the Penitentiary of Colum-cille.—Ainmire Ua Cobhthaigh, abbot of the Monastery of Daire, eminent cleric select for piety, for disposition, for meekness, for magnanimity, for benevolence, for great charity, for every goodness besides, after most excellent penance entered the way of all flesh in the Penitentiary of Colum-cille.—The castle of Cuil-rathain was built by Thomas, son of Uchtrach and by the Foreigners of Ulidia. And all the cemeteries and fences and buildings of the town, save the church alone, were pulled down for that.—The King of Scotland died, namely, William<sup>2</sup> Garm.—Aedh Ua Neill gave a defeat to the Foreigners and stark slaughter of the Foreigners was inflicted therein and Carrlongport was burned, both people and effects, on the same day.

<sup>5</sup> John.—The author of D mistook the meaning : Papa ipsa redonauit regi una cum mille marchis, etc. It is open to doubt whether it was understood by the translator of C : "The Pope surrendred them againe to himselfe and a 1000 marcks to him and after every yeare 700," etc.

The history of the donation and re-donation is sufficiently well known. (For an abstract of the Charter, St. Paul's, London, Oct. 3, 1213—not 1214, as in the text—(see Doc. Ire. I 489. Cf. ib. s. vv.

Pope, I; Tribute, II, III, IV.) Of the money, one-half was to be paid on Sept. 29; the other, on the Easter following. By public script, made at Avignon, April 1, 1317, four delegates (deputed ad hoc by Letters of Edward II., given Dec. 16, 1216) agreed, on behalf of the king, to discharge the arrears of Henry and Edward II., amounting to 24,000 marks, by yearly payments of one fourth on the festival of St. Michael, commencing with the feast next ensuing.

Two receipts of John XXII., in the form of Letters to Edward III., have been preserved. The first bears date April 7 [1330] and is Nois, namely, Ua Muiricean, rested.—Muirceartach, son of Brian, was killed by the Foreigners.—In this year appeared Aedh<sup>4</sup> “of the deceit,” who was called “The Helper.”—John,<sup>5</sup> then king of England, gave Saxon-land and Ireland to the Pope, namely, Innocent III. And the Pope gave them back to him again, and 1000 marks [were to be paid] to him [the Pope] and to [his] successors every year: to wit, 700 from England and 300 from Ireland.) [1214]

Kalends of Jan. on 5th feria, 27th of the moon, A.D. 1215. [1215] A foray was made by Aedh, son of Mael-Sechlainn Mac Lochlainn upon the successor of [St.] Colum-cille and a herd of cattle was carried off by him. And himself was killed by the Foreigners in the same year through miracle of Colum-cille.—Bean-Midhe, daughter of Ua Eignigh, wife of Aedh Ua Neill, king of Ailech, rested in good penance.—A hosting by Aedh Ua Neill into Ulidia and he inflicted great defeat upon the Foreigners of Ulidia.—William,<sup>1</sup> King of Scotland, died and Alexander, his son, was inaugurated in his stead.—A General Council<sup>2</sup> [was held] under Pope Innocent.

for the year ending Sept. 29, 1329 : Cum pro regno Anglie et terris Hibernie census mille marcarum sterlingorum annis singulis Romane ecclesie solvere teneris, etc. (Manner of payment set forth.), Nos solutionem et assignationem approbantes easdem, te ac heredes et successores tuos, necnon regnum et terras predictas de dictis mille marchis sic solutis absolvimus et quitamus.

The second, of July 5, 1333, is for the year ending Sept. 29, 1330, and the half year up to Easter [March 31], 1331. The 1,500 marks were paid in 6,000 gold florins, “singulis marchis pro quatuor florenis auri computatis.”

This was apparently the last payment. In a Brief, Avignon, June 6 [1365], Urban V. reminds Edward III. that he made no remittance since July, 1333, and states that bearer was empowered to treat of this and other pressing matters. But, with respect to the arrears, the mission seems to have proved fruitless. See Theiner: Vet. Mon. Hibern. et Scot., Romae, 1864, pp. 193, 253, 259, 329.

 Fonachtan Ua Bronain, successor of [St.] Colum-cille, rested in peace. And there ensued<sup>1</sup> contention between the Community of Daire and the Cenel-Eogain, respecting the selection in his stead. It is this was done then: the Community of Daire chose Mac Cathmail into the succession and Aedh Ua Neill and the Cenel-Eogain chose Flann Ua Brolcain. After that, moreover, there ensued contention between the Community of Daire and O'Brolcain and O'Brolcain was put out of the succession. After that, moreover, the Community of Daire and the Cenel-Eogain chose Muircertach Ua Millugain, namely, lector of Daire, into the succession. And he had the lectorship and the succession for a year, or a little more. And there ensued contention between Geoffrey Ua Daighri, namely, herenagh of Daire and O'Millugain, that is, the abbot, respecting the lectorship, so that they appealed to the judgment of the successor of Patrick and he made peace between them. And John, son of the [late] Lector, was chosen into the lectorship, according to the successor of Patrick and the successor of Colum-cille and the community of Daire besides.

<sup>2</sup>James.—Said to have been Canon of St. Victor, Paris. Sent as Legate to Ireland (and Scotland) by Honorius III. The Brief of appointment, dated Civita Vecchia, July 31 (1220), was superscribed: Regibus Ultonie, Corcaie, Limrith, Conatie, Insularum [of the Isles], cuilibet per se (Theiner, Vet. Mon., pp. 15, 16).

Respecting the Irish Legation, three Papal commissions are extant. In the first (Civita Vecchia, Aug. 6 [1220]), instructions were given to abrogate the custom [introduced by King John, Jan 14, 17, 1216; Doc. Ireland, I. 736, 739] that no Irishman should receive church preferment (Theiner, Vet. Mon., p. 16). But they do not appear to have been carried into effect. The abuse was abolished by Honorius in a Brief addressed to the Irish clergy (Lateran, Ap. 26 [1224]: Theiner, Vet. Mon., p. 23).

In the second (Civita Vecchia, Aug. 8 [1220]), the Legate was directed to remove the grievance reported by the archbishop of Cashel: namely, when an Englishman lost anything and got six other English to swear they believed his oath that the property was taken by an Irishman, the native, though guiltless and of good name and life and prepared to establish his innocence by thirty or more sworn witnesses, was nevertheless compelled to restitution (Theiner, Vet. Mon., pp. 16, 17). In this matter likewise no action was taken. After an interval of more than thirty years, the "damnable custom" was condemned by Innocent IV. in a Brief (Perugia, July 20 [1252]) to the archbishop of Cashel (Theiner, Vet. Mon., p. 56).

In the third (Lateran, March 19 [1221]), he was enjoined to adjudicate upon four complaints of the same archbishop and the king's reply thereto, touching church lands

[Jan. 18<sup>3</sup>], in the 4th year of the Lord, Pope Innocent [1220] III., nearly seven years before the death of Saint Francis.)

Kalends of Jan. on 6th feria, 4th of the moon, A.D. [1221] 1221. [No original entry].

(Diarmuid,<sup>1</sup> son of Ruaidhri [Ua Conchobhair], was killed.—James,<sup>2</sup> Penitentiary and Chaplain of the Lord Pope and Legate of all Ireland, came into Ireland.—Maelruanaidh<sup>1</sup> Ua Dubhda [king of Ui-Amalgaidh] was drowned.—Saint Dominick died this year.<sup>3</sup>—The first Convent of Preachers came into England.)

(Theiner, Vet. Mon., pp. 18, 20). Nothing, however, was done. Fourteen years later, Gregory IX. (Perugia, Jan. 4. [1235]) commanded the archbishop of Dublin to report upon the matters in question, mentioning that James had been empowered by his predecessor to decide them; but, on account of his departure, no process, it was reported, took place (sed, propter eius recessum, nullus, ut dicitur, fuit processus. Theiner, Vet. Mon. p. 30).

From Letters of Henry III. to the archbishop of Dublin (Jan. 7, 1222 : Doc. Ireland, I. 1026) and Geoffrey De Marisco (June 26, 1222 : Doc. Ireland, I. 1037) we learn that the Legate deposed and sent to the Curia the bishops of Killaloe and Ardfert [Travers and John of Limerick, intruded by De Marisco, whilst he was Justiciary]. In a Brief of Honorius III. (Lateran, May 9 [1226]), we read that James imposed perpetual silence upon Travers and caused another to be consecrated in his place (Theiner, Vet. Mon., p. 26).

In the Annals of Loch Ce (ad an.),

James is charged with gross simony and said to have left Ireland in the year of his arrival. The second statement is confirmed from independent sources. On Nov. 20, 1220, Henry III. commanded the Justiciary, magnates (archbishops and bishops) and others in Ireland to receive honourably Master James, the Pope's Chaplain and Penitentiary, sent as Legate and, should anything new arise touching the state of the country, to have recourse to his counsel and aid (Doc. Ireland, I. 978). On Nov. 1 of the following year, he was one of the witnesses at Westminster to the surrender of Irish castles by deputies, on behalf of Geoffrey De Marisco, late Justiciary (Doc. Ire. I., 1015).

That on his departure he ceased to be Legate, may be inferred from his being merely styled "J[ames], Penitentiary of the Pope" in the document last referred to, and "J[ames], Penitentiary of the Pope and late Papal Legate of Ireland" in Henry's Letters (already mentioned) of Jan. 7 and June 26, 1222.

 1222. The son of Ugo De Lacy came into Ireland in despite of the king of the Saxons, until he came to Aedh O'Neill; so that they went together against the Foreigners of Ireland and destroyed much in Meath and in Leinster and in Ulidia and razed the castle of Cuil-rathain. And the Foreigners of Ireland collected four and twenty battalions<sup>1</sup> at [Dun-]delgain, until Aedh O'Neill and the son of Ugo came with four battalions<sup>2</sup> against them, so that the Foreigners gave the award of his own word to O'Neill.

 Cathal Red-Hand Ua Conchobair, king of Connacht and king of the Gaidhil of Ireland for ability, died in the [Cistercian] Monastery of Cnoc-Muaidhe, on the 5th of the Kalends of June [May 28<sup>1</sup>]. The best Gaidhel that came from Brian Boruma down, for nobleness and for honour; very fortunate and capable preserver of his territories; wealthy, well-disposed, excellent auxiliary of peace. Seems it is in his time tithe was had legally for the first time in Ireland. Fitting, pious, right-judging prop of faith and christianity; punisher of the guilty and of outlaws; destroyer of robbers and of evil-doers; general battle-victorious maintainer of the righteous law. To whom God gave good honour on earth and the heavenly kingdom beyond. He died in the habit of a [Cistercian] monk, after bringing victory from the world and from the demon.—Mathgamain, son of Ceithernach Ua Ceirin, king of Ciaraidhe of Loch-na-nairne, died.—The bishop of Conmaicni [Ardagh], namely, the Foreign bishop,<sup>2</sup> died.—Domnall Ua Cellaigh, tanist of Ui-Maine, died.—Mael-Sechlainn, son of Tadhg Ua Cellaigh, died.<sup>3</sup>

Given in substance in the F. M. at 1223.

<sup>4</sup> Finn Ua Carmacan.—Given in the Annals of Loch Ce at 1223, where he is said to have been steward of the king of Connacht and to have possessed much land. The next item is also given in the same Annals at 1223.

<sup>5</sup> Mael-Isu.—Prior of Inishmaine, according to the F. M. (1223). See O'Donovan's note, iii. 204.

 1225. Duarcán Ua Eaghra, king of Luighni, died.— Gilla-in-Coimdeg Mac Gilla-carraigh, eminent priest and parson of Tech-Baithin, rested in Christ.—Dionysius Ua Mael-Ciarain, herenagh of Ard-Carna, rested in Christ.—
 A great hosting was made by Aedh Ua Neill into Con-nacht, by [invitation of] the sons of Ruaidhri Ua Conchobair and by invitation of all Sil-Muiredhaigh, save Mac Diarmata alone, namely, Cormac, son of Tomaltach, so that he went through the length of Connacht eastwards to the woods of Ath-luain, so that he was a night at the Heights of Uana. And they pillaged Loch-nen and he brought the treasures of Ua Conchobair with him therefrom. He came after that to Carn-fraich and Tairrdhelbach, son of Ruaidhri, was crowned there. And he went on a quick march to his house, on hearing that a large force of Foreigners and of Momonians [was making] towards him, under Donnchadh Cairbrech Ua Briain and under Geoffrey Mares [De Marisco], [led] by Aedh Ua Conchobair and by Mac Diarmata. And when they [the Foreigners, etc.,] did not catch Ua Neill, they followed the sons of Ruaidhri, until they drove them to the protection of Ua Neill again.
 The Momonians on that occasion killed Echmarcach Mac Branain, chief of Corco-Achlann, at Cell-Cellaigh. On the expulsion of the sons of Ruaidhri from out Connacht, Aedh, son of Cathal Red-Hand<sup>1</sup> takes the kingship after them.—Tadhg Ua Eaghra died.—Etain, daughter of a dot placed under each of the letters, A. <sup>f</sup>-f om., B, C, D.

<sup>3</sup> Crossed as a Crusader.—Literally, signed; the native equivalent of cruce-signatus. “Crucified,” C; over which another hand wrote
abdicavit! Excommunicatus fuit, D; in which the entry is given under 1225.

As O'More resigned in 1229 and died in 1231, his object apparently was not to go in person to the Holy Land, but to gain the indulgence by contributing to the Crusade. In reference to the request of the king of Scotland regarding: Nonnulli milites et alii de regno suo propter paupertatem, alii ob senectutem, quidam vero propter debilitatem, quamplures

Dionysius Ua Mordha was crossed as a Crusader<sup>3</sup> from [1227] [being] bishop of Oil-finn.—Cumara Ua Domnallain was killed in captivity by Ruaidhri Mac Duinnsleibhe, in revenge of his father, he [Cumara] being crossed [as a Crusader].

Kalends of Jan. on 7th feria, 21st of the moon, A.D. [1228 Bis. 1228. Aedh, son of Cathal Red-Hand Ua Conchobair, was killed by the Foreigners in treachery, after his being put away by the Connachtmen from themselves.—The Justiciate of Ireland was assumed by the son of William de Burgh (namely, Richard<sup>1</sup>).—Aedh, son of Ruaidhri, [and his brothers] took the kingship of Connacht and the churches and territories of Connacht were pillaged by them and moreover its clergy and folk of learning were expelled into foreign countries, after being exposed to cold and to hunger.—Muircertach, son of Flaithbertach Ua Flannagain, was killed by the sons of Ua Gadhra.—Ferghal, son of Sitriuc Ua Ruairc, was killed by the sons of Niall, son of Congalach Ua Ruairc.—Niall, son of Congalach assumpto crucis signaculo, de transeundo in eiusdem Terre subsidium emiserint, a Brief of Gregory IX., dated the Lateran, March 31 (1238), empowers Cardinal Otho, the Papal Legate, to absolve such from the vow of the Cross: recepta prius ab eis sufficienti et idonea cautione (security), quod omnes expensas, quas facturi essent in eundo, morando et redeundo, in manibus tuis assignent: alias laborem itineris pietatis operibus compensando, illam indulgentiam habituri, qu[a]e transeuntibus in ipsius Terre subsidium in Generali Concilio est concessa (Theiner, Vet. Mon., p. 38).

Amongst the charges brought against the bishop of Ardagh, which Innocent IV. (Lyons, Feb. 13, 1245) appointed judges to investigate, was: pecuniam, quam cruce signati decedentes relinquunt in subsidium Terre Sancte, in usus proprios et illicitos . . . convertit.

1228. Richard.—On Feb. 15 of this year, Henry III. notified to the citizens of Dublin, Limerick, Drogheda, Waterford, Cork and to "Duncan Carbry" (Donnchad Cairbrech O'Brien) that Richard de Burgh was appointed justiciary of Ireland. (D[ocuments]. [relating to] I[r]land], I. 1573.)
